AMERICA TOO SUPERFICIAL YET TO BE A GREAT NATION, SAYS NOTED BELGIAN VISITOR

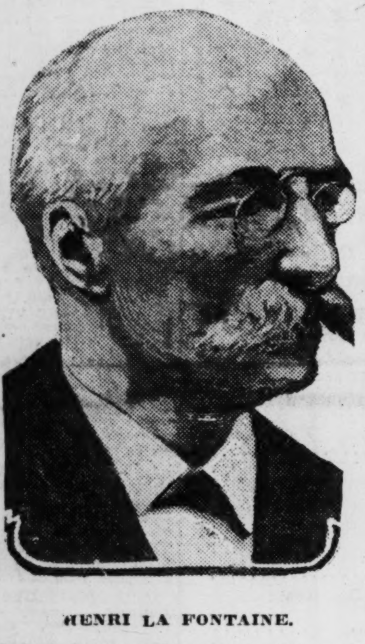
Senator La Fontaine, Winner of Nobel Peace Prize in 1913, Declares That, in the Struggle for Material Greatness, We Are Forgetting How to Live to Achieve Real Happiness Which Is the Aim of Life.

By HENRI LA FONTAINE.

(Famous Belgian jurist, who won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1913 by his advocacy of international arbitration, and who has come to the United States to deliver a series of lectures on the same topic. He has been living in exile from his native land since the German invasion. He is a member of the Belgian Senate.)

As a citizen of the world, as a student of European affairs and as a Belgian—exiled from his native land—my heart is filled with a very great love for the American people. A citizen of the world cannot help seeing in the United States a reduced edition of what the world commonwealth may be in some far distant future; the student of European affairs is struck by the fact that all the elements of Europe are gathered here in a common adherence to the ideals of democracy instead of being separated by various allegiances.

America is very much what Europe would be if there were no frontiers in Europe, if our class distinctions and prejudices were forgotten. But as a Belgian I feel for the people of the United States a love that is more than brotherly. In the hour of our misfortune, when our peaceful and well-ordered country was wasted by a cruel abuse of military power, hundreds of thousands of Americans sprang to our assistance and proved by their acts what they felt for Belgium. The way you are feeding and clothing the people of our devastated land will never be forgotten. America which owed us nothing, extended her help in that splendid spirit of brotherly human solidarity. So when I speak of Americans, I am inclined to magnify your good qualities and to gloss over your shortcomings.



HENRI LA FONTAINE.

If I had come to this country 30 years ago, there is no doubt in my mind that I should now be an American citizen. However, more important duties await me in my own country which, when the war is over, will claim whatever is left to me of energy and life. But next to my own country I love the United States, I love it for its undying faith in democracy, I love it for its wonderful equality of opportunity, I love it for its very real achievements. And just because I love it so—and because those in Europe who, like myself, love democracy, have built upon it their most ambitious hopes—I would have the United States more perfect, higher and above all broad-minded and with a more practical application of its belief in humanity.

America's Debt to Europe.

The average American likes to believe that his country is self-created and owes nothing to anybody. As a matter of fact it owes nearly everything, except certain phases of its marvelous material development, to Europe. We men of Europe do not understand the United States until we come here. When we do, we are like the hen which had sat upon an egg and is somewhat ruffled when she finds that she has hatched a duckling, and that it can swim while she cannot.

There can be no question that you lead the world in material development, but I am afraid that it is sometimes at the expense of higher and better things. Your material development itself bears the imprint of extreme youth, for as a nation you are very young. Take your system of intercommunication, without which your development would have been impossible, for the telephone and telegraph companies have annihilated space and are the nervous system of your country, just as the network of great railroads and their endless trolley feeders are the arterial system.

Now the proof that your present stage of development is merely transitory is that in many places you are still in the process of birth, you are very near to the pioneer stage. Do not be misled by the gigantic terminals of your great cities or by the steel cars which carry you swiftly under rivers and over road beds with which nothing in Europe can compare. Look rather at the single track railroads with their swaying wooden cars running over wooden trestles.

The United States will not really be grown up till it has four or five times as many inhabitants as at present. When I was in California I was struck by the fact that out of the two and a half million inhabitants a million and a half are crowded into five or six cities, and the other million is scattered over the State. And California is as big as France which with its 37,000,000 inhabitants is really very thinly populated in comparison with Belgium. It would be difficult to overestimate the influence on American life of the extraordinary concentration of your population in large cities and of the almost unbelievable scantiness of inhabitants in the vast spaces away from your main railroad lines and their terminals. The difference between the city American and the country American is very striking and must retard the formation of a national character.

There is something lacking in the lives of the millions who live in your cities, something without which character and especially national character cannot be formed. What is lacking is the opportunity for intellectual preoccupation. The average American knows his own business and knows it thoroughly, but very often he knows almost nothing outside of his own business.

The intensity of the city life in America to preclude intellectual recreation because I cannot conceive that attendance at a baseball game is a mental stimulus or inspires to higher thoughts. It is the intellectual and artistic development of America that is most behind, and the way in which people live in your big cities, and the way your big cities are built are largely responsible for it.

Our City Life a Menace.

The standard of living created by your city development is a very high one from a certain point of view. You have labor-saving devices and electrical appliances galore. Tiny little flats are cut up into the smallest of rooms, rooms so small that the nearness of the walls oppresses the mind just as the lack of space cramps the body.

However up-to-date your way of living may be it seems to me to be a menace of which sufficient account is not taken. It is worth while to take trouble to live well and a soup made out of an onion and a potato with a little butter is better than anything you can buy from a delicatessen store. It is more nourishing and far cheaper, There is no economy in the way people live in your big cities, for, after all, the cost of living is not high. IT IS THE

Missouri Editors Overwhelmingly in Favor of Adequate Preparedness for National Defense

In Response to Inquiry by the Post-Dispatch, They Declare the House Erred in Rejecting the Senate Army Bill and That People Are in no Mood to Permit the Nation to Remain in Peril so That Congressmen Can Play "Peanut Politics."

The Post-Dispatch's Inquiry on Preparedness Which Was Addressed to 150 Missouri Editors

The Post-Dispatch, believing that the impression throughout the country that the Middle West, including Missouri, is lukewarm towards preparedness is false, sent the following letter to the editors of approximately 150 leading newspapers in Missouri:

> The impression prevails throughout the country that the Middle West is apathetic, if not actually opposed to any substantial measure of MILITARY and NAVAL PREPAREDNESS. Missouri being perhaps the most typical and characteristic middle western State, the Post-Dispatch would like to receive for publication your views on the subject. Yesterday, the House of Representatives declined to agree to the Senate amendment to the army bill providing for a standing army of 250,000 men and a volunteer army of 261,000, pledged to 30 days intensive training yearly. The first proposal was rejected by a vote of 241 to 142, and the second by a vote of 251 to 109.
> Will you be good enough to reply by wire at our expense, to the question: "Do you believe the House of Representatives should have voted for or against these preparedness measures?"
> And anything else you may care to say which will tend to throw light on the public opinion of this State as to preparedness will be appreciated.

At the time of going to press replies have been received from approximately 50 of the editors thus addressed. Of this number only six have declared themselves unconditionally opposed to any increase in the army and navy and all the others expressed themselves in favor of immediate adequate preparedness.

Both the inquiry and the answers were, of course, written prior to the announcement of yesterday that the House and Senate conferees had agreed upon a bill raising the standing army to 206,000. This bill will be presented to both houses for consideration this week.

The replies of Missouri newspaper editors to the Post-Dispatch's query, "Do you believe the House of Representatives should have voted against these preparedness measures (the Senate's bill increasing the army to 250,000 men)?" are given herewith:

Let Duty, Not Preference Prevail

Paul W. Brown, St. Louis Republic: I believe the Congress should at once pass a bill increasing the regular army to at least 200,000 men, and should then proceed to work out with care a system of universal service, after the Swiss model. The Middle West is ready for definite action to end our period of defenselessness. It is absurd to talk of the unwillingness of our citizens to serve their country by learning to be soldiers. Our history proves that Americans will do anything which the need of the nation requires. We ought to have more talk about duties and less about preferences; the latter is a waste of time.

House Should Have Concurred.

Caspar S. Yost, St. Louis Globe-Democrat: The accompanying editorial from the Globe-Democrat of May 3 expresses my sentiments in regard to the action of the House of Representatives on the army bill. The House should have come to an agreement with the Senate:

"It is gratifying that the Senate members of the conference on the army bill are standing out for the features which the House either eliminated or modified beyond recognition (says the editorial to which Mr. Yost refers)." The action of the House was disappointing. Party lines were forgotten and geography did not seem to affect the divisions. Personal eccentricities of the members were given free rein. Some of the opponents of a maximum of 250,000 for the standing army, if deemed necessary by the President, argued that such a large force could not be raised. But they were unwilling to make the authorization. Passage of the act would not fill the army. Nor will cutting down the maximum get any more soldiers. The plea that if a large maximum were authorized advocates of compulsory service would appeal to a future Congress was absurd. This Congress should presume that the next will be as sensible as it is. All admitted that the Senate provisions would increase the number of officers. If there is one thing that experience has taught us in our previous wars it is the necessity for enough trained officers to put untrained or partly trained soldiers into fighting trim. It is criminal folly to send untrained men into battle under incompetent political officers.

"The House insists on the adequacy of its federalized militia scheme, which is of doubtful constitutionality and uncertain military value. It cheerfully sets its lay opinion up against the views of men who have made military defense a life study. It would heed none of the lessons of experience. In the confusion of expressions were heard the voices of men clamorous for "a real army" and men opposed to any increase. But these extremes voted together against the Senate defense program. The situation along the border may strengthen the position of the Senate. It would be unfortunate if the matter should end in a deadlock, but the Senate should insist on its principal amendments as long as there is any reasonable prospect of forcing concessions from the House."

"Our Navy Should Be Increased."

G. A. Buder, St. Louis Times: The St. Louis Times believes in preparedness for any eventuality; but it does not believe in a world-wide proclamation of alleged weaknesses; of a country-wide agitation that displaces the normal process of our Government, which has stood greater tests than are now possible under existing conditions abroad. This country has resources, which, in themselves, are an offset to the complete readiness of many of the nations, and because of this fact should not be subject to the usual comparisons. It should, however, have a greater navy than it has at present. It should have a larger and more efficient army. This large army and navy should be for defense and not for aggression. And but for the meddlesome agitation of the hour and the far-flung announcement to the world that we consider ourselves ridiculous, our Congress before now would have taken the needed steps for a betterment of the national defense. The St. Louis Times believes that "the Government at Washington still live" and that it should be allowed, under our time-tested representative system, to work out the present problem without the assistance of the many cooks that always spoil the broth—the ammunition makers and others who have special and private interests to promote.

House Should Have Accepted Senate Bill

Edward S. Lewis, St. Louis Star: I think the House of Representatives should have voted for the preparedness measures.

Let Us Prepare Systematically.

The Daily Post, Jefferson City: Congress should have passed the bill providing for a regular army of 250,000 men. Events on the border show that this country is woefully lacking in soldiers. The bill providing for a volunteer army of 260,000 men who were to have 30 days' intensive training each year met the fate it deserved. Soldiers are not made in 30 days of training a year. Preparedness in itself, in view of the conditions of the times is highly essential. However, this country should not rush to imitate Germany. Germany built up its army (the army that was condemned by the world at the outbreak of the war as barbarous) by years of painstaking preparedness in every department of the nation. Not only did it train its men to become soldiers, but it trained its chemists, scientists and inventors to supply the machines to carry on successful warfare; it trained even its women and children so that they would become useful in case the long-expected blow fell. We cannot imitate Germany's preparedness, since conditions are not similar. This country should build up a reasonably large army and in building it should not disregard every other essential. Rushed preparedness without system or method only means a waste of billions, with no results.

We've Fewer Soldiers Than Police.

James P. Whiteside, Tribune, Cape Girardeau: The European war, in my judgment, has proved that universal peace is but an iridescent dream. It is natural to hope that the friends of the United States may never be its enemies, but a nation cannot endure alone on hope and over-confidence in the good intentions of others. The United States is big enough, strong enough, to protect itself and it behooves Congress to see to it that what is needed most should be granted with the minimum delay. For a nation with 100,000,000 people, a standing army of 250,000 and 261,000 volunteers as provided in the Senate amendment is inadequate, but it is so much larger than our jitneyfied army of today that it seems sufficient. Yet this total is less than the number of men now engaged in police duty in the cities and towns in the United States, and if it is necessary to employ a force to protect us from ourselves, it does not seem unreasonable to expect some guarantee of safety from foreign foes. The members of the lower branch of Congress will prove unfaithful to their trust if they defeat the Senate amendment to the army bill.

The Minimum of Preparedness.

Editor of the Kansas City Star: We regard the Chamberlain bill as the minimum of preparedness which the nation ought to be asked to accept.

Be Ready for Any Contingency.

J. F. Hull, Tribune, Maryville: I believe the best way to preserve the peace of this country and to establish for this country a wholesome respect with the nations of the world is to maintain a military preparedness sufficient for any contingency. Back of this, however, must be a Government at Washington in harmony with an aggressive Americanism.

Professional Soldiers Bring War.

F. S. Mickey, World, Aurora: First proposal should be rejected. Two hundred and fifty thousand are not enough for war footing; altogether too much for peace footing. Every professional army or navy man becomes an advocate of war, because his own chance for fame and fortune demands it. Had Germany not been prepared the present world war would not have been precipitated. A big army and navy would certainly involve the United States. The plan to so organize state troops as to make them available by general Government is good.

Cooper County for Preparedness.

Houston Harte, Republican, Boonville: The House should have voted for the Senate bill. I hope Missouri's Congressmen voted for it regardless of politics. It is unfortunate that our greatest foreign crisis of recent years has come on the eve of a national election. Cooper County would vote for this measure if it were possible for the proposition to be submitted to the people here.

More Red-Blooded Americanism Wanted.

Asa W. Butler, Capitol, Albany: Congress should either have passed the Senate bill or else a measure of preparedness much stronger and more effective. The defeat of the bill by the lower house again emphasizes the imperative need of more red-blooded Americanism in Washington. The voters of the country ought to draw a black mark through the names of every miserable rabbit and every hyphen in Congress who voted against these preparedness measures and then see to it that not one of them gets back to the next Congress. They are unfit to represent any Americans and they ought to be either cutting brush at the bend in the creek or else digging sewers in the cities which they are now misrepresenting.

Regret Senate Measure Was Beaten.

W. H. Crouch, Republican, Bethany: We believe the military and naval strength of the nation should be increased as the army bill provided. We regret that the measure was defeated.

Howard County Demands Action.

Walter Ridgeway, Advertiser, Fayette: Howard County people believe in reasonable preparedness. Congress should take steps to protect the country.

Sentiment Strong for Preparedness.

Harry Myers, Sentinel, Brookfield: The sentiment in Linn County is strong for preparedness and would indicate an affirmative vote on the Senate amendment as it is generally understood.

Eldon Frowns on Preparedness.

E. H. Sheppard, Enterprise, Eldon: This community is strongly against military and naval preparedness. Majority would sanction action of House of Representatives.

"Nation's Dignity Is at Stake."

Democrat, Elsberry: We are heartily in favor of ample preparedness and feel that Congress acted unwisely in defeating the preparedness measures. The strained relations existing between the United States and Mexico require a larger army. The honor and dignity of our nation are at stake and we believe both army and navy should be made more efficient.

House Should Have Concurred.

C. W. Green, Argus, Brookfield: Believe House should have voted for the preparedness measure.

House Missed Its Opportunity.

E. D. Whiteside, Advertiser, Aurora: As usual, the truth lies between the extremes: A standing army of 150,000, with a volunteer force of 200,000, is near right. If the standing army can be given constructive work for the country, in time of peace, and this can be done economically, the objection to the larger force is largely removed. The volunteer army would follow peaceful pursuits save for the drill period, or when called into service, and might well be much larger than the regulars. When a large standing army is idle, it is a menace to the Government, and any idleness is an evil.

Put the soldiery to work part time at real constructive work, such as road building, under direction of officers trained in that work. Enlist them with understanding; pay them extra for time so employed. The moral condition of the army will be benefited when idleness is removed and the public that pays will be benefited in the real work done.

House Should Have Supported Senate.

E. W. Ragland, Courier, Clarence: Favor reasonable military and naval preparedness; therefore the House of Representatives should have voted for the Senate amendment to the army bill providing for a standing army of 250,000 men and a volunteer army of 261,000, pledged to 30 days' intensive training yearly.

Preparedness Guarantee of Peace.

D. L. Burnside, Republican, Poplar Bluff: I believe the House of Representatives should have

"Martyr Pearse's Call for the Dublin Revolt That Cost Him His Life

"Will We Wait to Fight or Fight Now to Win?" Ill-Fated "President" of Irish Republic Asked Just Before Outbreak That Ended With His Execution.

The Post-Dispatch presents herewith the article by Patrick H. Pearse, which sounded the call for the Dublin rebellion and the proclamation of the "Republic of Ireland," of which he became "Provisional President." Pearse was the first of the rebels to be tried by courtmartial and shot. He was headmaster at St. Enda's College and was both a scholar and a poet. He was 36 years old.

PATRICK H. PEARSE.

few days before the outbreak. For publishing it, four Irish newspapers, The Gael, Spark, Honesty and The Gaelic Athlete, were suppressed by the British Government.

The suppression of these papers was attended by some bloodshed, which was really the start of the revolution. Other Irish papers suppressed since the European war started are Sinn Fein, Irish Freedom, Ireland, Scissors and Paste and Irish Worker.

The article by the late "provisional President" of the short-lived Irish republic follows:

Urges Force Against England

"Since the outbreak of the European war, I have often asked myself, 'Are we at war with England?' and have satisfied myself by replying in the affirmative. On deeper reflection I must say, our war with that country is only a war of words, one of lip and feeling.

"Where are the signs of war, in the purely military sense? There are none, but is it so with the enemy? Oh, no; with her it is war, and real war towards us. Our casualty list is large between captured, imprisoned and deported. By captured I mean those whom she had deluded and seduced into her ranks.

"Where are the successes on our side to compare with such losses? Paltry, withal the enemy in our midst has not lost a single man.

"We all declare, and justly so, that until Ireland is restored to her place among the nations of the earth, come what may, we are at war with England. It is very patriotic, no doubt, and truly national, but what is the value of such declaration if it be not supported by deeds.

For Strong Offensive

"I BELIEVE that the time has come for a strong and determined offensive against all the entrenchments of the enemy in this country. The effects of such an offensive will be far-reaching. It will show our enemies that we are not conquered, that we are still out for the liberty of one small nationality, Ireland. It will cause an upheaval at home, the news of which will quickly reach our captured brethren abroad. If they have a trace of patriotism in their veins, and many of them have, they will not help the enemy that is shooting down their kith and kin at home.

"In short, an offensive at this moment may be the deciding factor in this war. The longer we delay, the better it is for our enemies. They want no disturbance in Ireland, and will we help in their desire?

"Defeat in Ireland means more for the enemy than any defeat she may sustain in Flanders or elsewhere. We are here at her very heart, and injuries to the heart are of more consequence than injuries to any other part of the body.

"Strike Decisive Blow"

"Will we strike the decisive blow, or are we afraid to do so lest the enemy reply with another? The only consequence to us is that some of us may be launched into eternity quicker and sooner than he would like. But who are we, that we should hesitate to die for Ireland.

"Are not the claims of Ireland greater on us than any personal one? Do we not boast of our loyalty and love for the Dear Dark Head? Is it fear that deters us from such an enterprise? Away with such fears. Cowards die many times, the brave only die once.

"It is admitted that nothing but a revolution can now save the historic Irish nation from becoming a mere appanage, a Crown colony, of the British empire. We do not desire such a consummation of the Island of Saints and Scholars, the land of the O'Neills and the O'Donnells, the land for which the countless have suffered and died.

Dawning of the Day

"We call ourselves revolutionists; we glory in the name; we speak with pride of the dawn of the day. Was there ever such revolutionists? We want the revolution to start us, and not us to start it. If we really want to free Ireland, now is the time for action. Are we afraid to start up like men, and bear the consequences, or is all our talk mere frothing only to delude our enemies as well as our followers.

"If we want the revolution, we must make it, and we must realize that such cannot be accomplished without bloodshed. We are at war, and war justifies the removal of our enemies in the most expeditious manner. For that purpose we must know who our enemies are, and under no consideration must we allow them to interfere with the onward march of the Irish nation. Either we or they must fall in the fight.

"Some will cry out in horror at such a proposal. On what do they base their horror? Is it blood-spilling? Look at the war in Flanders! What blood is being spilled there daily! Do these deaths awake in such people a shudder of horror? No; war to them is justifiable in all countries except in Ireland. We are at war with England, and it is necessary we must fight it to the bitter end.

Ireland's Struggle Legitimate

"Look at the war in Flanders again. What are [illegible]tives underlying [illegible] struggle? Are these motives just [illegible] noble? Is Ireland's struggles with England more legitimate and more sacred? Yes, it is.

"Our sufferings extend over centuries; no form of torture and persecution but England has tried on us. She is out for our conquest, and will stop at nothing to effect it. There is no hope for the future welfare of an independent Irish nation, except in separation.

"God, in His wise providence, has separated us by the seas, but crafty, unscrupulous enemies bind us to that execrable Government.

"If we remove these enemies, will separation follow? I say and believe, yes. These enemies are the connecting links with Dublin Castle. They are the links that bind, and they shall remain while England holds this country. If we want to break the connection with England, we must remove these links, and we must render government by England impossible in this country.

"Is it an impossible task? Decidedly not. At the moment the minions of the Government in Ireland stand trembling, afraid to disturb the people. They know their power is weak, and they are fearful lest any action of theirs may lose them their gov-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Plea for Ireland.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Apropos of your editorial, "The Irish Executions," and the contrast of judgment meted out to the leaders of the South Africa and Irish rebellions it is history repeating itself as to English obstinacy and inconsistency.

Froude, the eminent English historian, referring to the Revolutionary War, states: "The fortunes of Ireland were at this moment connected intimately with the future of America. The swift American privateers made the harbors of Ireland their favorite recruiting places. The American flag was seen floating in insolence on the Irish coast from Londonderry to Cork harbor."

Lest we forget, it was out of Carrickfergus harbor, John Paul Jones sailed in 1778, when he sunk the English man-of-war Ranger and captured as many English ships in as many days, and again in 1779 sailing out of Ballin-Kelly Bay, captured two English frigates within sight of the people on the cliffs and within sound of their cheering.

A century ago Burke said: "Justice is only to be had from England at the point of the sword," and Grattan stated that "control over local affairs is the very essence of liberty" and England practices and preaches this doctrine to all nations with the exception of Ireland and India.

Ireland has furnished England her most eminent statesmen and greatest heroes and ingratitude has been her reward from her conquering lord and master for eight centuries.

Ireland, the Emerald Queen with flag so green, with bowed head and beauteous tears, bears the brunt of British prejudice with will indomitable and heart of steel suffering the misfortune of a thousand Belgiums for centuries, her language and learning suppressed, her religion persecuted, laws prostituted, and leaders executed; but God still reigns in heaven, and Ireland lives and prays, a nation martyr to the cause of sweet liberty.

Wanton, Wilful Murder.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

This for the benefit of those against capital punishment:

The other day a man, his wife and daughter were waiting for a street car. Nearby on a sidewalk a gang of youthful toughs were using profane and obscene language. When the man asked them to cease, one of the youths drew a pistol and shot the man dead.

An inquest was held over the body of the dead man, Thursday.

This young tough deserves hanging, and his gangsters five years apiece in the penitentiary. It will be interesting to watch this case peter out into nothing, as most murder cases in St. Louis nowadays do.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

Woodman, Spare That Tree!

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Passing over Ross avenue recently, a short avenue running from the Olive Stret road to the Fee Fee road, I noticed two mammoth white oak trees that had been cut down sometime during the past winter. Both of these oaks are in full view of the road, a monument to the reckless destruction of forest trees now going on in many parts of St. Louis County.

The inroads of new subdivisions coupled with the ruthless hand of the vandal will soon obliterate these beauty spots, leaving only a memory unless steps are taken at once to preserve them. The defeat of the Outer Reservation bill, known as the Sprague bill, or House Bill No. 502, at the last session of the Legislature, can mainly be attributed to the dread of a special tax to pay for reservations and boulevards leading thereto, on the part of the taxpayers of city and county.

The mill tax will be in the hands of the city ere long and supply the funds to pay for the reservations, and St. Louis County has nobly assumed the building of roads and highways, thus eliminating the necessity of levying a special tax. To my mind, no better use could be made of the mill tax than to spend it for reservations, and in doing so receive the blessings of the citizens, rich and poor alike.

The probability is that land values in the county will go soaring ere long, and in a few years will become prohibitive. Will the city rise to the occasion and secure these reservations before it is too late? The Business Men's League and every organization, irrespective of sect, creed or purpose in the city of St. Louis should begin the campaign at once for preserving nature's greatest recuperator, fresh air, under the shades of the massive oaks of the St. Louis County forests. Let the refrain be

Woodman, spare that tree!
Touch not a single bough.
In youth it sheltered me,
And I'll protect it now.

Creve Coeur, Mo. [illegible]

DEMAND FOR PREPAREDNESS.

The preparedness parade in New York was an impressive demonstration of public sentiment in favor of adequate military preparation for national defense. There were 151,000 men and women in line, representing every walk of life. The applications for places in the line, rejected on account of inability to place them and to handle a larger body, reached 60,000.

When men and women in such vast numbers turn out for laborious marching through city streets to express their opinion, it is impossible to question their sincerity and earnestness. Nor can it be doubted that the sentiment they express by action is held by hundreds of thousands more. It is a resounding call upon Congress to act.

Demonstration, however, is not so much needed in New York as in other cities farther west, where the sentiment for preparedness is thought by timid, time-serving Congressmen to be less pronounced for, or even opposed to thoroughgoing preparedness.

We believe that congressional politicians are wrong. We believe that the sentiment for adequate preparedness in the Middle West, while not so overwhelming in numbers or force as in the East, is strong and predominating. We believe a great majority of the people throughout the West want prompt and effective action on the part of Congress to put the country in condition to meet with rapid success any contingency that may arise. We believe especially that an overwhelming majority want Congress to provide ample forces and equipment to handle the Mexican situation in the most efficient manner.

The Post-Dispatch has proof that the sentiment in Missouri, which is a typical Midwestern State, is strongly in favor of preparedness. The replies published today from editors of Missouri newspapers give a fair indication of the sentiment of Missouri people. About five-sixths of the editors, who answer the Post-Dispatch's inquiries, favor preparedness.

The sentiment in St. Louis is stronger than in the interior of the State. A great popular demonstration in this city would have a tremendous effect on public sentiment and on Congress. It may be necessary for the men and women of St. Louis and other Western cities to express by popular demonstration their demand for adequate preparation. It would be well for the Mayor, as the local representative of the Municipal Security League, and the local officers of the National Security League to consider the wisdom and practicability of a St. Louis demonstration.

Why not have a National Preparedness Day, with demonstrations in all cities? This would arouse Congress to a sense of duty.

A BUREAU OF NATIONAL PARKS.

The bill creating a Bureau of National Parks has made progress to the stage of a favorable committee report in the House. Its passage even at an early date would be too late to effect any changes of benefit during the coming tourist season. But it would give ample opportunity to plan wisely for the season of 1917.

The bill should not be sidetracked during the press of business that will occupy Congress from this time to the date of adjournment.

MAZATLAN'S NEW CURRENCY.

Other countries have asset-secured currency, bond-secured currency, specie-secured currency and even currency based on general faith and credit. Mazatlan, Mexico, has a Carranza currency based on the citizen's title to life. It is expected to circulate, because any person refusing it is to be summarily executed.

And still maintenance of its face-value parity will probably not be easy. The plain people have some stubborn prejudices about legal tender. They have often braved fearful penalties in showing their old-fashioned preference for gold or its equivalent to a circulating medium redeemable in life, liberty, pursuit of happiness or other things.

It would simplify finance if Mazatlan's idea of substituting for gold the dearest of all assets, life, could have general adoption. But we may apprehend that it will be a long time before it is recognized as an idea worthy of introduction in our Federal Reserve system.

A GOVERNMENT TURNS FARMER.

France has entered upon a new economic phase—the Government has turned farmer.

In his report to the Chamber of Deputies M. Meline, Minister of Agriculture, announced the fact, and stated that the most urgent need of France now and immediately after the war was foodstuffs; not that there is actually a shortage in that commodity, or likely to be one; but for the economic reasons which make it imperative that France shall be self-supporting. He said:

> We have made history in all that goes to beautify, to embellish; our silk and lace fabrics hold the world's markets, our fashions are the recognized arbiter of apparel, our china and porcelain command the admiration of everybody, our wines are the cynosure of the epicure, our art decorates palaces and mansions. But we have neglected to produce enough plain food. We have relied upon the money we earn from our specialties to buy the "daily bread." Now it behooves us to produce that daily sustenance.

He then described the vast fields of Toulouse, Langedoc, Perigord, around the Chauteaux region; and called attention to the fact that they basked idle under a favoring sun. They must be made to yield.

> And now that over a million and a half of our farmers that could wrest the needful from the earth, are fighting for their country, who will coax the needed food from the willing earth? We are deprived of hands to accomplish that end. Under these circumstances the Government have devised a plan by which one pair of arms shall do the work of the ordinary hundred. Four thousand motor plows and sowing drills have burrowed into our fertile fields this spring, and give us promise of a rich harvest in summer and autumn; and while we hold and repel our aggressors at an enormous outlay daily, the laughing fields will tender us glad-handed the food to sustain our strength, as well as save our money.

M. Henri Saignier has been the moving spirit in the work, and has carried it to a satisfactory conclusion. Further machinery for harvesting has already arrived, and is immediately available. Over 40,000 acres of virgin land, great lawns and beautiful grass prairies have been turned to agriculture, and while the landscape might have suffered in "its emerald ensemble, the variegated verdure of culture will readily compensate for the loss. France henceforth will be fruitful as well as artistic."

THE U. R.'S DECISION.

We presume the action of the United Railways in attempting to renew litigation over the mill tax, the legality of which has been finally affirmed by the highest Federal and State tribunals, gives notice to the city that it intends to depend upon litigation for the settlement of the entire question of taxation relating to its own properties.

The United Railways Co. has tried and suggested compromises which were unsatisfactory to the city before the mill tax suit was adjudicated. Instead of accepting the court's decision and promptly paying its debt to the city, the company has decided to delay the payment as long as possible and worry the city by litigious proceedings.

In view of this vexatious course and the expressed purpose of the company to fight the mill tax which has accrued since the original suit was filed, we assume the company expects to stand or fall on the persistence and ingenuity of its legal counsel.

Of course, with such a record of litigation, the company can never expect to take up with the municipal authorities the question of the justness of the mill tax as a matter of equitable municipal dealing with a public utility corporation. A company which fights to the last legal ditch on its obligations to the city must abide by the conclusion.

"LET BUSINESS GO TO THE WALL."

Is it Big Business that is advertising Roosevelt as the only salvation of this country?

Big Business has a short memory. It has been but a few years since Roosevelt cried that if business stood in the way of his righteous reforms, then "let business go to the wall" That was in Keokuk in the fall of 1907, and within a few weeks afterwards Big Business and little business and all kinds of business did go to the wall. And it took business, big and little, some five or six years to recover from the Roosevelt panic.

What business can see in him as an investment passes our comprehension—unless it be that he is the hope of war from the jingo and ammunition makers' standpoint. As a peace investment he is a wildcat venture.

FREE LAW FOR THE POOR.

Law in theory is for the protection of the weak. The Kansas plan to create the office of "public attorney" in each county of the State will be a step towards actualizing the theory. The function of the new officer will be to hear and consider all questions of law which persons without funds may submit to him, and to institute and prosecute civil suits when necessary, as well as protect poor persons in criminal cases. Kansas, like most other States, has a statute providing for the appointment of an attorney to defend felony cases where the defendant is unable to employ counsel; and Kansas, like other jurisdictions, has provisions for civil suits "in forma pauperis." But these provisions are inadequate to safeguard the rights and interests of the poor. Supplemented by the usefulness of a "public attorney" they may be.

Kansas is leading the world in what may be called humanizing the system of justice. Its "Poor Debtors Court" has proved a great relief, and its "public attorneys" cannot fail to be. Why are other States slow in following the Kansas examples? Practical sociological effort of this character cannot fail of immediate and vast benefit to the Commonwealth which adopts it. This matter is one for Missouri legislators to "stick a pin in" for reference at the next session.

"THE DERNED REPUBLICANS."

Our esteemed John Hall of the Salem (Ark.) Sun is still displaying that devotion to the Republican party which a beaten wife yields to her drunken, wife-beating husband, but we remark a weakening faith and a new querulousness mingled with his cries of suffering. He calls them "derned Republicans" in his latest response to the rod, and seems to doubt whether they possess good sense after all. He says he is cramped with perplexity when he looks at the political situation, and he has quit running Senator Weeks for President. As for local affairs, he thus describes the Arkansas Republican convention:

> The pie-eaters prevailed, and the ex-postmaster of Hot Springs added zest to the occasion by braying like a father of mules. Kinney, the standard-bearer of two years ago, was slaughtered, and all but his brains and backbone were eaten by the cannibals of Pulaski County. Wallace Townsend, an attorney at Little Rock, was nominated for Governor, and Durand Whipple, a real lawyer of the capital city, was nominated for the Supreme Court. Lewis Moore, ex-chairman of the first insurgent convention ever wetnursed in Arkansas, is now the real elephantine State chairman, with a peanut hull in his proboscis.

And, despairing of any improvement with such a layout, John intimates that he would almost as soon be a "Democratic politician in jail with a nigger" as to be "a Republican attending committee work with a taxpaying coon"—in fact, he perceives an advantage in the condition of the former, because the taxpayers are footing his board bill. Well, that's what the "derned Republicans" deserve from John for trying to wish their gubernatorial nomination on him and otherwise maltreating and wife-beating him. It is too much to ask of a beaten wife that she makes a pleasant noise.

A CHILD'S VIEW.

THERE'S a little maid that lives next door,
Her eyes are blue, her hair is gold,
Her face is always wreathed in smiles,
A tiny cherub—three years old.

And some times when she tires of play
She watches from my window high,
And listens while I tell her tales
About the crowd that passes by.

An old, old woman passed one day,
Her eyes were dim, her step was slow.
I think I must have sighed to see
Life's blighting winter make her so.

The little maid beside my knee
Said, "Aunty, is the lady cold
Because she seems to tremble so?"
And I said, "No, she is but old."

And then her lips began to smile,
And light danced in the eyes of blue.
She clasped her little hands and cried,
"I'm glad I am not old but NEW!"

WHEN SHE COMES BACK.

(With apoolgies to the Shade of gentle, manly "Bob" Burdette.)

When SHE comes back—
AH, yes, I know; the red-eyed furies will arise,
Laugh, whirl and sneer before my eyes;
The world will seem all dark and brown—
And gray and green and red and blue—
As seen when bludgeon whacks the crown—
(With the brackish taste of a Hadean brew)—
Alas! Alack! Oh, unhappy day,
I know there will be heltopay—
When SHE comes back!

When SHE comes back—
"What have YOU been doing since I went forth?"
"And" (sneer) "did you get your money's worth?
Aha! A hairpin—and right here in MY room—
That's nice!—you bold, ungrateful thing!"
(She has lost dozens there, but it is my doom.)
"I'd like to catch the hussy—why I'd just fling
Her headlong to the street—now look 'ere, say—
Who was SHE?"—Yes, there will be heltopay—
When SHE comes back!

When SHE comes back—
"Beer bottles! Cigar butts!—Horrors, a cuspidor!
And ashes strewn all over the floor—
My rugs! My curtains!—Oh, John! Oh, John!—
Oh! Ain't I glad that I've got back,
And, I just wish that I never had-a-gone!
How could you? Yes, how could you, Jack!
Make MY home a dirty den—how could you? Say?"
Yea, Bo—there surely will be heltopay—
When SHE arrives!

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

HEALTH HINTS.

SCHANG.—Treatment for nervous persons depends upon the person; capable physician should study patient. Take your mind off yourself; think of something else. Entirely unprejudiced is the editor of the Algemeine Fleischer-Zeitung, a journal for butchers. He advises butchers who suffer from headaches, nervousness or stomach troubles to give up meat and adopt a vegetarian diet. This advice has been given a nervous person: Discontinue the use of tea and coffee; begin taking from 4 to 8 fresh eggs daily, lightly beaten into a quart of milk. Take half in the morning and the rest at night; or, better still, divide into three doses and take shortly after each meal, preparing each dose fresh when it is to be taken. Best rest is sleeping in pure air. Anatole France, who fled from the noise of Paris, has set forth his notion of quiet enjoyment. "Of all tasks open to mankind, the task of knocking nails in a wall is probably the most conducive to tranquil enjoyment." There have been many attempts at soporific industry—the little mechanical activity which takes the brain from the usual occupation. Knitting is, perhaps, the best. Arctic explorers have averred that knitting gets one through an Arctic night very well. British athletes, in the nervous hours before the great university boat race, are frequently set to knitting in order to calm their nerves. One writer says: I have little faith in drugs as a cure for nervousness. Plenty of gentle exercise in the fresh air, nourishing food, obedience to the natural law which ordains sleep as a duty, hot baths before bedtime and a resolute determination to take life as God gives it to us—a day at a time—are worth all the medicines ever compounded. And while speaking of diet, let the patient eat freely of celery and a decoction of the same at night after getting into bed. It has marvelous power as a nervine and is absolutely harmless. Massage is likewise a prime agent in soothing racked nerves. Gentle massage followed by an "alcohol rub" administered by a skillful masseur will woo sleep successfully when drugs fail. (A book store could get for you Courtney's "Conquest of the Nerves.")

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

READER.—A housekeeper writes: I have always used equal parts of sweet oil and turpentine for a furniture polish. Having an old oak dresser that was badly scratched, I experimented on it by putting in the polish a small amount of burnt umber from one of my tubes of oil paints, and found that it covered, permanently, all scratches. I use it now on all articles of furniture, and it keeps them looking like new. Apply a small quantity and rub until dry.

E. ST. LOUIS—For mayonnaise dressing this is said to be perfect: See that articles used are thoroughly chilled, eggs, oil, plate, and even fork. Carefully free yolks of two eggs from whites in a large soup plate, add half teaspoonful salt and stir with silver fork until eggs are well mixed; add the oil, drop by drop, being careful to stir in the same direction, adding a drop of vinegar when the emulsion looks oily. As the mixture becomes thick, the oil must be added faster, always stirring, never beating, and using only acid enough to keep the dressing from separating, using two eggs to one pint of oil. Season with salt, red pepper and lemon juice. When finished it should be thick and perfectly smooth.

JESSE.—Mar. 23 these figures were published: The total loss in merchant-marine tonnage by belligerent nations is figured at 3,774,219, of which Great Britain has lost 485 ships with a total tonnage of 1,506,415. France, Italy and Russia together have lost 167 ships, totaling 282,178 tons. The Germans have had 601 ships captured or sunk, with a tonnage of 1,276,500. Eighty Austrian craft, totaling 267,664, have been lost; 124 Turkish vessels, tonnage not estimated; also 736 neutral ships, with a tonnage of 441,472. The list of all British shipping in existence makes a large book, cost of which might not please you. Write U. S. Consulate, London, about it.

T. E. W.—W. L. E. writes: I have often seen in the query and answer columns about the fish. I see the question is not quite understood. A pail is brimful of water—running over. A fish is placed in the same. Will it weigh any more? No. The fish, say, weighs 4 pounds. It will displace the amount of water its body occupies. Therefore it will displace 4 pounds of water. Because the specific gravity of a fish is about the same as water; it will displace the same amount of water as it occupies. But if the pail is short, not full by 4 pounds, say, the pail will weigh 4 pounds more. Say question, pail full. Put in 4 pounds of lead. Will it weigh more? Certainly. Exactly the difference between the amount of the specific gravity and amount of water displaced.

H. P. F.—Elephants in India seldom breed in captivity, though they do so more frequently in Burma and Siam; the domesticated stock is replenished by fresh captures. Occasionally there are twin calves. The calves suckle with their mouths, not with their trunks. Unlike the African species, the Indian elephant charges with its trunk curled up and in silence. Elephant carries 1700 to 2200 pounds, and maintains a steady pace of about 4 miles per hour. When elephants are in the vicinity of tigers they beat their trunks on the ground. Some of the women of Siam intrust their children to the care of the elephant nurses, and it is said that the trust is never betrayed. The babies play about the huge feet of the elephants, who are very careful never to hurt their little charges.

J. A. C. K.—Mr. L. of Chicago was greatly annoyed by sparrows. Hundreds congregated in the shade trees about his home and at daybreak their chirping would awaken the whole household, including the baby. In the spring the birds would fly to the garden and eat all tender shoots that came through the ground, completely ruining vegetables. In desperation he bought a supply of Fourth of July fireworks and shot skyrockets into the trees in the late twilight. He repeated this three consecutive nights and the sparrows found a remote roosting place, remaining away a month or two; then in increasing numbers they gradually returned to their former haunts. When they caught a glimpse of Mr. L. they would fly about until he disappeared, then they would go back to the trees for the night. Then he purchased pieces of fireworks called flower pots and tacked one in a tree with a fuse attached of a length to reach the nearest window, arranging others in the same way in the garden, and set them off. This was three years ago and the sparrows have not attempted to come ino his garden or to alight in his trees since. He keeps some 'fake' flower pots in the trees and garden and the birds are afraid of them.

Intervention in Mexico Seems Near

A PREPAREDNESS WARNING.

New York World (Ind.): Northern Mexico is going to be cleaned up of its anarchy and of its freedom to roving bands of cut-throats, and Carranza can either get busy with his troops in co-operation with our own to that end or the cleaning-up process will go on without him.

Meantime the gentlemen of the House at Washington, under the lead of Chairman Hay, who have been and still are holding up in conference a real army reorganization bill to effect as great an emasculation of it as possible, are reminded by this event that the country is turning sharp eyes on them. Gen. Funston had been asked to send more troops into the district now raided and had refused, presumably because he had none to spare. He never will have any to spare if these obstructionists persist.

Pass the Senate army reorganization bill at once That is also a lesson taught by this latest border outrage.

NOT CAUSE FOR INTERVENTION.

New York Evening Post (Ind.): Something should certainly be done to make further raids impossible, but when the war shouters rise to announce that this "something" must be intervention, it is not the safety of the border they have in mind, but that open conflict with the Mexican people, of which they have not yet given up hope. For the extirpation of banditry in Northern Mexico we have resorted to measures which involved the risk of war, but only if it were forced upon us. What we are asked to suppose is that a break with Carranza, the destruction of the only existing authority in Mexico, and a full-fledged war against the Mexican people would redound to the safety of Americans north of the Rio Grande.

WHO FINANCES THE RAIDS?

Philadelphia Evening Telegraph (Rep.): In dispatches sent out from Washington a few weeks ago President Wilson was said to view the border raids in a manner very similar to that expressed by Foreign Minister Aguilar; that is, he laid the chief blame upon unscrupulous interests which are striving to bring about intervention and the possible annexation of Mexican territory in which they have large investments.

Assuming that President Wilson and the Carranza Government have facts to support their theories, the American people will expect to have those facts made public, at the proper time, regardless of whose character may be smirched with the charge of treason.

ABANDON PARLEYS.

Washington Herald (Ind.): Mexican invasion of the United States must be stopped. If in this undertaking the Carranza Government will place all of its resources at our disposal and extend its full co-operation, so much the better; but no restrictions of any sort must be placed upon the operations of the United States forces. The work must be done, either with the friendly, earnest aid of the Carranza Government or in utter defiance of it. Unless we are willing to admit that the time has come when American lives are not safe on American soil we must abandon parleys with a Government that is too weak to keep its own people from making war upon a friendly people, but audacious enough to dictate terms to a nation of 100,000,000 seeking to punish the bandits who invade its soil and commit murder.

THE SWORD MUST SETTLE THIS.

Louisville Courier-Journal (Dem.): There will never be peace and order in Mexico until we go in and compel peace and order at the point of the bayonet and the sword as we did in Cuba and have done in the Philippines. The Latin-American, like the native American Indian, knows only the law of force. He is wholly unequal to self-government and never will be equal to it. Bolivar, in South America, found that out a hundred years ago. Many rulers in Mexico, from Iturbide and Santa Anna to Juarez and Diaz, have found it out since. Woodrow Wilson seems to be the only statesman entertaining a different opinion.

His "humanitarianism" has thus far cost us dear. Unless he folds it away in a neat morocco case, takes out his Rule of War, Unabridged, buckles his belt tightly about him, and says, "By the Eternal," it will probably cost us still more. Meanwhile, the parley with Carranza is unlikely to yield more than the parley with Villa a year ago. They are mostly of a kind over there—bandit chiefs out after power and pelf—none of them equal to the first principles of established law and responsible government.

A BUGLE CALL TO CONGRESS.

Washington Times (Ind.): The border raid sounded a bugle call to the members of Congress haggling over details of the army reorganization bill; it made it clear that the bill must be passed at once and with provision for the largest possible standing army, so that men may be available to throw into Mexico.

The bandits must go and the United States alone must "do the job."

NO WITHDRAWAL NOW.

Cleveland Plain Dealer (Ind. Dem.): The difficulty with those Mexicans now insisting on the withdrawal of United States forces is that they lay claim to an ability they do not possess to control this wild country and protect the boundary. Carranza followers would deny to the United States permission to pacify a region which they have not pacified and cannot pacify.

United States troops stay. Their task is not yet completed. Not only must the Villa bands be broken up and their leader taken if possible, but the international border must be protected. Half-way measures are likely to be delusive and dangerous.

ANOTHER VERA CRUZ?

St. Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep.): What the administration seems to have in view is another Vera Cruz performance. It would again hold on Mexican soil a large body of United States troops, inactive and serving as a constant source of irritation. If Villa is still a potent factor, in the opinion of Washington, the only proper course is that of maintaining the pursuit of him and his forces. To abandon the pursuit and establish armed camps there, to be maintained indefinitely, would be to repeat the blunder of Vera Cruz under much less favoring conditions.

Last Word to Berlin Wins Approval

REASSURES THE COUNTRY.

New York Evening Sun: The President Meets the views of the American people in telling Germany emphatically that in accepting her pledges he feels in no way bound by the condition or quasi-condition attached thereto. His position that we are dealing with Germany over an issue between the German Government and ourselves and that this cannot be complicated with any questions between ourselves and a third party is entirely sound. Indeed it is essential to our position in carrying on any future negotiations with Great Britain over her depredations on our commerce. In such negotiations it is imperative that we must always be manifestly working for our own cause and not as a result of a bargain with Germany.

The President's prompt action on his own initiative in this matter will reassure the country.

COURTEOUS BUT POINTED.

New York Herald: The President tells Germany plainly that it is none of its business what we may do or say to any other belligerent. But he says it like a gentleman. "Responsibility in such matters is single, not joint; absolute, not relative." It is a phrase that will ring together with the phrase "Now happily abandoned," and that biting sentence, "The Government of the United States will rely upon a scrupulous execution henceforth of the new altered policy of the Imperial Government such as will remove the danger of an interruption of the good relations existing between the United States and Germany."

The President is wise in making a reply which is courteous. No American President or Secretary of State can resort to the practice of a card sharper or the language of a blackguard. The reply is plain and pointed. The meaning is clear and unclouded.

"STRICT ACCOUNTABILITY."

Philadelphia Ledger: Since the President in his very curt note, in spite of the very general public feeling that it ought to be rejected, has accepted that portion of the German note relating to orders to submarines as meeting his demands, and to continue diplomatic relations with Germany while these orders are carried out faithfully, he assumes a heavy responsibility which only the future can justify. His refusal to accede to the conditions suggested in the note was inevitable. What effect it will have on the fulfilment of this latest promise remains to be seen. But the scarcely veiled insolence of the German arraignment of his past policy, the impatience of the great majority of Americans over a renewed debate on a question of national honor, the all but universal opinion, not only among the allies, but also in South American countries, that the terms offered by Germany are inconsistent with our self-respect—all these things emphasize the gravity of his decision. It is not a decision that can be greeted with approval; it implies the further pursuit of a course which has already proved disastrous. Whatever happens, the President must expect to be held to "strict accountability" by his fellow citizens."

GERMANY MUST MAKE GOOD.

Pittsburg Gazette-Times: President Wilson's formal acceptance of Germany's compliance with the demand of our Government that it declare and effect an abandonment of its unlawful submarine warfare on merchant ships is what was to be expected, except in quarters openly hostile to Germany. Whether he took notice of them by rejection or ignored the irrelevent requests or demands of the Kaiser's Government touching our differences with other Powers is a matter of no consequence. Mr. Wilson cannot take orders from Berlin nor can he shape his conduct of American affairs to fit German interests or desires. He accepts at its face value the pledge of the Berlin Government to abandon the practices of which we complained. In what good faith the promise is given will be demonstrated by events.

COMPELS ADMIRATION.

Pittsburg Dispatch: As notes go this is rather neat. In fact, brevity produces clarity. It is not at all likely that Berlin will have anything like the difficulty some people had on this side last Friday in guessing just what the last note from Von Jagow was driving at. At the same time the satirical sallies in the German retort are countered with a deft ripost that compels all admiration.

NO ROOM FOR DOUBT.

Louisville Courier-Journal: The President's latest—and surely his last—is neatly turned, but it leaves not the slightest room for doubt of its meaning or its firmness. If the Kaiser wishes to avoid a rupture with us he will take the President at his word and effect the policy he has declared. But he now understands that his first violation of that policy means the summary rupture, without further parley, which his "concession" to us is intended to prevent.

VERY WELL SAID.

Louisville Times: The temptation to write "just one more note" was too strong to be resisted. What went without saying is, however, said as well as it could be said. We don't want trouble. If Germany does, it knows where and how to find it.

All this was covered in the note of April 19. If its repetition relieves the President's mind, the relief is not to be grudged him. He has had a good deal on it lately.

THE EAGLE SPIRIT RISING.

Philadelphia North American: Somebody has sent another American eagle to Wilson. Must think he is using eagle quills to write notes with.

The last note sounded like it, anyway.

MEANING OF THE NOTE.

Indianapolis News: What we accept, therefore is Germany's "declaration of its abandonment of the policy which has so seriously menaced the good relations between the two countries," and what we rely on is "a scrupulous execution henceforth of the now altered policy of the Imperial Government such as will remove the principal danger to an interruption of the good relations existing between the United States and Germany." Our interpretation of the note is now understood in Berlin. We are to learn whether it is also the interpretation of the German Government. If it is not, then all that can be said is that the offer in no way meets the demands of this Government. If it is then the controversy is happily closed, as far as principle is concerned. There will still be the question of the application of the principle to the Lusitania, Arabic, Sussex and other cases. Our demand was for an unconditional abandonment by the German Government of the lawless features of its submarine campaign. As that was made abundantly clear in preceding notes, particularly in the latest one, it does not seem possible that Germany could have misunderstood our position. But if there was a misunderstanding, it has now been removed. For the note of yesterday is as luminous as it is brief.

Congressional Delay on Preparedness

THE PEOPLE ARE APATHETIC.

New York World: On the heels of the Glen Springs raid the House of Representatives, by overwhelming majorities, has instructed its members of the Conference Committee to vote against the volunteer army plan and to keep the regular army down to 140,000 men.

The House not only refuses to accept the Senate bill but it refuses to compromise with the Senate. Either no army increase at all or only such scanty measure of army increase as the Hay bill provides. As the case now stands, the House and Senate are deadlocked, and the National Guard lobby is apparently in control of the situation.

While the House was putting the army bill into a straitjacket, the President was endeavoring to explain to a committee representing the American Union Against Militarism the difference between militarism and reasonable preparedness. Whatever impression he made on this committee, it is evident that the House sees little if any distinction. It regards any increase in the military establishment of the United States as militarism, and therefore to be reprehended.

At the same time, the American people themselves must share the full responsibility for the threatened defeat of an adequate Army bill. They have manifested no genuine interest in the matter. They have done nothing to impress Congress.

THE SITUATION ANALYZED.

Philadelphia Record: When the four regiments of regular United States infantry now en route from Northern New York and the State of Washington shall have arrived at the Mexican border, this country will have been swept practically clean of mobile troops. Five troops of cavalry of a strength of 500 men are all that will remain at points remote from the frontier. There are our garrisons in the Philippines, Hawaii and Panama, approximately 21,000 men; and there is the coast artillery, of about the same strength. But these don't count. The garrisons of our outlying possessions and our forts cannot be reduced. Brigadier-General Pershing has 14,500 men in his expeditionary force; there are 12,000 men under the immediate command of Gen. Funston on the border; and these, with the four regiments en route—a total of 30,500 men—constitute the available field army of the United States.

In this situation the refusal of the House to accept the provision of the Senate bill for a regular army of 250,000 men is incomprehensible. Even if the full complement of men thus provided for could be obtained by enlistments in the regular army, which is not at all certain, the mobile force left after the deduction of necessary oversea and coast fortress garrisons and special service troops would not greatly exceed 150,000 men. This would be less than one-third the minimum required as a first line of defense, according to military experts. Nevertheless the House also has rejected the Senate bill's provision for the organization of a volunteer army of 261,000 men. The singular thing about this action of the House is that the provision now rejected is identical, except in one particular, with a measure previously approved by Chairman Hay of the Military Affairs Committee. The exception is that the organization of the volunteer army mentioned in the Senate bill might be proceeded with at any time; the idea being to confer on the President authority to prepare for war in time of peace instead of requiring him to wait until a conflict is upon us.

The House also insists upon its increase of the appropriation for the National Guard from $8,000,000 to $48,000,000. It is expected thus to make service in the National Guard so attractive that the strength of this force will be raised from a nominal 130,000 to an actual 450,000 or thereabouts. And this expectation is to be our sole dependence in case of an emergency arising that would require the quick mobilization of a defensive field army. Essentially the House Army bill is the Militia Pay bill, which its advocates could not get passed on its merits, and which is now to be foisted on the country in the guise of a "preparedness" measure. The proposition that the officers and men of the National Guard should get reasonable compensation for their services might be defended; but the National Guard will not become Federalized merely by making it a beneficiary of the Federal Treasury.

PROTECT AMERICAN LIVES.

New York Tribune: Texas and New Mexico lie open to invasion by Mexican bandits, our border is insufficiently guarded and we lack the military strength to pursue and discipline the armed bands which cross into our territory and kill our soldiers and civilians. Yet the House of Representatives backs and fills, palters and dawdles, more concerned about "federalizing" the national guard and thus creating state and district military patronage than it is about providing men to protect American lives or to maintain American interests imperilled by chronic anarchy in Mexico.

The Representatives who vote with Mr. Hay do not reflect the feeling of their constituencies. On March 25 last only one Southern Democrat, Mr. Montague of Virginia, supported the Kahn amendment to the Hay bill fixing the peace strength of the army at 220,000. Yet in the latest summary of "The New York World's" poll of editors, out of 20 editors from the Southern States responding 16 favored a peace army of 250,000 and only four favored a peace army of 180,000 or less.

THE NEED FOR PREPAREDNESS.

New York Times: We need much better land defense than the national guard can ever supply. The Senate refuses to recede from its position in regard to the size of the army and the Federal volunteers. After the action of the House, however, we can hope only for a compromise. So far as the Mexican situation is concerned, though complexities have developed, there is no new cause for apprehension. Guarding the border is merely a precautionary measure which was thought necessary in President Taft's administration. There is always danger of border raids while Northern Mexico is infested with murderous bandits. The demand for military extension is not solely based on the Mexican disturbances. The need for it has long been recognized.

"A HOUSE PARTY AT NEWPORT AT THE ARCHES. SATURDAY MAY 20.

First of Garden Teas, Given at the Arches, the Home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Kauffman in Webster Groves, Proves to Be Splendid Event—First List of Boxholders for Production of Wagner's Opera, "Siegfried," at National League Ball Park—Announced Engagement of Miss Alice Cartan to George Vest Bland Made Public at Linen Shower Given to Miss Elizabeth Powell.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

THE first of the Charity Garden Teas yesterday afternoon at the Arches was a great success, and as the echoes of its beauties and attractions go forth, the interest in the next tea next Saturday will grow.

The teas from 2 to 7 o'clock for four Saturdays, beginning yesterday, are quite the most elaborate affairs of the season. A year ago they were planned and no end of trouble gone to make them worth while, even to planting extra flowers in Mrs. Frank E. Kauffman's already beautiful garden and grounds in Webster Groves.

There are the usual articles always on sale at a bazar, a platform for dancing with Gus Haenschen's orchestra, on the lawn, tea in the Japanese Garden—a real one—and for each occasion an entertainment on the lawn in front of the house has been planned.

Next Saturday's will be a fashion show—but different. It has been arranged by William W. La Beaume, therefore it will be clever and gay.

The scene "A House Party at Newport," represents the guests arriving in motors and other ways. There are footmen and grooms and maids all properly dressed and who conduct themselves correctly. The guests appear at various stages as the supposed day passed coming in from tennis courts, golf links, laking, riding and yachting, always perfectly dressed.

There is a children's party in the first scene, which doubtless will be attractive. Most of the girls taking the parts of the riders, tennis and golf players, and the girls at tea are members of the senior class at Mary Institute, who will be debutantes in the autumn.

The children are:

Elizabeth Meston, Eleanor Hiss, Katherine Ludlow, Marjorie Niedringhaus, Florence Ludington, Carol McDonald, Virginia Hemingway, Jean McLeod, Mary Lees-Kennard, Buddy Culver, Alanson Brown, Oliver Blake, Allen Cockrell, William Jones, Senter Jones, Lee Niedringhaus, Bradford Schenkle Jr.

Maids—Frances Carleton, Lucy Taylor, Augusta Cook.

Footmen—Warren Chandler, Richard Upshaw, Chapin Newhard, McNair Bakewell, Sam Conant.

Smock Ballet—Martha Mendenhall, Frances Treat, Ruth Lionberger, Frances Compton, Carolyn Bailey, Elizabeth Bradshaw, Josephine Garrett, Marjorie Hall, Helen Gratz, Frances Woods.

Russian Dance—Serge Halman.

Ladies at Tea—Mrs. Henry Elliot, Mrs. Hudson Bridge, Mrs. Charles Whitelaw, Mrs. Warwick Hough, Mrs. Edward Goltra, Mrs. Edward Mallinckrodt Jr., Mrs. Elliot Ludington, Mrs. Harry Block, Mrs. William Bagnell, Mrs. Charles Scudder, Mrs. Orion Willis.

Young People Returning From Their Various Sports—Florence Funston, Lucile Howard, Mary Frances Dickson, Esther Bernet, Mary Morton.

Yachting Party—Misses Fannie Todd Clark and Mary Lambert, Sterling McKittrick and Wilkins Jones.

Motor Party—Virgil Lewis, Sam Conant, Misses Edith Whittemore, Roberta Lewis and Grace Taylor.

Motor Party—Misses Maries Church and Anne Collins.

Solo Dance—Miss Edith Whittemore.

YESTERDAY afternoon the engagement of Miss Alice Cartan, second daughter of Mrs. Lawrence V. Cartan of 5848 Clemens avenue to George Vest Bland was announced at a linen shower given by Mrs. Cartan and her daughters, Misses Marie and Adele Cartan, in honor of Miss Elizabeth Powell.

The shower was a surprise to Miss Powell, who will shortly marry Stephen S. Adams and the announcement of the engagement was a surprise to the guests.

After the gifts of linen had been presented to Miss Powell, little Joseph Grindon Jr., 4 years old, entered the room with a basket of sweet peas—tied to each bouquet was a card with the news of the engagement written on it.

Miss Cartan on both sides of the house belongs to old pioneer families. Her mother was Miss Marie Boisliniere, the daughter of the late Dr. Boisliniere. The wedding will be in June, but the exact date has not yet been decided upon.

Mr. Bland is the son of the late Congressman, Richard P. Bland, who was defeated by Bryan for the nomination for the Presidency of the United States. He formerly lived in Lebanon, Mo., but now resides in Hill City, S. D. He is a mining engineer and in charge of some mines there.

The Spirella Co. is now located at 3949 Delmar blvd. Call Miss Oline Berkenes, Lin. 5582, Del. 2850J, for appointment.

THE open-air performance of "Siegfried," which will be given at the National League Ball Park on the evening of June 13 under the auspices of the St. Louis Grand Opera Committee, gives promise of being one of the most delightful gala affairs in St. Louis for many years.

Imagine the big grandstand and the bleachers filled with persons in summer finery witnessing a performance of one of Wagner's operas sung by the best exponents of such music in the country with an orchestra of 100 pieces, and you have a picture worth being part of.

The boxholders so far are:

Joseph R. Barroll, Joseph D. Bascom, Mrs. Anna Bray, Mrs. Schuyler P. Britton, August A. Busch, Peyton T. Carr, Mrs. C. McL. Clark, Mrs. John T. Davis Jr., A. C. Einstein, John Fowler, Mrs. D. B. Hussey, William J. Lemp, George D. Markham, Richard McCulloch, W. H. Nolker, Dan C. Nugent, Henry W. Peters, Joseph Pulitzer Jr., John C. Roberts, George W. Simmons, Mrs. Daniel G. Taylor, Rolla Wells, Benjamin Gratz.

The Gardner Reducing Machines are reducing the size and weight and making more attractive thousands of men and women, without the discomforts of hard exercise or diet. Call for trial treatment. Reducing Machine Co., 750 Century Bldg.

YESTERDAY was "Derby day" on Churchill Downs and a party of St. Louisans were there to see the famous race and were guests of Walter Cerre Taylor in his box. They were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Magnus, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Bond, Mrs. Frederick R. Hattersley and George Priest. The Bonds and Mrs. Hattersley left here Friday and joined the rest of the party, who were at French Lick Springs. They all are expected home today.

We would suggest that you let us put your Palm Beach suit in shape. Schuck, 4110 Olive.

Mrs. Julia Deaver Hewitt of the Usona Hotel will depart for Washington, D. C., May 26 to visit her daughter, Mrs. John R. Williams. Mrss. Hewitt will spend part of the summer with her granddaughter, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, who was Miss Juliette Williams, at her summer home at Beverly Farms, Mass.

MRS. ORVILLE L. BROWN, 5842 Clemens avenue, Friday afternoon gave the first of a series of entertainments in honor of Miss Marie Sahm, who is to be married to her son, Charles C. Brown, in June. Relatives of the two families were invited.

Miss Sahm is a graduate of Hosmer Hall ,and since her debut has been popular in the younger set. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Sahm, 5022 Maple avenue.

Here is a simple, yet very effective method for removing hair and fuzz from the face, neck and arms: Cover the objectionable hairs with a paste made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. The Missouri Postmasters' Association will meet in St. Louis Saturday, June 3. CARELESS USE OF SOAP SPOILS THE HAIR

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy; it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—ADV.

NO NATURAL ICE IN VIENNA

Price of Artificial Has Advanced as Result of Shortage.

VIENNA, Austria, May 13.—Natural ice cannot be had in Vienna this season on account of the unusually mild winter. Ordinarily huge quantities of ice are cut from the Danube, just outside the city, but there was none at all this year and the city is entirely dependent upon the supply of artificial ice.

The consumption has risen enormously, largely owing to the needs of the hospitals, and prices have thus far advanced to 40 cents for 200 pounds as compared with 36 cents last year.

POWDER IN SHOES AS WELL AS GUNS

Foot-Ease to Be Added to Equipment of Hospital Corps at Fort Wayne.

Under the above heading the Detroit Free Press, among other things, says: "The theory is that soldiers whose feet are in good condition can walk further and faster than soldiers who have corns and bunions incased in rawhide.

"The Government's foot powder order is regarded as the last word in the scientific outfitting of the defenders of the flag."

The English, French and Allied Troops constantly make use of Allen's Foot-Ease. It takes the friction from the shoe and rests the feet. Foot Powder, shaken into the shoes of soldiers, has long been in use in the German army, and Uncle Sam's adoption of this form of treating and easing the feet emphasizes the testimony of the millions of people the world over who are shaking Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder, into their shoes, and using it in the foot bath, as the only practical and lasting treatment to ease and prevent sore feet. Sold by drug and department stores everywhere, 25c. Sample sent FREE. Address ALLEN S. OLMSTED, Le Roy, N. Y., U. S. A.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Missouri Editors Are Strongly for Adequate Defense

voted for the preparedness measure as it is my opinion that only by being properly prepared can we regain and maintain our former prestige as a world power. The Mexican situation has opened the eyes of all loyal Americans to the deplorably inadequate protection afforded citizens of the United States along the Mexican border, and has belittled us in the eyes of the entire civilized world. Missourians are unquestionably loyal, but loyalty to the flag without the sinews of war would mean the sacrificing of many patriotic citizens, should the occasion arise. What Missourians want is not war, but a preparedness program formulated by the lawmakers at Washington which will give notice to all the world that, while we are not carrying chips around on our shoulders, we are in a position to enforce every demand made necessary for the preservation of our national integrity and the protection of every American in any part of the world.

Pike County for Preparing.

J. M. Wood, Times, Louisiana: It is my honest opinion that two-thirds of the people of Pike County, regardless of party affiliations, favor preparedness, both military and naval. The Senate bill should have been ratified by the House. The recent developments in the Mexican situation have convinced all but a few peace-at-any-price fellows that we need preparedness.

"Can't Protect Ourselves, Even From Mobs."

R. M. White, Ledger, Mexico: The people who live in this part of Missouri appreciate the difference between militarism and reasonable preparedness and are practically unanimous in favor of dignified and substantial naval preparedness at once. The trouble along the Mexican border emphasizes our lack of preparedness to protect ourselves even against a mob. I believe our people favor the Senate amendment to the army bill and that the House should have voted for that measure. There should be no politics of any kind in any preparedness measure. We are patriots before we are partisans.

Congress Should Support Administration.

Lee Shippey, Jeffersonian, Higginsville: I believe the sentiment of this section is against extensive preparedness. I believe Congress should support the administration program in a time like this, but my own view is that gun-toting never was effective in preserving peace.

Industrial Preparedness Urged.

William Southern, Examiner, Independence: Missouri believes in a preparedness which will bring the business industries of the United States to the highest efficiency, build adequate railroad lines and place the country in position to support the military if necessity comes. Missouri does not believe in spending hundreds of millions of dollars in building great warships which will be obsolete when launched or in building a great Federal army and placing in the hands of one Commander in Chief power to wield a military aristocracy. Missouri does not believe in permitting U. S. citizens to endanger the peace of the nation by insisting on a technical right to ride on war vessels of foreign nations.

Peanut Politics National Shame.

W. J. Hill, Courier-Post, Hannibal: The House should have passed preparedness measure by all means. Immediate steps on preparedness are absolutely essential for protection of American people and their interests, for the maintenance of respect from other nations and for the defense of our rights. Horse play and peanut politics at a time like this are a national shame and a menace to the American people. Adequate preparedness is the greatest assurance the American people can have of peace, protection and prosperity. The principal factor in keeping an individual from trying to lick another fellow is the knowledge that he can't do it. If he is in the notion and feels sure he can, he will tackle him. No matter what the grievance may be, if he knows he will get a pummeling himself, if he starts something, he will be peaceful. Thus preparedness will keep the other fellow out of a fight. The same principle applies to national and international conditions.

"Our Patriotism Guarantees Our Safety."

Theodore Graff, Advertiser-Courier, Hermann: Unaffected by the hysteria of the Eastern press and its endeavors to create panic terrors of foreign invasion among our people, in the interest of capital, lurking for the opportunity to prey upon the credulity of an unsuspecting public, the Middle West sanctions the course which the House of Representatives has taken on the preparedness measure. Personally, I believe to a certain measure in preparedness, but that preparedness should begin with compulsory military training in all high schools and other educational institutions, under competent instructors. Our navy should be increased and strengthened, equipping our ships with more complete guns from our own Government-owned plants. The spirit of patriotism of the American people is the same today as it was during the wars of the Revolution and Rebellion and the call to arms will be just as readily answered now as then, should the safety and honor of our country demand it.

Farmers Favor Preparedness, Too.

C. C. Howard, News, Kirksville: Sentiment here among Democrats, Republicans and Progressives is overwhelming for national preparedness and there is general criticism over the recent action of the House in defeating the army bill providing for a standing army of 250,000 men. Personally I am for greater national preparedness than has yet been suggested by President Wilson. Personal knowledge of the general trend of opinion in Adair and Macon counties on preparedness prompts me to venture the assertion that four-fifths of the people, farmers as well as townspeople, favor national preparedness.

House Failed to Do Its Duty.

H. S. Smith, Enterprise-Courier, Charleston: I believe the National House should have voted for the preparedness measure.

"House Followed Public Opinion."

Courier, Keytesville: We believe the House of Representatives acted in accordance with the views of the country in its vote against extensive preparedness measures.

House Missed Its Opportunity.

W. L. Robertson, Democrat, Gallatin: It's my opinion that the House of Representatives should have voted for the preparedness measure which passed the Senate.

"Want Substantial Military Protection."

Howard Mills, News-Jeffersonian, Mound City: I believe I am speaking the sentiment of at least 90 per cent of the voters of Holt County and Northwest Missouri when I say we want Congress to provide substantial military protection for the United States. With practically all our army engaged in the minor campaign in Mexico, where would we be if actually threatened by a real Power? This is the question we would like for Congress to answer.

Preparedness Is Common Sense.

Hal Wise, Sentinel, Webb City: I represent my own and such sentiment as I have heard expressed in saying that the people of this section feel that preparedness is more or less synonymous with common sense and that a reasonable measure of preparedness for possible war or invasion is always advisable. At the same time, there is the danger of over-preparedness, waste and loss as the result of hysteria at a time of war elsewhere.

We believe that a time of world fright is at hand and that the national tendency is to overprepare through hysteria. We believe in a greater navy than standing army strength, because of America's geographical relation to the rest of the world, and are inclined to the old-fashioned faith and loyalty which taught us as Americans to believe that our volunteer reserve army strength was and is adequate to all military needs. The House should have voted more strongly for the volunteer army than for the standing army measure, and the standing army measure should have been supported up to a reasonable size, the number to be left to more expert judgment than mine or the average Congressman's.

Conflicting Views at Lamar.

Arthur Aull, Democrat, Lamar: Categorically answering your question as to whether the House should have concurred in the Senate amendment providing for a force of 261,000 volunteers and 250,000 regulars, I would emphatically say, "yes." But this district, in the mass, is not in accord with my personal views upon the question of military and naval preparedness. Sentiment for preparedness in this locality is slowly growing. Men who were rampant against any increase in the army and navy, six months ago, have now become silent. The public mind is gradually, and it appears to me reluctantly, swinging over to where it will demand an adequate army and navy.

Previous to the European war, there was no sentiment in this region at all, for any serious sort of military and naval preparation. Then, for some months after the great conflict began, the people hereabouts always applauded when some glib goods box orator declared it was all the work of two or three ambitious and unscrupulous Kings, thus plainly leaving the inference that the American people were too wise and too virtuous to get into a war. Then there is a considerable pro-German element among our active moulders of public sentiment. We have very few citizens of German birth it is true. But there are a good many Americans among us, who remember their old brown-backed school histories well enough to know that it is the duty of every patriot to love, honor and abet the enemies of England. For some strange reason, while these gentlemen so cordially admire the great military power of the Kaiser, they are unanimously averse to seeing their own country follow, in any degree whatsoever, their hero's illustrous and puissant example.

Then there is considerable feeling for the militia, and a corresponding prejudice against the officers of the regular army. Militia officers are worth considering in the politics of the Fifteenth District, and they are industriously sowing the poison against a volunteer army which would probably be officered very largely by the men from West Point. Their propaganda, it seems to me, is inclined locally to find a fertile soil.

There are thousands of labor votes in the mining section of the Fifteenth District. They are very largely against any radical departure in favor of military and naval preparedness. Though they may not vote the third party ticket, the political sentiment of these miners is strongly tinctured with Socialism. In summing it all up, I would say that a Congressman from this district could not afford to be flatly against preparedness, because of the gradual, though rather reluctant, acceptance by our people of the new conditions that are confronting the country. But I believe he could safely vote against a bill like the Senate amendment as rejected by the House a few days ago. If he voted for a regular army of say 175,000 men, coupled with a federalization of the State militia, I believe it would be pretty hard or an opponent here in the district to make any headway by criticising his action.

Sentiment Growing at Louisiana.

E. B. Harkrider, News, Louisiana: The House of Representatives should have by all means voted for the preparedness measures. I am strongly of the opinion that the people favor any reasonable preparedness and surely the Senate's amendment to the House bill was reasonable. Many to whom I have talked think that this country is entitled to and should have much better defense than we now have and go the Senate's bill one better by making it stronger.

Big Standing Army Not Wanted.

Hal Mitchell, Post, Nevada: Public sentiment in this section of Missouri strongly approves the action of the House of Representatives. The overwhelming sentiment is against a large standing army and favors the federalization of the national guard. We regard the Hay bill as providing adequate national defense. The people are against the continental army or so-called volunteer scheme contained in the Senate bill and the action of the Missouri delegation in supporting Chairman Hay is approved by Democrats and Republicans alike.

Strength Means Peace With Honor.

Lewis W. Moore, Border Telephone, Hume: I believe I voice the sentiment of this section of Missouri, Bates County, when I say that the House of Representatives should adopt the preparedness measures as advocated by the President, not as a means of pro-

HOW TO REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

A SIMPLE, SAFE, RELIABLE WAY

People who are over-burdened with superfluous fat know only too well the discomfort and ridicule that over-stout people have to bear.

If you are carrying around five or ten pounds of unhealthy fat you are unnecessarily weakening your vital organs and are carrying a burden which destroys the beauty of your figure.

There is no need of anyone suffering from superfluous fat. If you want to reduce your weight in a simple, safe and reliable way, without starvation diet or tiresome exercise, here is a test worth trying: Spend as much time as you can in the open air, breathe deeply and get from Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. or any good druggist a box of oil of korein capsules; take one after each meal and one before retiring at night.

Weigh yourself once a week so as to know just how fast you are losing weight and don't leave off the treatment or even skip a single dose until you are down to normal.

Oil of korein is absolutely harmless, is pleasant to take, and helps digestion. Even a few days' treatment has been reported to show a noticeable reduction in weight, footsteps become lighter, your work seems easier and a lighter and more buoyant feeling takes possession of your whole being.

Every person who suffers from superfluous fat should give this treatment a trial.—ADV.

Take Iron, Says Doctor, if You Want Plenty of "Stay There" Strength Like an Athlete!

Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Delicate, Nervous, Rundown People 200% Stronger in Two Weeks' Time, in Many Cases

Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or narcotic drug, said Dr. Sauer, a well known specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, when, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fail to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong, but they can't tell what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by the lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozen of nervous, rundown people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated iron recommended above by Dr. Sauer, is one of the newer organic iron compounds. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co. and all other druggists.—ADV.

moting a war, but to preclude the possibility of war. The Mexican situation, to my mind, is only a fair test of what this country would be up against in the event we should force the demands of peace. The United States undoubtedly is destined to furnish the key to the world's ultimate peace. Without a formidable army and navy and aerial equipment, and most especially the navy, we would be unable to claim a hearing from the warring nations. The peace propaganda now being distributed over our country is instigated by unfriendly and designing enemies and Congress should not be deceived with the idea that the American people will stand for anything but our God-given rights.

'Wolf! Wolf! When There's No Wolf'

O. W. Neff, Herald, Nevada: In my opinion there is no occasion now nor has there been for any wild orgy of preparedness. If we ever were in danger from a foreign foe it has passed, at least temporarily, and is getting further away every day. The House of Representatives was right in refusing to stand for a scheme that meant unnecessary Government expense forever, for who ever heard of any country getting rid of a big regular army once it had it? Instead of preparedness to lick the world the United States should prepare to disarm the world. With the start of the war many people in this section were alarmed for our national safety, but they are fast cooling off as they realize the lesson that Europe has taught itself. But it does not mean that patriotism is either dead or asleep. The spirit of 1776 is as much alive as ever, it simply is not crying "wolf!" "wolf!" when there is no wolf around. Men of this part of Missouri are ready as were those of old to defend the flag if need be, but are not looking for the chance to pay a lot of idlers to defend it when it needs no defense.

Prepared in Moderation Favored.

E. W. Jewett, Democrat, Shelbina: Sentiment of this section is for preparedness to a somewhat lesser degree than that recommended by the President. Sentiment is divided on the question whether the House should have voted for both the standing army of 250,000 men and the volunteer army. Majority here probably against so large an army of either kind. Some apathy here.

Senate Measure About Right.

Robroy Godsey, Register, Webb City: While I do not favor such an army as might be hoped to terrorize the world, and such is true in measure of Switzerland's in Europe, yet I am in favor of the Senate amendment to the army bill providing for a standing army of 250,000 and volunteers 261,000.

House Should Pass Chamberlain Bill.

W. W. Allen, Intelligencer, Lexington: The House of Representatives should pass the Chamberlain bill and every other preparedness measure that will insure peace and safety.

Training for All the Solution.

E. P. Frances, Tribune, Fredericktown: Congress should not vote for too large a standing army, but provide a system of military training in connection with high schools, under stricter rules of morality than generally prevail, and the standing army that is now in existence, and should be kept up, should be used in time of peace in building highways, the state or county in which same is to be built to furnish the tools and material, giving the men two or three drills a week in military tactics.

House Should Have Concurred.

R. W. McMullin, Democrat, Hillsboro: Preparedness is favored here. I believe the House should have agreed with the Senate on the amendments to the preparedness bill.

ernment, or at least they may have an untoward effect on the Irish troops fighting for them in Flanders and elsewhere.

Do Not Realize Strength.

"I fear we do not realize our present strength and our enemy's weakness. Where is the British navy that we were told ruled the waves? Recent events show that her ruling is now passed. As for land forces, what has England to put against us? She needs every available man to meet the German offensive. Even her conscript army will be needed. She may send some of them to Ireland, but are they such to make us fear?

"We are fighting for freedom, freedom of everyone; they are only conscripts, fighting against their will. We are superior to them in every respect. We know our country, and by a systematic and simultaneous action we should shock, demoralize and rout them.

"Comrades, everything favors us. Now or never, for the final onslaught. The shades of our immortal dead, the graves of the unavenged, the harrowing cries of our murdered priests, of our violated women, of the coffinless dead, who are whitening the Atlantic's broad floor, the exiles—all rise up and command us to do the noble deed, and fight the last fight for freedom.

"We must not wait till the war is over. England will then be at peace, and will be free to send her reserves against us. Will we wait to fail or will we fight now to win? Yours is the choice.

"I am ready. For years I have waited and prayed for this day. We have the most glorious opportunity that has ever presented itself of really asserting ourselves. Such an opportunity may never come again. We have Ireland's liberty in our hands. Will we be freemen, or are we content to remain as slaves and idly watch the final extermination of the Gael? GOMERAGH."

KIEL AND PLAYER TO HEAR PLEAS FOR EFFICIENCY BOARD

Representatives of Various Organizations to Urge Enlarged Appropriation for Ensuing Year.

Mayor Kiel and Comptroller Player will hold a special hearing on the Efficiency Board's appropriation for the coming year, tomorrow morning, at 10:30 o'clock, in the Mayor's office. Representatives from the Business Men's League, Civic League, the Central Trades and Labor Union, Taxpayers' Association, Tenth Ward Improvement Association, Central Civic Council and West End Business Men's Association will be present.

The Efficiency Board asked for $26,000 and was allowed only $22,000 by the Board of Estimate. Representatives of the public will, it is said, point out to the Mayor and Comptroller that it will be impossible for the Efficiency Board to carry out the mandatory provisions of the charter which require the standardization and classification of all positions in the city's service, unless it is allowed the amount asked for. The committee also will, it is said, point out that the reduction in the Efficiency Board's budget was considerably greater in proportion than that of the estimates of other departments at the city hall.

America Much Too Superficial to Be a Great Nation

WASTE OF LIVING THAT IS HIGH.

Besides, life in a city flat—I am not talking of the rich—does not make for individual refinement. It discourages the real housewife. It gives no scope for the upbuilding of the family. It is really no way for civilized people to live. If you look into it at all closely, you can see the reason why, with all the great love for children that is characteristic both of the American parent and the American community. There is no really strong family feeling among the people. Family ties are slack and there is little respect among the children for their parents. It seems to me that if France and Belgium have much to learn from the United States in the way of material development and intercommunication, the United States has even more to learn from France and Belgium as to the way to live. Of course, there are thousands upon thousands of families who have either forgotten many of the best things in the lives of their forefathers and who are but one generation removed from immigrants whose standard and mode of living was the lowest in all Europe.

Individual Isolated in Masses.

Even the manner in which your great cities are built seems to be designed to prevent the awakening of the esthetic sense among your people. For your subways, your elevated trains, your surface cars, your great loft buildings and huge commercial piles I have boundless admiration. They are the necessary instruments of your life, admirably adapted to their purpose and some day time will be found to make them beautiful.

But it is the way your cities are laid out. The long straight streets crossing each other at right angles, the elimination of all grades, the system of numbering instead of naming your thoroughfares, however useful these things may be in the commercial quarters of the city, can hardly be defended for residential sections. Your great cities are creating the isolation of the individual in the masses, they are crushing all neighborly attributes out of your community life. They are retarding the intellectual development of the nation.

Another thing. You have in the United States the finest schools, colleges, universities and public libraries in the world. Finest and most wonderful art buildings, and even as organizations for dissemination of knowledge, but there does not seem to be any relation between the completeness of the splendid equipment and the results actually attained. If you would only apply to the intellectual development of the nation's youth a little of the broad vision, the force of purpose, the thoroughness of method and the completeness of organization which have made your material development what it is, there would be a very different tale to tell.

There are no frills about American business, but there are a great many frills about American education, and there is no follow-up system in the latter. The brain of the American youth is like a virgin soil into which a lot of seed has been cast pell-mell, and very little or no attention paid to the culture or the training of the crop. Perhaps this springs to an extent from the fact that most Americans believe that money ought to buy everything, and when they have paid for a college course for their sons they look upon a diploma as something their son ought to get because they have paid his college fees regularly. This makes for a woeful laxity in your examinations which are mostly far too easy.

Too Many Women Teachers Baneful.

Another point in your educational system which is of importance is that the youth of this country is taught by women. Now no matter what a woman's training may be she is usually lacking in deductive philosophy and in creative logic. I do not say that it would not be possible to take certain types of women and so train them that as teachers they might be the equal of men, but it will rarely be contended that this is the case with a very small percentage of the school teachers of the United States.

Now your mode of living, which seems to me, as I have said, to preclude the opportunity for intellectual preoccupation is also responsible for the fact that Americans are not a gay people. Take the way Americans dance. Dancing is a mode of expression. It is either an incitation to or a reflection of love or an incitation to or reflection of battle. In either case—whether it be love dance or war dance—it is inspiring and beautiful. But American dancing is neither. I have watched hundreds of couples of Americans dancing and all I could see was a grotesque and senseless stepping exercise which meant nothing and had absolutely no appeal to my senses or my intellect.

Consider also your newspapers and magazines. Your newspapers print only news, comic pictures, advertisements and brief political comments upon the news. As great numbers of them are sold, they must be taken to fit very closely the intellectual demand that exists. The suggestion power of the press is great. It is really the only power that it has. Daily into millions of human brains, the American press impresses "facts" which are generally of so little importance that in 30 days they are forgotten, and it never tries to sow ideas which would bear lasting fruit. What thinking the American people do is inspired by the platform, which is a very narrow and ineffective substitute for the press.

American newspapers have much to learn from our smaller Belgian papers. I have been more disappointed in American magazines. Their only excuse for existance really is the publication of stories that will spread new ideas and give to the people that inspiration anl intellectual recreation which is bread to the mind of man. And yet what do they publish? Stories that are nearly always worthless. All the thought of the writer has been put on the elaboration of a skillful plot, upon which words have been embroidered. There is hardly ever a new thought or an ideal or an inspiration to be derived from reading them.

If an article deals with any national condition or public question, it is always written in a spirit of destructive criticism, as if the American public wanted a victim. Constructive thought is the hardest thing to find in print in the United States.

Is it that you are so absorbed in your business that you have no strength or imagination left for your pleasures? Is it that when you are not working you merely rest or else recreate only your bodies from the intensity of your individual lives—not that you all work so very hard, but that you work in a manner and with appliances that put a constant and unnatural strain upon your nervous system. And the pitiless economic competition among you has had a peculiar reflex action which accounts for one of the very few really national traits I have been able to discover here.

It is your kindness and softheartedness to the weak and defenseless. You who are so merciless in your business deals and so anxious to push down and trample upon the man in front of you are the kindest people on earth to birds and squirrels and dumb animals. You do not even whip your children and you place your women folk upon a pedestal. The feeble and defenceless you tend with care. It is a reaction from the fierceness and heartlessness you show in business.

Sodality to Give Playlet.

The Young Men's Sodality of St. Margaret's parish, assisted by 30 young women of the parish, will give their semiannual minstrel playlet entitled "The Ship o' Mirth" Wednesday and Thursday nights in St. Margaret's Hall, Thirty-ninth street and Flad avenue, at 8:30 o'clock. After each performance there will be a dance.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

CLEAN-UP RECORD BROKEN WITH 3 MORE DAYS TO GO

1062 Wagon Loads of Rubbish Removed, 228 More Than in Entire 1915 Campaign.

In the clean-up campaign started last week 1062 wagonloads of dirt and rubbish were removed, which was 228 more than were removed during the entire campaign last year. It will be three days more before this campaign is finished.

Street Commissioner Slater, who has been looking after the handling of the teams, under the direction of Director of Streets and Sewers Talbert, estimates that twice as much dirt will be removed as was removed last year. The number of wagonloads will not be doubled, but many of the wagons are larger than those used last year.

With the ending yesterday of the first phase of the drive against dirt, the most advanced lines were at Eighteenth street. North of Cass avenue, however, where the most stubborn resistancee was encountered, the crusaders camped last night west of Jefferson avenue. Commissioner Slater thinks that in the next three days 500 wagonloads of dirt will be seized and hauled away.

The greater results accomplished this year are attributed to more publicity, better co-operation of organizations and individuals and a general desire to clean up the city for the Democratic national convention.

Comparisons by days are as follows: Monday—1916, 140 loads; 1915, 128 loads. Tuesday—1916, 200; 1915, 144. Wednesday—1916, 175; 1915, 128. Thursday—1916, 188; 1915, 147. Friday, 1916, 175; 1915, 142. Saturday—1916, 184; 1915, 145. Total—1916, 1062 wagonloads; 1915, 834 wagonloads.

To Keep Up Work.

Many plans are being worked out for keeping up the clean-up campaign. One of the important ways is to make the vacant lots into playgrounds and gardens. The vacant lots campaign is just getting under headway. It is under the direction of the Central Civics Committee of the Woman's Council, with the president, Mrs. G. V. R. Mechin as chairman.

All the policemen and all the firemen are applauding and helping in every way they can. They are in favor of the reclamation of the vacant lots. One reason is that it means less work for them. Another is that it is good for the city and good for the boys and girls of the city, and every policeman and every fireman is interested in these things.

Chief Young has placed his department at the service of the committee. His men, he assures the committee, will aid in every possible way and protect the playgrounds and gardens. This is what he says: "I wish every vacant lot might be made into a playground or a children's garden. The work of the Juvenile Court, the Truant Officer and the police would be greatly lessened and the houses of correction and the reform schools would be practically empty. The transformation of the vacant lots will mean much to the children.

Organizations and individuals desiring to aid in the vacant lot garden movement may send subscriptions to John G. Lonsdale, treasurer, National Bank of Commerce. Owners of vacant lots who will permit their use for children's gardens, playgrounds, tennis courts, baseball diamonds or quoit courts are requested to notify Mrs. Mechin, 715 Railway Exchange Building, or the chairman of the district in which the lot is located.

City Divided Into Sections.

These tires equipped ten of the fifteen cars which exceeded 40 miles per gallon.

The flexibility of Goodyear Cord construction tends to increase gasoline mileage.

And it adds road mileage by protecting the tires against stone-bruise and blow-out—which shorten the life of many a good tire.

CLARA KELLOGG, FAMOUS SINGER OF THE 70'S, DIES

Scored Her Greatest Triumph as "Marguerite" in "Faust"—Retired at 45.

NEW HARTFORD, Conn., May 13.—Clara Louise Kellogg, a prima donna of the American operatic stage before her marriage to Carl Strakosch, in 1887, died at her home, Elpstone, at noon today, after a year's illness.

On Nov. 9 1887, Miss Kellogg was married to Max Starkosch, who had been her manager while she was with the Max Starkosch Opera Co., and, retiring from the musical world, the couple took up their residence here.

It was a generation ago that she reached the top of her fame. For nearly thirty years she has not been heard on the stage. Her picturesque career extended over a period of 25 years or more until she married Carl Strakosch and retired at the age of 45.

It was just four years ago that many of her friends went to New Hartford to join with Mrs. Strakosch in celebrating her twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Though she was 70 years old at that time, the great songster sat down at a piano after dinner and sang a French song with an amazing amount of old charm.

Clara Louise Kellogg was born in Sumterville, S. C., in 1842. The family moved to New York in 1856 and Miss Kellogg made her first appearance there at the Academy of Music in 1860.

Four years later, on the same stage, after much study in the meantime, she achieved a triumph as Marguerite in "Faust," a role which always remained one of her most successful ones. Her progress thereafter was rapid. She made a successful debut in London in 1867, and her triumphs from then on took her to all the great musical centers of the world.

CHILDREN TO GIVE PANTOMIME FOR THE MILK AND ICE FUND

"In Toyland" to Be Presented on May 27 at the New Grand Central.

"In Toyland," a dance pantomime, depicting life and amusement of the land of toys, will be presented afternoon and evening, May 27, for the benefit of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund, by scores of young folk, under direction of Miss Cecile Lowenstein, at the New Grand Central Theater.

The story shows fairy dolls, representing roses, daisies, tulips, poppies, sweet peas, corn flower, Black-Eyed-Susans and other flowers, going through the enchanted realms of "Toyland," bringing each member of that wonderful land to life by some magic word or movement. Then each gives a dance or does a drill.

The personnel of "Toyland" includes fairy dolls, baby-bumps dolls, a sailor boy, a peasant doll, a Japanese doll, several kewpie dolls, an old-fashioned doll, a French doll, some Teddy bears, a Boy Scout doll, two rag dolls, a butterfly doll, a top doll, a balloon doll and a Russian doll. Each of these dolls comes to life at the touch of fairy flowers and does a beautiful dance.

There is a separate costume for each doll. After the individual performances there will be a grand finale by the entire company.

This is the first big entertainment for the benefit of the 1916 season of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk Fund, and all the small folk who are to be in the production are eager to establish a record result.

OPERA STARS HERE JUNE 13

Date for Open Air Performance at Ball Park Changed.

The open-air performance of Wagner's "Siegfried," at Robison Field, by stars of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company of New York, will be given Tuesday night, June 13, the night before the opening of the Democratic national convention in the Coliseum. The date had been set for June 12, but it was decided that the change would enable many convention delegates to attend the performance, who would not be here 24 hours earlier.

The cast includes Mme. Gadski, Mme. Schumann-Heink, Frieda Hempel, Albert Reiss, Clarence Whitehill, Carl Braun, Otto Goritz and Johannes Sembach. Arthur Bodanzky will conduct the Metropolitan Opera House orchestra, augmented to 100 musicians.

Last year the Post-Dispatch printed 43,724 Male Help Wanted Ads, just 11,002 more than its nearest competitor.

How French Were Driven Back From Promised Land of Alsace by the Germans, Told Here for First Time

Frank Simonds Visits Famous Lorraine Battlefield

Noted Observer Is Taken Over Field of Early Successes of the Invasion and Later Defeats That Were Suppressed by Censor and Obscured by Reports of Marne Victory.

Some of the Bitterest and Most Desperate Fighting of the War Occurred Here, as the Graves on Every Hand Indicate, but the French Believe They Will Regain All They Have Lost.

OF all the region of war, of peace to-day and war yesterday, one goes back to Nancy, to its busy streets, its crowds of people returning from their day's work. War is less than 15 miles away, but Nancy is as calm as London is nervous. Its bakers still make macaroons; even Taube raids do not excuse the children from punctual attendance at school. Nancy is calm with the calmness of all France, but with just a touch of something more than calmness, which 46 years of living by an open frontier brings. Twenty-one months ago it was the gauge of battle, and half a million men fought for it; a new German drive may approach it at any time. Out toward the old frontier there is still a German gun, hidden in the Forest of Bezange, which has turned one block to ashes and may fire again at any hour. Zeppelins have come and gone, leaving dead women and children behind them, but Nancy goes on with today. And tomorrow? In the hearts of all the people of this beautiful city there is a single and a simple faith. Nancy turns her face toward the ancient frontier, she looks hopefully out upon the shell-swept Grand Couronne and beyond to the promised land. And the people say to you, if you ask them about war and about peace, as one of them said to me: "Peace will come, but not until we have our ancient frontier, not until we have Metz and Strassburg. We have waited a long time, is it not so?"
—FRANK H. SIMONDS.

By FRANK H. SIMONDS.

(Copyright, 1916.)

IN the third week of August, 1914, a French army crossed the frontier of Alsace-Lorraine and entered the Promised Land, toward which all Frenchmen had looked in hope and sadness for 44 years. The long-forgotten communiques of that early period of the war reported success after success, until at last it was announced that the victorious French armies had reached Sarrebourg and Morhange, and were astride the Strassburg-Metz Railroad, and then Berlin took up the cry, and France and the world learned of a great invading army. Even Paris conceded that the retreat had begun and the "army of liberation" was crowding back beyond the frontier and far within French territory.

F. H. SIMONDS.

Then the curtain of the censorship fell and the world turned to the westward to watch the terrible battle for Paris. In the agony and glory the Marne the struggle along the Moselle was forgotten; the battle of Nancy, of Lorraine, was fought and won in the darkness, and when the safety of Paris was assured the world looked toward the Aisne, and then toward Flanders. So it came about that one of the greatest battles of the whole war, one of the most important of the French victories, the success that made the Marne possible, the rally and stand of the French armies about Nancy escaped the fame it earned. Only in legend, in the romance of the Kaiser with his cavalry waiting on the hills to enter the Lorraine capital, did the battle live.

A Much Studied Battlefield

WHEN I went to France one of the hopes I had cherished was that I might be permitted to visit this battlefield, to see the ground on which a great battle had been fought, that was still unknown country in the main, for those who have written on the war. The Lorraine field was the field on which France and Germany had planned for a generation to fight. Had the Germans respected the neutrality of Belgium, it is by Nancy, by the gap between the Vosges and the hills of the Meuse, that they must have broken into France. The Marne was a battlefield which was reached by chance and fought over by hazard, but every foot of the Lorraine country had been studied for the fight long years in advance. Here war followed the natural course, followed the plans of the General Staff, prepared years in advance. Indeed, I had treasured over years a plan of the battle of Nancy, contained in a French book written years ago, which might serve as the basis for a history of what happened, as it was written as a phrophecy of what was to come.

When the great General Staff was pleased to grant my request to see the battlefield of Nancy, I was advised to travel by train to that town, accompanied by an officer from the General Staff, and informed that I should there meet an officer of the garrison, who would conduct me to all the points of interest and explain in detail the various phases of the conflict. Thus it fell out, and I have to thank Commandant Leroux for the courtesy and consideration which made this excursion successful.

Old and the New Lines.

IN peace time one goes from Paris to Nancy in five hours, and the distance is about that from New York to Boston, by Springfield. It was all so different and the time almost doubled. Yet there are compensations. Think of the New York-Boston trip as bringing you beyond New Haven to the exact rear of battle, of battle but 15 miles away, with the guns booming in the distance and the aeroplanes and balloons in full view. Think also of this same trip, which from Hartford to Worcester, follows the line of a battle not yet two years old, a battle that has left its traces in ruined villages, in shattered houses. On either side of the railroad track the graves descend to meet the embankments; you can mark the advance and the retreat by the crosses which fill the fields. The gardens that touch the railroad and extend to the rear of houses in the little towns are filled with graves. Each inclosure has been fought for at the point of the bayonet, and every garden wall recalls the Chateau of Hougomont, at Waterloo.

All this was two years ago, but there is today, also. East of Bar-le-Duc the main line is cut by German shell fire now. From Fort Champ des Romains above St. Mihiel German guns sweep the railroad near Commercy, and one has to turn south by a long detour, as if one went to Boston by Fitchburg, travel south through the country of Jenne d'Arc and return by Toul, whose forts look out upon the invaded land. Thus one comes to Nancy by night, and only by night, for 20 miles beyond there are Germans and a German cannon, which not so long ago sent a shell into the town and removed a whole city block beside the railroad station. It is the sight of this ruin as you enter the town which reminds you that you are at the front, but there are other reminders.

Sentries of the Air

AS we ate our dinner in the cafe, facing the beautiful Place Stanislas, we were disturbed by a strange and curious drumming sound. Going out into the square, we saw an aeroplane, or rather its lights, red and green, like those of a ship. It was the first of several, the night patrol, rising slowly and steadily, and then sweeping off in a wide curve toward the enemy's line. They were the sentries of the air, which were to guard us while we slept, for men do sentry duty in the air as well as on the ground about the capital of Lorraine. Then the searchlights on the hills began to play, sweeping the horizon toward that same mysterious region where beyond the darkness there is war.

The next morning I woke with the sense of Fourth of July. Bang! Bang! Such a barking of cannon crackers I had never heard. Still drowsy, I pushed open the French windows and looked down on the square. There I beheld 100 or more men, women and children, their eyes fixed on something in the air above and behind the hotel. Still the incessant barking of guns, with the occasional boom of something more impressive. With difficulty I grasped the fact. I was in the midst of a Taube raid. Somewhere over my head, invisible to me because of the wall of my hotel, a German aeroplane was flying, and all the anti-air craft guns were shooting at it. Was it carrying bombs? Should I presently see or feel the destruction following the descent of these?

But the Taube turned away, the guns fired less and less frequently, the people in the streets drifted away, the children to school, the men to work, the women to wait. It was just a detail in their lives, as familiar as the incoming steamer to the commuters on the North River ferryboats. Some portion of the war has been the day's history of Nancy for nearly two years now. The children do not carry gas masks to school with them, as they do at Pont-a-Mousson, a dozen miles to the north, but women and children have been killed by German shells, by bombs, brought by Zeppelins and by aeroplanes. There is always excitement of sorts in the district of Nancy.

Where German Attack Broke.

AFTER a breakfast broken by the return of the aeroplanes we had seen departing the night before for the patrol, we entered our cars and set out for the front, for the near-front, for the lines a few miles behind the present trenches, where Nancy was saved but two years ago. Our route lay north along the valley of the Meurthe, a smiling broad valley, marching north and south and meeting in a few miles that of the Moselle coming east. It was easy to believe that one was riding through the valley of the Susquehanna, with spring and peace in the air. Toward the east a wall of hills shut out the view. This was the shoulder of the Grand Couronne, the wall against which German violence burst and broke in September, 1914.

Presently we come to a long stretch of road walled in on the river side by brown canvas, exactly the sort of thing that is used at football games to shut out the nonpaying public. But it had another purpose here. We were within the vision of the Germans, across the river, on the heights, behind the forest, which outlines itself at the skyline; there were the Kaiser's troops and that forest was the Bois-le-Pretre, the familiar incident in so many communiques since the war began. Thanks to the canvas, it was possible for the French to move troops along this road without inviting German shells. Yet it was impossible to derive any large feeling of security from a canvas wall, which alone interposed between you and the German heavy artillery.

We passed through several villages and each was crowded with troops; cavalry, infantry, all the branches were represented; it was still early and the soldiers were just beginning their day's work; war is so completely a business here. Transport wagons marched along the roads, companies of soldiers filed by. Interspersed with the soldiers were the civilians, the women and children, for none of the villages are evacuated. Not even the occasional boom of a gun far off could give to this thing the character of real war. It recalled the days of my soldiering in the militia camp at Framingham, in Massachusetts. It was simply impossible to believe that it was real. Even the faces of the soldiers were smiling. There was no such sense of terribleness, of strain and weariness as I found about Verdun. The Lorraine front is now inactive, tranquil; it has been quiet so long that men have forgotten all the carnage and horror of the earlier time.

"War—Do Not Trespass."

WE turned out of the valley and climbed abruptly up the hillside. In a moment we came into the center of a tiny village, and looked into a row of houses whose roofs had been swept off by shell fire. Here and there a whole house was gone; next door the house was undisturbed and the women and children looked out of the doors. The village was St. Genevieve and we were at the extreme front of the French in August, and against this hill burst the flood of German invasion. Leaving the car we walked out of the village and at the end of the street a sign warned the wayfarer not to enter the fields, for which we were bound: "War—do not trespass." This was the burden of the warning.

Once beyond this sign we came out suddenly upon an open plateau, upon trenches. Northward the slope descended to a valley at our feet. It was cut and seamed by trenches, and beyond the trenches stood the posts that carried the barbed wire entanglements. Here and there, amidst the trenches, were graves. I went down to the barbed wire entanglements and examined them curiously. They at least were real. Once thousands of men had come up out of the little woods a quarter of a mile below; they had come on in that famous massed attack; they had come on in the face of machine gun and "seventy-fives." They had just reached the wires, which marked high water. In the woods below, the Bois de Facq, in the field by the river, 4000 Germans had been buried.

Looking out from the trenches the whole country unfolded. Northward the little village of Atten slept under the steep slope of Cote-de-Mousson, a round pinnacle crowned with an ancient chateau. From the hill the German artillery had swept the ground where I stood. Below the hill to the west was Pont-a-Mousson, the city of 150 bombardments, which the Germans took when they came south and lost later.

Above it was the Bois-le-Pretre, in which guns were now booming occasionally. Far to the north was another hill, just visible, and its slope toward us was cut and seamed with yellow slashes. These were the French trenches, then of the second or third line; beyond there was still another hill, it was slightly blurred in the haze, but it was not over five miles away, and it was occupied by the Germans. From the slope above me on a clear day it is possible to see Metz, so near are French and German lines to the old frontier.

Straight across the river to the west of us was another wood, with a glorious name, the forest of the Advance Guard. It swept to the Author of "Robert Elsmere," "Lady Rose's Daughter," "The Case of Richard Maynell" and many other widely-read novels.

THE most astonishing budget of English history, demanding a fourth of his income from every well-to-do citizen, has been brought in since I began to write these articles, and quietly accepted. Five hundred millions sterling (twenty-five hundred million dollars) have been already lent to our allies. We are and quietly accepted. Five hundred millions (three thousand million dollars) on the army; two hundred millions on the navy; while the Munitions Department is costing about two-thirds as much (four hundred millions sterling) as the rest of the army, and is employing close upon two million workers, one-tenth of them women.

As to what we have got for our money, Parliament has authorized an army of four million men, and it is on the question of the last half million that England's "effort" now turns. But do not make any mistake! ENGLAND WILL GET THE MEN SHE WANTS; and labor will in the end be just as determined to get them as any other section of the community.

Meanwhile, abroad, while we seem, for the moment, in France to be inactive, we are in reality giving the French at Verdun just that support which they and Gen. Joffre desire, and—it can scarcely be doubted—preparing great things on out own account. As to the great and complex war machine we have been steadily—aye, and rapidly—building upon French soil—whether in the supply bases or in the war organization along the 90 miles of front now held by the British armies—it would indeed astonish those dead heroes of the retreat from Mons could they come back to see it! We are not satisfied with it yet —hence the unrest in Parliament and the press— we shall never be satisfied till Germany has accepted the terms of the allies. But those who know England best have no doubt whatever as to the temper of the nation which has so far "improvised the impossible" in the setting up of this machine, and means, in the end, TO GET OUT OF IT WHAT IT WANTS.

WHAT ONE DUKE IS DOING FOR HIS COUNTRY'S CAUSE

THE temper of the nation? Let me take some samples of it. First, what have the rich been doing?

As to money, the figures of the income tax, the death duties and the various war loans are there to show what they have contributed to the State. The joint War Committee of the Red Cross and the St. John's Ambulance Association has collected—though not, of course, from the rich only —close on four millions sterling (between eighteen and nineteen million dollars) and the Prince of Wales' Fund nearly six millions (thirty million dollars). The lavishness of English giving, indeed, in all directions, during the last two years, could hardly, I think, have been outdone.

A few days ago, I walked with the Duke of Bedford through the training and reinforcement camp, about 15 miles from my own home in the country, which at the outbreak of war he himself built without waiting for public money or War Office contractors, to house and train recruits for the various Bedfordshire regiments. The camp holds 1200 men and is ranged in a park where the oaks—still standing—were considered too old by Oliver Cromwell's Commissioners to furnish timber for the English navy. Besides ample barrack accommodation in comfortable huts, planned so as to satisfy every demand whether of health or convenience, all the opportunities that Aldershot offers, on a large scale, are here provided in miniature. The model trenches, with the latest improvements in plan, revetting, gun-emplacements, sally-ports and the rest, spread through the sandy soil, the musketry ranges, bombing and bayonet schools are of the most recent and efficient type. And the Duke takes a keen personal interest in every man in training, follows his progress in camp, sees him off to the front, and very often receives him, when wounded, in the perfectly equipped hospital which the Duchess has established in Woburn Abbey herself.

Here the old riding school, tennis court and museum, which form a large building fronting the abbey, have been turned into wards as attractive as bright and simple color, space, flowers and exquisite cleanliness can make them. The Duchess is herself the matron—in charge, under the War Office, keeps all the records, is up at 5:30 in the morning, and spends her day in the endless doing, thinking and contriving that such a hospital needs.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD.

HUNDREDS OF COUNTRY HOUSES TRANSFORMED INTO HOSPITALS

NOT very far away stands another beautiful country house rented by Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid when they were in England. It also is a hospital, but its owner, Lord Lucas, not at all a rich man, has now given it irrevocably to the nation for the use of disabled soldiers, together with as much land as may suffice a farm colony chosen from among them. The beautiful hospital of 250 beds at Paignton, in North Devon, run entirely by women of American birth now resident in Great Britain, without any financial aid from the British Government, was another large country house given to the service of the wounded by Mr. Singer. Lady Sheffield's hospital for 25 beds at Alderley Park is an example of how part of a country house with all its green and restful surroundings may be used for those who have suffered in the war, and it has many fellows in all parts of England. Altogether, about 700 country houses, large and small, have been offered to the War Office.

But money and houses are the very least part of what the old families, the rich manufacturers, or the educated class generally have offered to their country in this war.

Democracy has gone far with us, but it may still be said that the young heir to a great name, to estates with which his family has been connected for generations, and to the accumulated "consideration," to use a French word in a French sense, which such a position almost always carries with it, has a golden time in English life.

Difficulties that check others fall away from him; he is smiled upon for his kindred's sake before he makes friends for his own; the world is over-kind to his virtues and blind to his faults; he enters manhood indeed as "one of our conquerors," and it will cost him some trouble to throw away his advantages. Before the war such a youth was the common butt of the Socialist orator. He was the typical "shirker" and "loafer" while other men worked; the parasite bred from the sweat of the poor; the soft effeminate creature who had never faced the facts of life and never would. As to his soldiering—the common profession of so many of his kind—that was only another offense in the eyes of politicians like Mr. Keir Hardie. When the class war came, he would naturally be found shooting down the workmen; but for any other war, an ignorant popinjay!—incompetent even at his own trade, and no match whatever for the scientific soldier of the Continent.

Those who knew anything of the army were well aware long before 1914 that this type of officer—if he still existed, as no doubt he had once existed—had become extraordinarily rare; that since the Boer War, the level of education in the army, the standard of work demanded, the quality of the relations between officers and men had all steadily advanced. And with regard to the young men of the "classes" in general, those who had to do with them, at school and college, while fully alive to their weaknesses, yet cherished convictions, which were more instinct than anything else, as to what stuff these easy-going, sport-loving fellows might prove to be made of in case of emergency.

"LOAFERS" WHO MADE GOOD WHEN THE EMERGENCY CAME

WELL, the emergency came. These youths of the "classes," heirs to titles and estates, or just younger sons of the old squirearchy of England, so far as it still survives, went out in their hundreds with the old and famous regiments of the British line in the Expeditionary Force, and perished in their hundreds. Forty-seven eldest sons, heirs of English peerage, had fallen within a year of the outbreak of war—among them the heirs to such famous houses as Longleat, Petworth and Castle Ashby, and the names of Grenfell, Hood, Stuart, Bruce, Lister, Douglas, Pennant, Worsley, Hay, St. Aubyn, Carington, Annesley—together with those of men whose fathers have played prominent parts in the politics or finance of the last half century. And the first ranks have been followed by what one might almost call a LEVEE EN MASSE of those that remained. Their blood has been spilt like water at Ypres and La Bassee, at Suvla and Helles.

Whatever may be said henceforth of these "golden lads" of ours, "shirker" and "loafer" they can never be called again. They have died too lavishly, their men have loved and trusted them too well for that—and some of the working class leaders, with the natural generosity of English hearts, have confessed it abundantly.

And the professional classes—the intellectuals —everywhere the leading force of the nation— have done just as finely, and, of course, in far greater numbers.

Never shall I forget my visit to Oxford last May in the height of the summer term, just at that moment when Oxford normally is at its loveliest and fullest, brimming over with young life, the streets crowded with caps and gown, the river and towing path alive with the "flannelled fools," who have indeed flung Rudyard Kipling's jibe—if it ever applied to them—with interest. For they had all disappeared. They were in the trenches, landing at Suvla, garrisoning Egypt, pushing up to Bagdad. The colleges contained a few forlorn remnants, under age, or medically unfit. The river, on a glorious May day, showed boats, indeed, but girls were rowing them.

Oriel, the college of Arnold, of Newman, of Cecil Rhodes, was filled with women students, whose own college, Somerville, had become a hospital. The Examination Schools in the High Street were a hospital and the smell of disinfectants displaced the fragrance of lilac and hawthorn forever associated in the minds of Oxford's lovers with the summer term. In New College gardens there were white tents full of wounded. I walked up and down that wide deserted lawn of St. John's, where Charles I once gathered his cavaliers, with an old friend, an Oxford tutor of 40 years' standing, who said, with a despairing gesture, speaking of his pupils, "So many are gone—so MANY! And the terrible thing is that I can't feel it as I once did. As blow follows blow, one seems to have lost the power."

Let me evoke the memory of some of them. From Balliol have gone the two Grenfell brothers, vehement, powerful souls, not delightful to those who did not love them, not just, often, to those they did not love, but full of that rich stuff which life matures to all fine uses. The younger fell in the attack of Hooge, July 31, last year; the older, Julian, had fallen some months earlier. Julian's verses, composed the night before he was wounded, will be remembered with Rupert Brooke's sonnets as expressing the inmost passion of the war in great hearts.. They were written in the spring weather of April last, and a month later the writer had died of his wounds. They tell how the fighting man has yet time to feel the spring, and watch the heavens, and the woodland trees:

> The woodland trees that stand together
> They stand to him each one a friend;
> They gently speak in the windy weather;
> They guide to valley and ridge's end.
> The kestrel hovering by day
> And the little owls that call by night,
> Bid him be swift and keen as they
> As keen of ear, as swift of sight.
> The blackbird sings to him, "Brother, brother.
> If this be the last song you shall sing
> Sing well, for you may not sing another;
> Brother, sing."

Noted Families of England Give Their Best to Country

And when the burning moment breaks,
And all things else are out of mind
And only joy of battle takes
Him by the throat and makes him blind,

Through joy and blindness he shall know,
Not caring much to know, that still
Nor lead nor steel shall reach him, so
That it be not the Destined Will.

The thundering line of battle stands,
And in the air Death moans and sings;
But Day shall clasp him with strong hands,
And Night shall fold him in soft wings.

Another son of Oxford, Gilbert Talbot, will stand to many as the type of youth with all its treasure of life and promise unspent, poured out like spikenard at the feet of England. Already assured, at Oxford, of a brilliant career in politics, a fine speaker, a hard worker, possessing by inheritance the charm of two families, always in the public eye and ear, and no less beloved than famous, he had just landed in the United States when the war broke out. He was going around the world with a friend, youth and ambition high within him. He turned back without a moment's hesitation, though soldiering had never been at all attractive to him, and after his training went out to France. He was killed in Flanders in July last. His elder brother, an army chaplain, and ex-Balliol tutor, crawled out in the dark into that deadly space between the lines, where Gilbert lay, groped till he found the curly head, and knew that all was over.

Of Charles Alfred Lister, Lord Ribblesdale's eldest son, an Oxford friend says: "There were almost infinite possibilities in his future." He was twice wounded at the Dardanelles, was then offered a post of importance in the Foreign Office, refused it and went back to the front—to die. But among the hundreds of memorial notices issued by the Oxford Colleges, the same note recurs and recurs of unhesitating, uncalculated sacrifice. Older men and younger men, don and undergraduate, lads of 19 and 20, and those who were already schoolmastering or practicing at the bar or in business, they felt no doubts, they made no delays. Their country called; and none failed in that great adsum.

Story Cambridge Has to Tell.

Cambridge, of course, has the same story to tell. One takes the short, pathetic biographies almost at random from the ever-lengthening record.

Capt. J. Lusk, Sixth Cameronians, was already director of an important steel works, engaged in Government business when war broke out, and might have honorably claimed exemption. Instead, he offered himself at once on mobilization, and went out with his battalion to France last spring. On the 15th of June, at Festubert, he was killed in volunteering to bring what was left of a frightfully battered battalion out of action.

"What seems to me my duty as an officer," he once wrote to a friend, "is to carry my sword across the barriers of death clean and bright."

"This," says the friend, who writes the notice, "he has done."

Lieut. Le Blanc Smith of Trinity, machine gun officer, was struck in the forehead by a sniper's bullet while reconnoitering. His General and brother officers write: "He was a very fine young officer. Everyone loved him. His men would do anything for him." And the Sergeant of his machine gun brigade says: "Although only a non-commissioned officer myself, I feel I have lost my brother, because he was so awfully good and kind to me and us all." Lieut. Hamilton, aged 25, says in a last letter to his father: "Just a line while the beginning of the great battle is going on. It is wonderful how peaceful one feels amid it all. Any moment one may be put out of action, but one does not worry. That quiet time alone with God at the holy communion was most comforting." Immediately after writing these words, the writer fell in action.

Capt. Clarke, a famous Cambridge athlete, President of the C. U. A. C., bled to death—according to one account—from a frightful wound received in the advance near Hooge on Sept. 25 last. His last recorded act—that traditional soldier-act of the bravest and kindest—was to give a drink from his flask to a wounded private.

Of the general action of Cambridge men, the Master of Christ's writes: "Nothing has been more splendid than the way the young fellows have come forward; not only the athletes and the healthy, but in all cases the most unlikely men have rushed to the front, and have done brilliantly. The mortality, however, has been appalling. In an ordinary war, one loses one killed to eight or nine wounded, but in this war the number of Cambridge men killed and missing almost equals the number of wounded."

Of the effect upon the university an eyewitness says "Of course, the colleges are absolutely ruined. Eighty per cent of the college rooms are vacant. Rows and rows of houses in Cambridge are to let. All the junior fellows are in service in one capacity or another, and a great many of the seniors are working in Government offices or taking school posts," so that the school education of the country may be carried on. Altogether, nearly 12,000 Cambridge men are serving; 980 have been wounded, 780 have been killed, 92 are missing.

"He Led Us all the Way!"

As to one's friends and kinsfolk, let me recall the two gallant grandsons of my dear old friend and publisher, George Murray Smith, the original publisher of Jane Eyre, friend of Charlotte Bronte, and creator of the "Dictionary of National Biography."

The elder one, who had just married before going out, fought all through the retreat from Mons, and fell in one of the early actions on the Flanders front. "He led us all the way," said one of his men afterwards. All the way!—through the immortal rear guard actions of August, 1914, only to fall, when the tide had turned, and the German onslaught on Paris had been finally broken!

"In all my soldiering," writes a brother officer, "I have never seen a warmer feeling between men and their officer." "Was he not," asks a well-known Eton master, "that tall, smiling, strong, gentle-mannered boy at White-Thomson's," possessing an "affectionate regard and feeling for others which boys as boys, especially if strong and popular don't always, or indeed, often possess?" The poor parents were uncertain as to his fate for many weeks, but he finally died of his wounds in a hospital behind the German lines.

Then, little more than six months later, came the second blow. Geoffrey, the younger brother, aged 19, fell on September 29, near Vermelles. Nothing could be more touching than the letters from officers and men about this brave, sweet-tempered boy. "Poor old regiment!" writes the Colonel to the lad's father. "We were badly knocked about and I brought out only three officers and 375 men, but they did magnificently, and it was thanks to officers like your son, who put the honor of the regiment before all thought of fatigue or personal danger—such a gallant lad! We all loved him."

A private, the boy's soldier servant who fought with him, writes, "I wish you could have seen him in that trench. * * * All the men say that he deserved the V. C. . . . I don't know if we are going back to those trenches any more, but if we do, I am going to try and lay Mr. Geoffrey to rest in some quiet place * * * I cannot bear to think that I shall not be able to be with him any more."

Her Nephew Fell at Bailleul.

But how they crowd upon the mind—the "unreturning braves!" Take our friends and neighbors in this quiet Hertfordshire country. All round us the blows have fallen—again and again the only son—some from two brothers out of three—the most brilliant—the best beloved. And I see still the retreating figure of a dear nephew of my own as he vanished under the trees waving his hand to us in March last.

A boy made of England's best, who after two years in Canada, and at the beginning of what must have been a remarkable career, heard the call of the mother country and rushed home at once. He was transferred to an English regiment, and came to say good-by to us in March. It was impossible to think of Christopher's coming to harm—such life and force, such wisdom and character also, in his strong handsome face, and thoughtful eyes! We talked of the future of Canada, not much of the war. Then he vanished; and I could not feel afraid. But one night in May, near Bailleul, he went out with a listening party between the trenches, was shot through both legs by a sniper and otherwise injured, carried back to a hospital, and after a few hours' vain hope, sank peacefully into eternity, knowing only that he had done his duty and fearing nothing.

"Romance and melodrama," says Prof. Gilbert Murray, in one of the noblest and most moving utterances of the war, "were once a memory—broken fragments living on of heroic ages in the past. We live no longer upon fragments and memories, we have entered ourselves upon an heroic age. * * * As for me personally, there is one thought that is always with me—the thought that other men are dying for me, better men, younger, with more hope in their lives, many of them men whom I have taught and loved." The orthodox Christian "will be familiar with that thought of One who loved you dying for you. I would like to say that now I seem to be familiar with the feeling that something innocent, something great, something that loved me, is dying, and is dying daily for me. That is the sort of community we now are—a community in which one man dies for his brother; and underneath all our hatreds, our little anger and quarrels, we are ready to seal our brotherhood with blood It is for us these men are dying—for the women, the old men, and the rejected men—and to preserve civilization and the common life which we are keeping alive or building."

CEMETERIES LOOTED OF COPPER

WYNONA, Minn., May 13.—With the price of brass mounting to record levels because of the war in Europe, thieves here have broken into houses, plumbing shops and stores, to procure faucets, valued at about $1.35 each. They looted a cemetery to get the valuable metal.

Property worth several thousand dollars has been stolen.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

The secret of keeping young is to feel young. To do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle.

Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective.

They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

The Silk Event of May

Will Take Place Tomorrow

The Unexpected Has Happened

Our February silk sale was one of the surprises of the silk world. Merchants all over the country were amazed and asked themselves how it was done. To repeat the performance in May, three months later, is indeed an incredible thing.

But This Is the Story:

Nugent's SILKS
RELIABLE-QUALITY

One of New York's largest manufacturers of silk suits and dresses was forced to close his shop on account of the great garment workers' strike, which is the most serious in years.

He offered his entire line of silks to us rather than hold them for an uncertain future.

Our first overtures were laughed at.

"What! Sell my silks at such prices when the whole country is crying for silks, and willing to pay a premium to get them?"

But as we are his largest St. Louis customers in ready-made garments, and as we have a great silk outlet, he decided to sell us the entire lot at our price, thus giving us thousands of yards of beautiful silks, and we will offer them Monday

CALL ISSUED FOR MEETING ON THE COMPENSATION ACT

All Interested in Passage of a Workmen's Law Invited to Session Next Saturday.

The Bar Association of St. Louis has issued an invitation for all interested in the passage of a workmen's compensation act at the next session of the Legislature, to meet at 2 o'clock next Saturday afternoon in Room 4 of the courthouse.

Alroy S. Phillips, an attorney, and chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Committee of the Bar Association, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that it was planned to form a conference at the meeting, with the object of conducting a publicity campaign to enlighten all concerned on the subject.

It is hoped that in this manner the manufacturers, workmen and others vitally affected by such a law will enter upon an agreement as to the terms of the bill to be introduced in the next session of the Legislature.

Labor Approves Call.

The calling of the meeting has the approval of the Executive Committee of the Missouri State Federation of Labor, and of representatives of all the other interests affected by such a law.

Phillips said that the failure of the passage of the act during other sessions of the Legislature was largely the fault of the interested parties, who could not agree among themselves as to its exact terms and provisions.

Advocates of such a law say that the present Missouri law governing the recovery of damages by injured workmen is the common law as it was at the time of the adoption of the Federal Constitution, with the exceptions that the defenses of fellow servant and assumed risk were first announced about 1837.

Old System Was Simple.

At the time the Constitution was adopted there were no steam engines and very few power machines for factories. The industrial system was simple, most of the work was done in the home of workmen, and there were very few personal injuries to employes.

Phillips declares that the passage of a workmen's compensation act would only be following the elementary principle of political science that in a progressive society the law should be changed from time to time to meet changing conditions to avoid injustice and discontent.

LA MARECHALE TO SPEAK TO MEN AT 3 THIS AFTERNOON

Woman Evangelist to Tell of 20 Years Experience Tuesday at Third Baptist Church.

A lecture on her 20 years' experience as an itinerant preacher in most of the countries of Europe, will be delivered Tuesday night at the Third Baptist Church by La Marechale (Mrs. Catherine Booth-Clibborn), the noted woman evangelist.

La Marechale was head of the Salvation Army in France, Belgium, Switzerland and Germany for 20 years.

She has been conducting a two weeks' series of meetings in St. Louis under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A. and the Southwestern Bible conference Association, and will close her campaign today She will remain here another week, however, as the guest of Dr. Mary McLean of 4339 Delmar boulevard. She will conduct a "farewell meeting" as a formal closing of the campaign next Sunday night at the Washington and Compton Presbyterian Church. She will occupy the pulpit of the Washington and Compton church at the regular services both this morning and evening. She will conduct a meeting for men only at 3 o'clock in the same church. Her daughter, Victoria Booth-Clibborn, who has been her assistant here, will speak to the children of St. Louis at the same hour in the church lecture room.

CONVENTION OF MILLERS TO BE OPENED HERE MAY 29

In Conjunction Will Be an Exhibit of Flour and Cereal Machinery at Coliseum.

The Coliseum will be filled during the week of May 29 to June 3 with flour and cereal mill machinery exhibited by virtually all the manufacturers in the United States. The twenty-first annual convention of the Fraternity of Operative Millers of America will be held at the same time and every milling state will be represented by large delegations. It is expected that there will be 5000 in attendance.

The convention was obtained by the St. Louis Convention and Publicity Bureau, after strong competition from other cities. The machinery exposition is in charge of William Essmueller, John W. Cornelius and Frank E. Eichler.

Wheat will be made into flour on newly designed machines and bread and flour will be baked by laboratories. The convention will include technical discussions relating to the processes of manufacture, lectures on efficiency methods and operations and the industrial betterment of employes.

COURT REFUSES TO UPHOLD PARDON MADE BY GOV. HAYS

Prosecution Contended That the Clemency Granted Was Obtained Through Political Deal.

PARAGOULD, Ark., May 13.—Circuit Judge J. H. Gautney has sustained the contention of Prosecuting Attorney Huddleston that a pardon issued to Eugene Siggers by Gov. George W. Hays is ineffective, and the appeal of Siggers from a fine of $50 and sentence to two days in jail by a Justice of the Peace was ordered to proceed to trial. The ruling took place when counsel for Siggers moved that the case be dismissed because of the pardon having been granted.

Recently the grand jury returned indictments against several men for violation of the corrupt practices law, and this is followed by the explanation that the charge rests upon their having induced Gov. Hays to pardon Siggers on his promise to support a certain candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor in the recent primary.

It is not charged that the Governor exacted this promise from Siggers or that he knew of the offer of clemency as a reward for his support of the candidate referred to, but it is alleged that the men indicted, after making the deal with Siggers, obtained the pardon.

To End Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength) and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.—ADV.

PIMPLES ON FACE BURN AND ITCH

Became Worse and Worse. Face Disfigured. In Blotches. Were Red and Scaled Over.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"I had pimples on my face which gradually became worse and worse all the time. They burned and itched and I would wake up often at night and my face would burn dreadfully and it was disfigured for the time being. At first the pimples were in blotches but gradually scattered, and they were red and festered and also scaled over.

"Then I got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment. At first I put the Cuticura Ointment on and then I bathed my face with warm water and Cuticura Soap, and I had not used them more than two weeks till I noticed a change and now my face is entirely healed." (Signed) Miss Marie Christiansen, Route 3, Neola, Iowa, July 25, 1915.

CONSTIPATION REMEDY AND BLOOD PURIFIER IN SULPHERB TABLETS

(NOT SULPHUR)

Grandmother's Old Fashioned Spring Tonic

Cleans, purifies and strengthens the blood stream, and through the blood gives health to the whole system.

Do you remember long ago that your grandmother or your great-grandmother prepared a mixture of sulphur, molasses and cream of tartar and had you eat it with a spoon.

Ough! Tasted awful, didn't it. But if you ate enough it would surely do the work.

Well. HERE WE HAVE IT. The same old remedy, prepared in an up-to-date, scientific manner, in SULPHERB TABLETS. They overcome constipation, free the bowels and blood of poisonous wastes and put the blood and entire system in tip-top condition.

Men, women and children may take these tablets. They act in natural manner, without pain or unpleasantness, and results are sure. They give immediate benefit and permanent relief from constipation and blood disorders.

Sulpherb Tablets (not sulphur) may be purchased at all drug stores. ADV.

'AMERICAN LEGION' TO LEAVE CANADA SOON FOR ENGLAND

Semi-Officially Announced They Will Go With Next Transport of Soldiers.

EAGER TO GET TO FRONT

They Have Chafed at Rigidity of Caste System Under Adopted Colors.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TORONTO, May 13.—Semi-official announcement is made that the Ninety-seventh Battalion, the "American Legion," will be included in the next transport of Canadian soldiers over-seas. This is glad news to the restless spirits from across the border who have put in a grinding winter at drill at the Toronto exhibition grounds.

It is said the men of the legion have raised little objection to the practical work of their training period but there are rumors that they have found their ceremonial duties a little irksome.

"Too much of this saluting business," was the complaint of a lanky Texan in reply to a question.

Canadians no doubt believe their army is a pretty democratic institution. But the fact is that, modeled as it is after the British army, caste is pretty rigidly stratified. Perhaps not more so than in the American army, but apparently some of the Americans expected to find things here a little more free and easy than they are.

Rigidity Increasing.

The present tendency, unfortunately, is toward a more rigid application of the caste system. Sir Max Aitkin, the Canadian official eyewitness, relates that in the early days of the Canadians in Flanders a runner with a message was dispatched by Lieutenant-Colonel Currie of the Fifteenth battalion. The messenger was lost for several days and then the Colonel received the following note:

Mr. Dear Colonel Currie: I am so sorry that you will be annoyed with me for not bringing back a receipt for the message which you sent to headquarters by me. I delivered the message all right, but on the way back with a receipt I was hurt by a shell and I am taking this first opportunity of letting you know that the message was delivered. I am afraid that you will be angry with me. I am now in hospital. Yours truly, "M. K. KERR."

It is much to be feared that no such delightfully informal communication would be possible between a private and a colonel in the present much more sophisticated Canadian army.

There are reports that some discontent with conditions almost came to a head in the American legion when the battalion was ordered to go on parade in connection with a visit to Toronto of the Duke of Connaught. The Ninety-seventh is not the only battalion that is getting about "fed up" on reviews and "show" parades, although many of the men like them. At all events they helped fill in the time during the winter months when many forms of training were impossible.

Something Wrong in 84th.

If the Ninety-seventh gets to England with the next contingent it will be ahead of the Eighty-fourth, a Toronto regiment, which was organized several months earlier. There are rumors of something wrong and a pending shake-up in the Eighty-fourth before it will get away.

The unexpectedly early adoption of general conscription in England is bound to stimulate conscription agitation in Canada. Quebec is the great stumbling block. And it will not be surprising if the conscriptionists modify their new campaign by proposing to exempt Quebec, as the United Kingdom has exempted Ireland.

There is much that is parallel in Quebec and Ireland. There is a similar sense of injustice of a race held subject, which the genius of Government in the imperial Parliament, resourceful as it has often been, or the limits of Canadian statesmanship has been powerless to remove.

But there is no treason in Quebec. A dream of a French Canadian republic on the banks of the St. Lawrence has sometimes been discussed in an academic sort of way, but there is no possibility of imitation in Montreal or Quebec of the violence of Sackville street.

350,000 ACRES OF WASHINGTON LAND TO BE OPENED TO SETTLERS

Legislation for Colville Indian Reservation Tracts, July 5 to 22, and Drawing July 27.

SPOKANE, Wash., May 13.—Uncle Sam will throw open to settlement this summer approximately 350,000 acres of land in Eastern Washington. Proclamation for the opening of the south half of the Colville Indian Reservation has been issued by Secretary of the Interior Lane, and one of the last great land drawings will take place July 27.

From July 5 to July 22 registration of those desiring 160-acre farms will be held at Spokane, Wenatchee, Wilbur, Republic, Omak, and Colville, Washington.

The Colville Reservation is less than 50 miles from Spokane. It extends from the Columbia River on the east and south to the Okanogan River on the west. It is about 70 miles east and west, and 40 miles north and south. The elevation varies from 1000 to 6000 feet. The San Poil River bisects the reservation. Toward the north end of the San Poil Valley there are large areas of bench land.

Stock raising, according to Spokane men who have studied the conditions there, is destined to be practiced extensively on the lands to be thrown open to settlement.

The land is classified as timber, grazing, agricultural and mineral.

400 CITIZENS IN CLEVELAND GET A TRAINING IN ARMS

COURSE OF 25 WEEKS

Lectures and Drills Since November; Public Has Helped to Finance the Movement.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., May 13.—A highly successful experiment in preparedness will close with an encampment of 400 citizens of Cleveland at Camp Perry, O., July 1 to 9.

Officials of the Ohio National Guard in Cleveland last November devised a plan to train citizens in the use of arms. The plan was submitted to the Chamber of Commerce, was approved, and a call made for men who wished to back up the preparedness movement. The plan called for enlistments of those willing to attend a lecture and drill each Thursday night for a period of 25 weeks. Enlistments were made through the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Before the opening lecture was given 800 persons had enlisted. During the winter this number dwindled considerably, but recently at the twenty-third lecture and drill, there were 400 men in good standing in the body, all of whom have signified an intention of attending the encampment, which will be carried on as was the one at the Plattsburg (N. Y.) camp, last year.

Every branch of the service has been explained to the men by the best authorities, who were brought to Cleveland to lecture. The lecturers included state militia and U. S. army men, who were astounded at the success of the movement. The men started by executing the most simple foot movements and advanced by easy stages through the regular army drill with arms.

When the problem of going to camp presented itself, it was found each man would need $15.85 for uniform and railroad fare. The men themselves responded with all they could afford, after which the Plain Dealer sought contributions from the public. Many firms responded with contributions of $100 and lesser sums, until a total of $6000 was raised to finance the encampment.

DIVORCEE TO "STICK BY" HENRY STARR, THE OUTLAW

Quits Tulsa for McAlester to Be Near Man Serving in the Oklahoma Penitentiary.

McALESTER, Ok., May 13.—Mrs. Loretta Elwick of Tulsa has come to this city to be near Henry Starr, the outlaw, who is serving a long term in the penitentiary for bank robbery. She was recently granted a divorce, and is said to have become Starr's friend after being left by her husband.

"All I want is something to eat and a place to sleep," Mrs. Elwick said. "If I can make a little extra money it will go to buy Henry tobacco, knicknacks and other luxuries not to be found in penitentiaries. Why, I'd work my hands off for Henry Starr, because I know he is the one friend I have left. I'll stick by him even if I have to wait 25 years for them to turn him out of the penitentiary."

Mrs. Elwick is said to have become an admirer of Starr after reading a story of his daring.

BUSINESS MEN TO CONSIDER AID TO FARMING IN SOUTH

Implement Manufacturers' Representatives to Meet in Memphis to Look Over Field.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 13.—Some of the largest manufacturing concerns in the United States will have executive representatives in this city Wednesday, to consider the question of how they can best aid in making agriculture in the South more profitable. They are coming as members of the National Association of Implement and Vehicle Manufacturers.

After conference with members of the local Farm Extension Bureau of the Business Men's Club Chamber of Commerce, the entire party will go by automobile as far east as Starkville, Miss., where is located the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College, stopping en route at Holly Springs and Tupelo, Miss.

On the auto trip they will be shown and have explained to them different kinds of farms and soils.

RECORD PRODUCTION OF COPPER

Michigan Output for 1915 Valued at 1,800,000.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The production of copper by the Michigan mines was greater in 1915 than in any previous year. The total value, as estimated by the United States Geological Survey, was $41,800,000, at an average price of 17.5 cents per pound. The total refined copper produced amounted to 238,956,410 pounds, as compared with 158,009,748 in 1914 and with 231,112,228 in 1912, the record production previous to 1915.

The copper mines produced 585,923 ounces of silver in 1915, valued at $297,068.

WOMAN, 20, ADMITS SHE HAS THREE HUSBANDS LIVING

No. 3 Has Her Arrested After She Had Made Affidavit Charging Him With Assault.

CANTON, O., May 13.—Mrs. Anna Hess, 20 years old, has pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy and admitted that she has three husbands.

Mrs. Hess said she was married when she was 13 years old to Clark Arnold, in Cumberland, Md. He deserted her, she said, and three years later she married Harry Devore in the same town. He also disappeared, according to her story, and she came to Canton, where she married John Hess two years ago. All of her husbands are living, she believes.

Her arrest was caused by husband No. 3 after she had made an affidavit charging him with beating her. Both pleaded guilty.

Brothers, Long Apart, Meet in War.

BATH, England, May 13.—A Canadian soldier, recovering from wounds at Prior Park, met a transport lorry in difficulties near the city and offered his services. One of the transport men proved to be his brother, who had left home several years ago and failed to communicate with his folks.

I USE "TIZ" FOR SORE, TIRED FEET

"TIZ" for puffed-up, aching, smarting, calloused feet and corns.

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "Tiz" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "Tiz" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired out—just try "Tiz." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "Tiz." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause foot torture. Get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store—don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel. You can wear shoes a size smaller if you desire. —ADV.

FORMER GOVERNOR HADLEY ATTEMPTS TO TELL "WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH MISSOURI"

Narrow Partisanship and Complacent Self-Praise Should Be Abandoned, He Says—State Needs Better Schools and Good Roads.

Herbert S. Hadley of Kansas City, who was Governor of Missouri from 1909 to 1913, has undertaken to answer the question, "What's the matter with Missouri?" His article, under this title, appears in the latest issue of Reedy's Mirror.

His conclusion is that there is a great deal the matter with Missouri, that it will take many years to place the State where it ought to stand, and that it cannot be done at all unless narrow partisanship and complacent self-praise are abandoned. The biggest problems, as Hadley sees them, are those of education, good roads, equal taxation and sufficient revenue. The article, in full, is as follows:

By HERBERT S. HADLEY.

I HAVE been reading with interest your editorials and articles on "What's the Matter With Missouri?" The article by The Man From Pike, on "Backward Missouri," in a recent issue, calls attention to some conditions disclosed in a recent report of the Federation of Commercial Clubs that are very much to our discredit as a State. There are, however, no new facts disclosed in this report of the Federation of Commercial Clubs. During my administration, I repeatedly called attention to our low average production in corn and wheat per acre, our unimproved roads, our uncultivated lands and our low standing in literacy. Other public man and newspapers for a number of years have pointed out the need of improvement in all of these respects.

It is, however, a satisfaction to know that the Federation of Commercial Clubs has taken up these questions and is going to try to improve conditions. But the explanation offered by The Man From Pike—that the cause of our backwardness is because we have had too many lawyers and not enough business men in our State government—is another instance of that superficial thinking which has found expression from the days of Jack Cade down to the present time. It does not make any difference what has been one's business or profession before he gets into office. The question is, with what vision and comprehension of existing conditions, with what ability and devotion to the public interests he performs his official duties.

In the beginning, let it be said that one explanation as to why so many things are the matter with Missouri is that ours is a most difficult State to govern effectively. And in making this statement, I am not trying to excuse the derelictions of our present State officials.

The reason why we do not get more "stirred up" over the fact that we rank along with Arkansas and Mississippi in the literacy of our children, that the production per acre of our corn and wheat is below that of most of the adjoining states, is that the people of the different sections of Missouri are more interested in their own affairs than in State affairs.

Agricultural, industrial and social conditions are so different in diferent sections of the State that it is difficult to arouse a general interest in State questions. There is a lack of community of interests, there is a lack of what the historian would call a solidarity of feeling. The people of Missouri don't read the same newspapers. The location of the lines of transportation makes it difficult to get from one section of the State to the other.

The interests of Southwest Missouri are markedly difficult from the interests of Southeast Missouri, and the people who live in the Ozark region do not have nearly so many interests in common with the people of the Northwest Missouri, as do the people of Nebraska or Iowa. Kansas City and St. Louis differ as much in the distinguishing characteristics of a large city as almost any two municipalities of similar size that could be selected in the entire country. Thus it becomes difficult to legislate effectively for the whole State or to arouse a public interest in public movements or public questions affecting the interests of the different sections of the State. This, of necessity, impairs the effectiveness of the State Government and imposes the burden upon the local communities.

Sometimes this responsibility is met, more often it is neglected. But the very difficulties of the situation should spur our State officers to strive more vigorously to arouse a State consciousness and pride that would remedy these conditions that are or should be the cause of humiliation to every loyal Missourian. They are not going to be corrected in one year, nor by any one measure.

More Than Land Banks Needed.

Their existence is due to years of mistaken policy and indifference and it is going to take years of patient effort and education along many lines to place Missouri where she ought to be in those regards which make a people happy and prosperous and a State great. A land bank measure or system of rural credits may do some good work, but the benefits to be gained in this way are very much overestimated by the champion of such a system. Conclusions based upon the experience of European countries, where the farmers live in villages and can effectively co-operate, do not apply here.

One of our serious handicaps, one thing that is the matter with Missouri, is our lack of sufficient public revenue, which is due to an ineffectively and unfairly administered system of taxation. Assuming the correctness of the general property tax, no one can defend a method of enforcement that results in property of one kind or property located in one section of the State bearing twice or three times the burden of taxation borne by property of another kind or in a different section of the State.

There has been so much hypocrisy, cowardice and demagogy in dealing with this question, that even well-intentioned men who are candidates for public office are afraid even to discuss it. What one of twelve or thirteen candidates for Governor has had the courage to say anything upon the question of increasing our public revenue or reforming our present system of taxation that really means anything?

The fact is that real estate in the large cities is assessed from two to three times as high in proportion to value as farm lands; and moneys, notes and bonds are assessed from twice to three times as high as other personal property. The result is that the rich man does not return his money, notes and bonds for taxation, while the farmer and real estate owners and the man of small means, whose property is assessed, bear an unjust proportion of the expenses of the Government.

View on Taxation.

We can never know whether our present system will yield sufficient revenue for public purposes, we can never know whether our present system is good or bad until it is honestly and effectively enforced. The people of St. Louis, without regard to political differences, ought to serve notice that they will not support either for nomination or election any candidate for State office who does not give satisfactory assurances that he will try to correct these conditions; that he will at least enforce the law as it is written.

If all of the property of the State was returned or assessed for taxation, and it could and would be if all property were assessed in the same proportion of its value, the tax rate for State purposes could be reduced at least 5 per cent on the $100, and the tax for local purposes could be reduced to at least one-third of what it now is. And we could then have enough money properly and progressively to carry on the work of our State Government. While I do not want to give a political flavor to these observations, yet it cannot be denied that the responsibility for our present situation must rest upon the party now in control of our State Government. The Republican party has not been in full control of the State Government for nearly 50 years.

The Man from Pike is right when he says that we have had too much politics in our State government. There has been too much of a tendency to determine every question according to its political effect. Frequently, Democratic leaders in the Legislature told me during my administration that while they approved of measures I recommended, they did not propose to pass them because they did not propose to let the Republican party get the credit incident thereto. Thus, while the Democrats in the Legislature defeated, during my administration, a bill establishing a Public Service Commission, a State Reformatory and a Board of Pardons and Paroles, they passed these bills with an emergency clause just as soon as all branches of the State Government were in their control.

As a further example of this excessive partisanship in our State government, the people of St. Louis have been repeatedly discriminated against and even punished by State laws for no other reason than their large Republican majorities. They are not even allowed a proportionate representation in the State Legislature. The vote of a citizen in St. Louis amounts to only one-half as much as the vote of a citi- in other parts of the State in electing a State Senator and to about two thirds as much in the election of State Representatives.

Another classic instance of this partisan ship in public affairs is found in the action of the Legislature in defeating the appropriation for the support of the Immigration Commission, for the reason as one of the State Senators explained, that he was afraid that if the appropriation was made, the new citizens who were induced to come to Missouri would vote the Republican ticket. Yet this same "statesman," a few days later, urged an appropriation for wolf bounties, as his section of the State was much troubled with wolves. He apparently failed to realize that the best way to get the wolves out was to bring the people in.

This partisanship, for which both parties ahve been at fault, will decrease in time, particularly if there is a less partisan consideration of public questions by the newspapers. The best way to bring about an improvement of conditions, the best of answers that can be given to the question, "What is the matter with Missouri?" must come from a frank acknowledgment of existing conditions and a general public discussion as to what can and should be done to improve them. In this way, a public opinion can be created that will cause public officials to work for the interests of the State instead of the partisan advantage of the party that elects them.

If we would spend less of our time talking about "Imperial Missouri" or "Grand Old Missouri," with her "rippling streams and bosky dells;" if we would spend less time boasting that "we're from Missouri and have to be shown," and instead see how we can get good citizens to come here and cultivate our uncultivated lands, how we can increase the average production of our fields, how we can decrease the amount of illiteracy among our children of school age, how we can improve the country school and better conditions of life in the country as well as in the city; how we can build good roads without too much of a burden on the local communities; how we can make taxation equal and just and our revenues sufficient for the progressive needs of the State, we will go a long ways towards an answer to the question, "What's the matter with Missouri?"

Begin 10 Days Flesh Building Test

FOR THIN MEN AND WOMEN

Say Weight is Increased At Rate of Three to Five Pounds A Week in Many Instances.

If you are ten pounds or more under weight and would like during the next few weeks to take on several pounds of good, solid, healthy flesh, without in any way interfering with your work or regular habits and without danger to your health in any way, here is a simple, inexpensive and harmless test that is well worth trying:

First weigh yourself. Then with each meal for ten days and each night as you go to bed take a single Sargol tablet. Then weigh yourself again and let the scales tell the story.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixes with your meals for the purpose of stimulating your powers of assimilation, and so make it easier for your blood to accept your food's strength, flesh and fat-making nourishment and turn it into strength, flesh and fat upon your body.

Some people say "nothing can make me fat. I'm built to stay thin." But until you have tried Sargol you do not and cannot know this is true. Many say it succeeds. There are many reports like the following: "I have increased 18 pounds in less than a month," wrote a man from Colorado. Another man who said he had been losing over a pound a week, and was under 155 pounds, gained two pounds the first week taking Sargol and "been gaining ever since." Last report over 170 pounds. Better than 15-pound gain. A lady from St. Louis wrote: "Have gained 16 pounds and am still gaining." Sargol, as a rule, should be taken 30 days or more where results like above are desired.

The tablets are small, easily swallowed, produce no disagreeable effects, contain no habit drugs, are harmless and not at all expensive as compared with results said to be obtained.

NOTE—Sargol, referred to above, is well known as a flesh-builder to Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley's 7 stores, Weipert Drug Co., Judge & Dolph's 3 stores, as well as many other of the leading local druggists, who furthermore sell it on the positive guarantee, as found in each large package, of satisfactory weight increase or money back. In view of this liberal offer and the harmless nature of the remedy. It would seem that all who desire increased weight should be glad to give this method a trial.—ADV.

CANADIANS ARE CONSIDERING PLANS FOR CONSCRIPTION

Recruiting in Manitoba and Many Other of the Provinces Is Now at a Low Ebb.

By Associated Press.

WINNIPEG, Can., May 13.—Recruiting in this and many other provinces of Canada is at low ebb, according to authorities here, and the feeling is growing that only conscription will bring forth the number of men desired by government officials.

During March recruiting figures for this district were the largest recorded in a like period since the opening of the war, while the figures for April were the lowest.

Various plans have been resorted to in an effort to stimulate recruiting, but with little effect. Certain units are offering recruiting privates a day's holiday for every recruit they bring in and others have put up cash prizes of from $1 to $2 for every man recruited.

Women Are Aiding.

Through the recruiting organization of the 203rd Battalion, every woman in New Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan provinces has been asked to aid in the recruiting campaign. With the aid of various sub-committees, they are asking their friends who have male relatives eligible for military service the following questions:

"You have read what the Germans did in Belgium? Have you thought what they would do if they invaded this country?

"Do you realize the safety of your home and children depends on our getting more men NOW?

"One word, 'Go,' from you may send another man to fight for our king and country. Do you realize that?

"When war is over and your son or husband is asked what he did for his country, must he hang his head because you would not let him go?"

Failure of the province of Quebec to recruit more than 6000 men, despite its male population of 1,000,000, has sharpened the desire for conscription in other provinces. At a recent meeting here, Chief Justice Mathers, president of the Recruiting League, presented some striking figures and said that the 500,000 men required for active service from Canada represented 13 per cent of the total male population of Canada, which is 3,821,070, according to the last census.

Quebec Falls Short.

Quebec had a male population of 1,011,247 at the last census, Chief Justice Mathers said. Thirteen per cent equals 131,462. As only 5,937 have enlisted, the province should enlist an additional 125,525.

In Military District No. 10, in which Winnipeg is located, the census shows 584,079 males, 13 per cent of which is 75,930. Since this district has recruited 63,196 men, it needs but 12,744 to contribute its proportionate share.

Ontario province has recruited more than 68,000 men.

A special commitee is considering six different methods whereby an enforced military service might be obtained. They are:

Dominion-wide conscription.

Conscription insofar as Canada is concerned, exclusive of Quebec.

Local option; conscription by provinces.

Local option; conscription by municipalities.

Dominion-wide registration of males.

Registration of males by provinces.

south of us. In that wood the Germans had also planted their guns on the day of battle. They had swept the trenches where I stood from three sides. Plainly it had been a warm corner. But the French had held on. Their commander had received a verbal order to retreat. He insisted that it should be put in writing, and this took time. The order came. It had to be obeyed, but he obeyed slowly. Reluctantly the men left the trenches they had held so long. They slipped southward along the road by which we had come. But seddenly their rear guards discovered the Germans were also retreating. So the French came back and the line of St. Geneveive was held, the northern door to Nancy was not forced.

Looking down again, it was not difficult to reconstitute that German assault, made at night. The thing was so simple the civilian could grasp it. A road ran through the valley and along it the Germans had formed; the slope they had to advance up was gentle, far more gradual than that of San Juan. They had been picked troops selected for a forlorn hope, and they had come back four times. The next morning the whole forest had been filled with dead and dying. Not less than a division—20,000 men—had made the terrible venture. Now there was a strange sense of emptiness in the country; war had come and gone, left its graves, its trenches, its barbed wire entanglements; but these were all disappearing already. On this beautiful spring morning it was impossible to feel the reality of what happened here, what was happening now, in some measure, five miles or more to the north. Nature is certainly the greatest of all pacifists; she will not permit the signs of war to endure nor the mind to believe that war itself has existed and exists.

FROM Ste. Genevieve we went to the Grand Mont d'Amance, the most famous point in all the Lorraine front, the southeast corner of the Grand Courrone, as Ste. Genevieve is the northern. Here, from a hill some 1300 feet high, one looks eastward into the promised land of France—into German Lorraine. In the early days of August the great French invasion, resting one flank upon this hill, the other upon the distant Vosges, had stepped over the frontier. One could trace its route to the distant hills among which it had found disaster.

In these hills the Germans had hidden their heavy guns, and the French, coming under their fire without warning, unsupported by heavy artillery, which was lacking to them, had broken. Then the German invasion had rolled back. You could follow the route. In the foreground the little Seille River could be discerned; it marked the old frontier. Across this had come the defeated troops. They had swarmed down the low, bare hills; they had crossed and vanished in the woods just at my feet; these woods were the Forest of Champenoux. Into this forest the Germans had followed by the thousand; they were astride the main road to Nancy, which rolled white and straight at my feet. But in the woods the French rallied. For days there was fought in this stretch of trees one of the most terrible of battles.

As I stood on the Grand Mont I faced almost due east. In front of me and to the south extended the forest. Exactly at my feet the forest reached up the hill and there was a little cluster of buildings about a fountain. All was in ruins, and here, axactly here, was the high-water mark of the German advance. They had occupied the ruins for a few moments and then had been driven out. Elsewhere they had never emerged from the woods; they had approached the western shore, but the French had met them with machine guns and "75s." The brown woods at my feet were nothing but a vast cemetery—thousands of French and German soldiers slept there.

In their turn the Germans had gone back. Now, in the same woods, a French battery was shelling the Germans on the other side of the Seille. Under the glass I studied the little villages unfolding as on a map; they were all destroyed, but it was impossible to recognize this. Some were French, some German; you could follow the line, but there were no trenches; behind them French shells were bursting occasionally and black smoke rose just above the ground.

Thousands of men faced each other less than four miles from where I stood, but all that there was to be detected were the shell-bursts; otherwise one saw a pleasant country, rolling hills, mostly without woods, bare in the spring, which had not yet come to turn them green. In the foreground ran that arbitrary line Bismarck had drawn between Frenchmen 46 years before—the frontier—but of natural separation there was none. He had cut off a part of France, that was all, and one looked upon what had been and was still a bleeding wound.

Kaiser Legends Exploded.

I ASKED the French commandant about the various descriptions made by those who have written about the war. They have described the German attack as mounting the slope of the Grand Mont, where we stood. He took me to the edge and pointed down. It was a cliff almost as steep as the Palisades. "C'est une blague," he smiled. "Just a story." The Germans had not charged here, but in the forest below, where the Nancy road passed through and enters the valley of the Amezeule. They had not tried to carry, but to turn the Grand Mont. More than 200,000 men had fought for days in the valley below. I asked him about the legend of the Kaiser, sitting on a hill, waiting in a white uniform with his famous escort, waiting until the road was clear for his triumphal entrance into the capital of Lorraine. He laughed. I might choose my hill; if the Emperor had done this thing, the hill was "over there," but had he? They are hard on legends at the front, and the tales that delight Paris die easily on the frontiers of war.

But since I had asked so much about the fighting my Commandant promised to take me in the afternoon to the point where the struggle had been fiercest, still further to the south, where all the hills break down and there is a natural gateway from Germany into France, the beginning of the famous Charmes Gap, through which the German road to Paris from the east ran, and still runs. Leaving Nancy behind us, and ascending the Meurthe valley on the eastern bank, turning out of it before Saint Nicholas du Pont, we came presently to the most completely war-swept field that I have ever seen. On a perfectly level plain the little town of Haraucourt stands in sombre ruins. Its houses are nothing but ashes and rubble. Go out of the village toward the east and you enter fields pockmarked by shell fire. For several miles you can walk from shell hole to shell hole. The whole country is a patchwork of these shell holes. At every few rods a new line of old trenches approaches the road and wanders away again. Barbed wire entanglements run up and down the gently sloping hillsides.

PRESENTLY we came out upon a perfectly level field. It was simply torn by shell fire. Only half-filled trenches wandered aimlessly about, and beyond, under a gentle slope, the little village of Courbessaux stood in ruins. The Commandant called my attention to a bit of woods in front.

Calcium's Value in Tuberculosis

As a tonic and remedial agent in the treatment of tuberculosis, this element is being studied by scientists and physicians everywhere.

For more than two decades users of Eckman's Alterative have tested its efficacy in such cases, for calcium chlorid is one of the chief constituents of this preparation, which has produced beneficial results in thousands of instances. And in this form it is so combined as to be easily assimilated.

If you are thus afflicted, a trial may prove this to be just what is needed to assist Nature in bringing about a return to normal health.

It is safe to take because it contains no poisonous or habit-forming drugs of any sort.

YOU CAN'T BRUSH OR WASH OUT DANDRUFF

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—ADV.

DENVER. More Than Two-Thirds Across the Continent. NEW YORK

1819 Miles in 24 Hours by a Hudson Super-Six

An Endurance Record Never Matched By Any Traveling Machine

No man today—if he knows the facts—doubts the Super-Six supremacy.

At first the truth seemed like a romance. Think of one new invention, applied to a light six, adding 80 per cent to its power.

Then official records began to pile up, certified by the A. A. A. The whole motoring world then had to concede this the greatest motor built.

But many men asked, "What about the endurance? Can a motor so flexible, so speedy, so powerful, stand up in years of road use?"

So we asked Ralph Mulford to take a stock Super-Six chassis and, under official supervision, show the world its endurance.

All Records Broken

He took a Super-Six stock chassis—certified by A. A. A. officials.

It had already been driven over 2000 miles at speed exceeding 80 miles per hour.

It had made a mile at Dayton at the rate of 102.53 miles per hour.

And he drove that car 1819 miles (equal to the distance from New York to Denver) in 24 hours of continuous driving—at an everage speed of 75.8 miles per hour.

At the end of that test—after nearly 4000 miles of record-breaking strain—the car when officially examined showed no appreciable wear.

The best previous 24-hour record for an American stock car was 1196 miles. The Super-Six beat that by 52 per cent.

The best foreign-car record for 24 hours is 1581 miles. But that wasn't a stock car. The Super-Six beat that by 15 per cent.

How Long Will It Last?

It will be many years from now before we can tell you how long a Hudson Super-Six will last.

But the records we cite cover the greatest strains a motor car ever met. Many a great engine has gone to pieces under far lesser strain. Years of ordinary driving would never tax a motor like those thousands of miles of speed tests.

Yet the wear was almost nothing.

Certain it is that no man has ever built a travel-machine to compare with this car in endurance.

Endurance Proved

That was the last question—this one of endurance. In all other ways it has long been evident that the Super-Six stands supreme.

Never has a motor of this size shown anywhere near such power. Never was an engine made to match this in smoothness. Never has a stock car recorded equal performance—in hill-climbing, quick acceleration or speed.

Handsomer cars have never been shown. Finer engineering is simply unthinkable, with Howard E. Coffin at the head of this department.

You are getting the car of the day when you get the Super-Six. Every man who knows the facts knows that. And, in view of our patents, rivalry is impossible.

No Need to Wait

It is natural to say, "Let us wait and see" when we meet such radical advancements. We think that nothing can excel in so many ways without falling behind in one.

But not one fact about the Super-Six is left unproved today. Not in one respect has its performance been matched. Not in any way has a rival motor been made to compare with this.

There is no need to wait to get Time's verdict on the Super-Six. The records prove the Super-Six supreme. A half-hour's ride without those records would convince any man of the fact.

Thousands of these cars are now running. You will find them in every locality. And every owner will tell you that he never meets a car to compare with his, in looks or performance.

These are things to consider when you buy a car.

"The Germans had their machine guns there," said he. "We didn't know it, and a French brigade charged across this field. It started at 8:15, and at 8:30 it had lost more than 3000 out of 6000. Then the Germans came out of the woods in their turn and our artillery back at Haraucourt caught them and they lost 3500 men in a quarter of an hour. Along the roadside were innumerable graves. We looked at one. It was marked: "Here 196 French." Twenty feet distant was another; it was marked: "Here 196 Germans." In the field where we stood I was told some 10,000 men are buried. They were buried hurriedly, and even now when it rains arms and legs are exposed.

Two years had passed, almost two years, since this field had been fought for. The Germans had taken it. They had approached Haraucourt, but had not passed it. This was the center and the most vital point in the Lorraine battle. What Foch's troops had done about La Fere Champenoise, those of Castelnau had done here. The German wave had been broken, but at what cost? And now, after so many months the desolation of war remained. But yet it was not to endure. Beside the very graves an old peasant was plowing, guiding his plow and his horses carefully among the tombs. Four miles away more trenches faced each other and the battle went on audibly, but behind this line, in this very field where so many had died, life was beginning.

Most Wrecked Town of France.

LATER we drove south, passing within the lines the Germans had held in their great advance, we traveled through Luneville, which they had taken and left unharmed, save as shell fire had wrecked an eastern suburb. We visited Gerbeviller, where every structure in the town has been destroyed. I have never seen such a headquarters of desolation. Everything that had a shape, that had a semblance of beauty or of use, lies in complete ruin, detached houses, a chateau, the blocks in the village, all in ashes. Save for Sermaize, Gerberviller is the most completely wrecked town in France.

You enter the village over a little bridge across the tiny Mortagne. Here some French soldiers made a stand and held off the German advance for some hours. There was no other battle at Gerberviller, but for this defence the town died. Never was death so complete. Incendiary material was placed in every house, and all that thoroughness could do to make the destruction complete was done. Gerbeviller is dead, a few women and children live amidst its ashes, there is a wooden barrack by the bridge with a postoffice, and the inevitable postcards, but only on postcards, picture postcards, does the town live. It will be a place of pilgrimage when peace comes.

From Gerberviller we went to Bayon to the Plateau of Saffais, the ridge between the Meurthe and the Moselle, where the defeated army of Castlenau made its last and successful stand. The French line came south from St. Genvieve, where we had been in the morning, through the Grand Mont, across the plains by Harraucourt and Corbessaux, then crossed the Meurthe by Dombasle and stood on the heights from Rossiers south. Having taken Luneville, the Germans attempted to cross the Meurthe coming out of the Forest of Vitrimont.

Routed Army Finds Itself.

STANDING on the Plateau of Saffais and facing east, the whole country unfolded again, as it did at the Grand Mont. The face of the plateau is seamed with trenches. They follow the slopes, and the villages of Saffais stands out like a promontory. On this ridge the French had massed 300 cannon. Their army had come back in ruins, and to steady it they had been compelled to draw troops from Alsace. Mulhausen was sacrificed to save Nancy. Behind these crests on which we stood a beaten army, almost routed, had in three days found itself and returned to the charge.

In the shadow of the dusk I looked across the Meurthe into the brown mass of the Forest of Vitrimont. Through this had come the victorious Germans. They had debouched from the wood; they had approached the river, hidden under the slope, but, swept by the hell of this artillery storm, they had broken. But few had lived to pass the river, none had mounted the slopes. There were almost no graves along these trenches. Afterward the Germans had in turn yielded to pressure from the south and gone back. Before the battle of the Marne began the German wave of invasion had been stopped here in the last days of August. A second terrific drive, coincident with the Marne, had likewise failed. Then the Germans had gone back to the frontier. The old boundary line of Bismarck is now in many instances an actual line of fire, and nowhere on this front are the Germans more than three or four miles within French territory.

If you should look at the map of the wholly imaginary battle of Nancy, drawn by Col. Boucher to illustrate his book, published before 1910, a book describing the problem of the defense of the eastern frontier, you will find the lines on which the French stood at Saffair indicated exactly. Col. Boucher had not dreamed this battle, but for a generation the French general staff had planned it. Here they had expected to meet the German thrust. When the Germans decided to go by Belgium they had in turn taken the offensive, but, having failed, they had fought their long-planned battle.

A City Waiting.

BUT of all the region of war, of war today and war yesterday, one goes back to Nancy, to its busy streets, its crowds of people returning from their day's work. War is less than 15 miles away, but Nancy is as calm as London is nervous. Its bakers still make macaroons; even Taube raids do not excuse the children from punctual attendance at school. Nancy is calm with the calmness of all France, but with just a touch of something more than calmness, which 46 years of living by an open frontier brings. Twenty-one months ago it was the gauge of battle, and half a million men fought for it; a new German drive may approach it at any time. Out toward the old frontier there is still a German gun, hidden in the Forest of Bezange, which has turned one block to ashes and may fire again at any hour. Zeppelins have come and gone, leaving dead women and children behind them, but Nancy goes on with today.

And tomorrow? In the hearts of all the people of this beautiful city there is a single and a simple faith. Nancy turns her face toward the ancient frontier, she looks hopefully out upon the shell-swept Grand Couronne and beyond to the promised land. And the people say to you, if you ask them about war and about peace, as one of them said to me: "Peace will come, but not until we have our ancient frontier, not until we have Metz and Strassburg. We have waited a long time, is it not so?"

CITY CLUB TO ELECT OFFICERS UNDER PREFERENTIAL SYSTEM

There Are Only Two Candidates for President, but Eleven Are Seeking Three Places as Directors.

The preferential system of voting will be used in the election of officers of the City Club, to be held Tuesday. As there are only two candidates for the offices of president, secretary and treasurer, the preferential voting system will not make much difference as to those offices. It will get a test in the contest among three candidates for vice president, and among 11 candidates for thrae positions on the board of directors.

Each member voting will indicate his first and second choices, and there is a column for other choices. If anyone has a majority of all first choices, he is elected; if not, the second choices are counted; and if this does not decide the matter, the other choices are added also, a plurality finally winning if there is no majority. When there are only two candidates, one is sure to have a majority of first choices, unless there is a tie vote; so the preferential system has little chance to operate.

The candidates whose names appear on the official ballot are: For president, Richard H. Calkins, Dwight F. Davis; for vice president, Fred J. Herzog, Duncan I. Meier, Robert L. Morton; for secretary, Robert D. Corlett, David Fentress; for treasurer, Jacob Chasnoff, M. K. Deale; for (three) directors, Henry L. Chase, George K. Conant, Charles H. Diel, Fred B. Eiseman, O. H. Elbrecht, Henry S. Hartzog, Glenn W. Hutchinson, Wilbur B. Jones, Clark McAdams, William E. Rolfe and Roy E. Tilles. There are blank spaces on the ballot, in which members can write the names of other candidate.

Claims Woman's Beauty Depends Upon Health

Health and Vigor Necessitate Regulation of Organs of Elimination.

Skin foods and face creams and powder cannot make a woman beautiful, because beauty lies deeper than that—it depends on health. In most cases the basis of health and the cause of sickness can be traced to the action of the bowels.

The headache, the lassitude, the sallow skin, and the lusterless eyes are usually caused by constipation. An ideal remedy for women, and one that is especially suited to their delicate organisms, is found in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a mild laxative compound, pleasant to the taste and free from opiates and narcotic drugs of every description. Mrs. Gertrude Jordan, 522 North Liberty street, Indianapolis, Ind., says: "It is simply fine; I have never been able to find anything to compare with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. I started using it for the baby and now it is my family standby in all cases where a laxative is needed."

MRS. GERTRUDE JORDAN

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold in drug stores for fifty cents a bottle; a trial bottle can be obtained free of charge by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 454 Washington street, Monticello, Illinois.

CENTENNIAL OF LUXEMBURG IS TO BE CELEBRATED

Pageant and Fete and Other Festivities Lasing 8 Days to Begin Saturday.

TO START WITH PARADE

Speakers Are to Talk of Conditions of Past and Needs of Present.

The settlement of Luxemburg, St. Louis County, will celebrate its 100th anniversary with a pageant and fete, beginning next Saturday and continuing eight days, at Risch's Grove, Lemay Ferry road and Bayless avenue, under the auspices of the Lemay Ferry League.

The celebration will be started with a parade headed by the Jefferson Barracks Military band. A queen to be chosen the coming week will ride in state, attended by her maids and matrons of honor. Business places and residences will be decorated and the people will make it a gala day. The celebration will be kept up through the week and on the last Sunday it will reach its height.

Will Blend Past and Present.

The program will blend the past and the present. Speakers will tell of conditions in early times and others will speak on the needs of the present. One of the speakers will be Chauncey I. Filley, who will give personal reminiscences of Gen. U. S. Grant. Other speakers, including County Surveyor Elbring, will tell of the advantages of good roads and other county improvements. Elbring will speak particularly of the project for the extension of Broadway to the Lemay Ferry road.

The following historical sketch of the settlement has been prepared by the Committee on Arrangements:

"In 1815, when William I ascended the throne of Holland, to compensate him for the loss of territory surrendered to Germany, the duchy of Luxemburg was handed over to him, and he was declared the Grand Duke of Luxemburg. This was shortly followed by the Battle of Waterloo, and in the following year a number of persons who had suffered serious losses in that unsettled and turbulent period emigrated to America.

"After a somewhat stormy voyage, they arrived at New Orleans, and later on arrived in St. Louis in May. They saw a resemblance in the hills and valleys of this section of the country that they viewed from the steamboat (then a recent invention) to their native country, and, securing a tract of land south of the City of St. Louis, they planted their orchards and vineyards along a stream which they named River des Peres, the "River of Our Fathers."

Early Example Followed.

"Although Luxemburg and the surrounding territory is geographically and practically a part of the City of St. Louis today, the vineyards and gardens dotting the hills and valleys show that the example set by these early pioneers has been closely followed by their posterity, until today this territory has the most extensive and small fruit farms in the State."

The committee of arrangements is composed of Christ Buehler, 225 Lemay Ferry road; Joseph Schell, J. W. Jaquith, William Knight, G. F. Massman and William Dunn.

The House of Moll Was 58 Years Old Friday.

The House of Moll celebrated Friday the 58th anniversary of its organization. The announcement was made that the firm's sales have reached the million mark and that each year has shown a decisive increase. The founder of the A. Moll Grocer Co., now at Seventh street and Franklin avenue, was Adolph Moll. The beginning was on Third street between Market and Chestnut streets, in partnership with Henry Heldsieck, each of the partners putting in $450. Moll became the sole proprietor in 1863.

An old invoice, dated Aug. 17, 1863, which Louis Benecke of Brunswick, Mo., discovered among some old papers, affords an interesting comparison of prices then and now. Whiskey was 44 cents a gallon, now it is $2. Salt was $2.90 per barrel, now it is $1.50. Sugar was 14 cents a pound. It is 7½c now. Barley was 10½ cents. Now it is 6 cents. The grade of coffee which sold then for 32½ cents a pound is sold now at 16 cents.

TWO KILLED WHEN GOING AT 100-MILE SPEED IN AUTO RACE

HIS CAR BURNS UP

Few Spectators Knew of Tragedy—Rickenbacher, in Maxwell, Finishes First.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Carl Limberg, an automobile racer, and R. Pallotti, his mechanician, leading the field in the 15th lap of the 150-mile race for the Metropolitan Trophy, were killed when their machine crashed into a guard rail on the Sheepshead Bay Track this afternoon.

Limberg, who had been taking the turn near the very top of the high saucer track, apparently lost control of his Deloge car, while rounding the bend at a speed of more than 100 miles an hour.

Both men were catapulted 100 feet over the rail and crashed to the ground about 30 feet below the driver was impaled on an upright piece of timber and was killed instantly. Pallotti died on the way to the Coney Island Hospital.

Others Unaware of Tragedy.

The machine, one of the three French cars imported for the race by Harry S. Harkness, crumpled under the impact, and burst into flames. The blazing car clung to the rail as the other drivers flashed past without slackening speed, ignorant of the fate of their fellow racer.

A flash of flame and a cloud of black smoke told the spectators that an accident had happened. However, as it occured at the far turn of the two mile saucer, few realized that it marked a tragedy.

Limberg's wife was in the grand stand. As the other cars dashed by, she missed her husband's machine and realized that he must be the victim of the accident. An attendant escorted her from the stand and an automobile carried her to the hospital where she was told Limberg had been taken. Not until she reached there did she learn that he was dead.

Few of those in the stands knew until the race was nearly over that two men had lost their lives.

Eddie Rickenbacher, driving a Maxwell, was an easy winner of the trophy in 1h. 33m. 31s., an average of 96.23 miles an hour for the 150 miles. Jules Devigne, in a Delage, finished second in 1h. 35m. 11s. and Ira Vail, in a Hudson, third in 1h. 38m. 44.68s.

After the accident, Dorio Resta forged ahead and led until the 144th mile when engine trouble forced him to quit. Ralph Mulford led in some of the early laps but was forced to quit by trouble with his engine before Limberg's accident.

New Record in 20-Mile Race.

A new world's record was established in the 20-mile race by Johnny Aiken who won this event in 11m. 16s. The previous record was established on the same track by Rario Resta in 11.24:50. Limberg finished third in the race and Josef Christiaens second.

Limberg was a long distance runner and a bicycle and motorcycle racer before automobile racing became popular. He came to New York from San Jose, Cal., eight years ago as an amateur bicycle racer and later became a professional.

For several years he was the teammate of Harry Grant, the automobile racer, who was fatally burned when his machine took fire on the same track last fall, a few days before the Astor cup race. He raced with Grant in the Indianapolis and Chicago 500-mile races and distinguished himself on the dirt tracks by winning the American road championship.

After the Astor cup race last fall, in which he drove, he was sent to France by Mr. Harkness, president of the Sheepshead Bay speedway corporation and brought back the three new cars, in one of which he was killed.

AIRCRAFT TO DO SCOUTING FROM DECKS OF U. S. CRUISERS

Tennessee, Montana, North Carolina and Washington Will be Equipped for This Purpose.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Rear Admiral Benson, Chief of Operations of the Navy, announced today that plans are under way for the equipment of a division of armored cruisers of the Tennessee class with aircraft to do scouting.

The plan is to equip the Tennessee, Montana, North Carolina and Washington with launching catapults and four hydro-aeroplanes each. While the four armored cruisers are not as fast as the modern scouts of European navies, the aircraft equipment will aid materially to their efficiency in this respect. In time they will be replaced by faster ships.

Rear Admiral Benson expects to have these cruisers fully equipped and in active operation within a year. This is one of many "preparedness" measures which are being worked out by naval experts.

Benson said that nine large naval vessels, including the six older battleships ordered placed in reserve yesterday, will be utilized this year for the naval militia.

DIRECTS FIREMEN BY WIRELESS

New York Chief on One Burning Ship Telegraphs Order to Men on Another.

NEW YORK, May 13.—With two freight steamers on fire in the bay at the same time tonight, "Smoky" Joe Martin, acting Chief of the Fire Department, directed his forces by wireless telegraph, the first time such a thing has been done.

From the wireless room of the steamer California, which was afire at its West Twenty-third street pier, Martin directed the crew of firefighters on board the ship and the fire tugs alongside and at the same time fought a fire on board the steamer Kandahar, which was burning in the lower bay beyond the narrows. Both ships were saved after considerable damage to their valuable cargoes of oil, paraffin flax and cotton waste.

Owing to the great demand for silver in China, which has caused the Chinese Government to declare a partial moratorium in order to prevent a depletion of the reserves, the silver held by the Government is salable at a profit of 35 per cent.

"MERCHANT OF VENICE" BARRED

Not Allowed in New Haven Schools; "Holds Jews up to Ridicule."

The reason given is that the work holds Jews up to ridicule and that children of grammar and high school age are easily impressed.

130,000 MARCH IN NEW YORK PARADE FOR PREPAREDNESS

Demonstration Continues for 13 Hours Over Route More Than Four Miles Long.

FLAG GENERALLY SHOWN

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 13.—This city's attitude toward preparedness was emphatically registered today in a parade of 130,000 men and women over a stretch of more than four miles, through flag-bedecked streets lined with hundreds of thousands of persons, and a lapse of more than thirteen hours.

The first of the marchers started from the city hall shortly before 10 a. m. and the line continued to pass the official reviewing stand at Fifth avenue and Twenty-fourth street until nearly 11 o'clock tonight.

It was a business men's parade as distinct from a politicians' outing. President Charles Sherrall of the Chamber of Commerce, former Minister to Argentine, was grand marshal and he and the chamber had led in organizing the demonstration. The grouping was along occupational lines, instead of party or district affiliations. There were the bankers, the brokers, the lawyers, the jewelers, the real estate men, the metals trade, the white goods, the sporting goods, etc. In those groups were everybody, from president to office boy and stenographer.

Thomas Edison in Line.

One of the most interesting marchers was Thomas A. Edison. He was in the lead of one of the companies of the engineer's division and walked from Washington Square.

This command dispersed at Fifty-seventh street. Accompanying Edison were other members of the Naval Consulting Board, including Dr. Peter Cooper Hewitt, Hudson Maxim, Howard E. Coffin and Frank J. Sprague. Thomas Robins and W. L. Saunders of Edison's staff, also were in line.

Edison had promised his wife and son that he would leave the parade at Eighth street and join them at that corner. But his enthusiasm kept him going and when he reached the spot he waved his hat to Mrs. Edison and son and passed on.

During a traffic halt at Twenty-third street Maxim asked a boy to get him a glass of water. When the urchin had fulfilled his errand Maxim handed the glass to Dr. W. R. Whitney of the Naval Consulting Board, who was about to drink, when the inventor shouted: "No, no: pour it on my head." This was done. Maxim gave his scalp a thorough rub, said he felt much better and gave the boy 25 cents.

Several times Robins asked Edison if he were not going to drop out, but the inventor remarked each time that he was feeling more fit every minute. He betrayed no fatigue and held himself as erect as a West Point cadet. He was plainly pleased by the almost continuous cheering that marked his walk.

Flag Was Everywhere.

Never before in the United States, so far as such statistics are kept, has it been known that more than 92,000 persons paraded to make known their beliefs. The flag was everywhere. It swung, large sized, in lazy curves, from the facades of the great Fifth avenue buildings and the staffs surmounting them and the grandstands. It waved and fluttered from every hand.

Mayor Mitchel tonight, after remaining in the grandstand all day and all evening, said the parade was "enough to wake up the dead—even those in Washington."

For a wonder, the parade got off on time. It was just 9:35 o'clock when the head of the column—Mayor Mitchel and the other officers—left the city hall. It was 10:34 when there passed the reviewing stand at Madison Square the first line of marchers, 20 abreast. From that time there was never a delay, never a halt of more than half a minute or so, until, late tonight, the national guard and the Spanish War Veterans swung by. Throughout the day there was not a single serious accident or serious disorder.

Major-General Wood declared with warmth that it was the finest civilian parade he had ever seen; that he hadn't believed such a number of untrained persons could pass within such a time.

Governor Is Enthusiastic.

Gov. Whitman, who viewed the demonstration from a flag-draped balcony at Union League Club, declared it was the most remarkable example of patriotism he had ever witnessed.

"Speaking as a citizen," he said, "I should say that every New Yorker who saw the parade should have been inspired with pride."

With few exceptions, the marchers carried small American flags. Most of them also wore buttonhole emblems. At frequent intervals came one of the 200 bands and the musicians were the only persons in the civic divisions who wore uniforms.

The women's division, estimated to number between 5000 and 6000, began to appear before the reviewing stand about 6 o'clock. Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr. and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman were among those in line.

Following were the national guardsmen. Cheers greeted the militiamen as they marched by silently and impress-

MAN KNOCKED OFF MOTOR CYCLE BY AN AUTO AND KILLED

Henri Henderson, Manufacturer, and Wife in Car That Fatally Hurts Machinist.

George Matthews, 22 years old, a machinist living at 3107 Sheridan avenue, died at Mullanphy Hospital at 7:40 last night, from injuries received when a motor cycle he was riding collided with an auto driven by Henri R. Henderson, 5568 Waterman avenue, president of the Absorene Manufacturing Co. The accident happened at Grand avenue and Page boulevard at 4 p. m.

Henderson said he was driving north on Grand avenue with his wife, Mrs. Grace M. Henderson, in his car. He declared he looked east on Page boulevard, but saw nobody until he was nearly across the intersecting street.

Matthews was going west on the north side of Page. According to Henderson, he seemed to be uncertain in the management of his machine. Henderson saw him too late to dodge and Matthews tried to turn in front of the auto. When the machines struck, the motor cyclist's hat fell inside the auto.

Henderson was arrested, and released on bond. After his release he went to the hospital to see if he could do anything for Matthews. The latter suffered many cuts and bruises and a deep fracture of the skull. He remained unconscious until death.

LONDON PEACE ADVOCATES AND FOES OF CONSCRIPTION MOBBED

Crowd Hurles Eggs and Rotten Oranges; Sister of Gen. French Assailed.

LONDON, May 14.—An angry crowd yesterday gave the peace propagandists and the anti-conscriptionists the roughest handling they have yet experienced in London, says the Weekly Dispatch.

The peace advocates and the anti-conscriptionists held a secretly called meeting at the Ethical institution. A strong force of police prevented the mob from forcing an entrance, but the delegates upon leaving were subjected to a fusillade of eggs and rotten oranges, and many were injured. The crowd shouted "Germans! Traitors!" and was especially hostile to George Lansbury, the Socialist, and Mrs. Despard, a sister of Field Marshal French.

HAILSTONES, SOME THIS BIG  RATTLE DOWNTOWN

Greenhouses on South Side Damaged; Teams Run Away in Business Streets.

Hail stones about as large as marbles rattled like shrapnel in downtown streets and smashed glass in South Side greenhouses, in the storm which began about 5:30 last evening, and which continued, as a violent rain and wind storm, for 20 minutes. The fall of hail continued more than five minutes.

Most of the hail was east of Grand avenue, and the hail district extended across the river into East St. Louis. The most severe damage done was at the Mississippi Valley elevator, Madison street and the Levee, where the galvanized iron roof was blown into the river, leaving the contents of the elevator exposed to the storm.

Pigeons Stunned by Hail.

One of the novel demonstrations of the storm's force was given on the city hall lawn, where the hail formed a white covering, looking like snow, and remaining for more than a half-hour after the storm.

Pigeons which made their home in the city hall belfry were stunned by the hail, which beat in on their exposed habitation, and a number of them fell to the ground, and were carried away by men and boys. The same thing happened at the old Four Courts' Building.

Two runaways on downtown streets were caused by the hail, and in each case a collision between a horse-drawn vehicle and an automobile resulted. One team, drawing an express wagon, slammed the wagon into two autos on Broadway, with little damage to either. At Sixth and St. Charles streets, a car belonging to Tom Terry of 5648 Maple avenue was struck by another express wagon, drawn by a runaway team, and was damaged $200. On Jefferson avenue, near Lafayette avenue, a delivery horse belonging to R. E. Reinschneider ran into an automobile and was killed.

George Melloh, 43 years old, of 2208 Victor street, suffered the fracture of a rib as an indirect result of the storm. He was working on a carnival booth at Eighteenth street and Gravois avenue, and in hurrying to get out of the storm, he fell, striking a plank.

Florists Suffer Heavily.

Florists in South St. Louis generally reported the smashing of a large part of their exposed glass. The F. H. Weber Floral Co., owning five greenhouses on the South Side, reported that 900 to 1000 panes were broken in all the houses. Its most severe loss was at 4200 Nebraska avenue, where 250 panes of glass were demolished.

Similar damage was reported from the establishment of Fred Pape, 3329 Pennsylvania avenue; William Kruse, 2814 Arsenal street; Andrew Myer Jr., 3218 South Jefferson avenue, and John Walther, 3645 Iowa avenue.

Near Taylor and Maryland avenues, where no hail fell, trees were blown down and wires were laid low. Wires were also down at Sarah street and Westminster place, on Delmar boulevard near Sarah street, on Cass avenue, on Wash street, on South Grand avenue, in the Fairground Park neighborhood and at Jefferson and Clark avenues.

Some large white globes, inclosing clusters of electric lights, in front of the City Hall and the Municipal Courts Building, were broken.

MUNITION MEN TO BE TAXED FOR PREPAREDNESS PROGRAM

McAdoo and Representative Kitchin Agree That No Additional Stamp Tax Shall Be Levied.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—An important conference lasting more than an hour, took place today between Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Representative Kitchin of North Carolina, majority leader of the House. The administration's shipping bill and the plan to raise the revenue that will be required as a result of the preparedness program were the subjects discussed. It was announced that a rule would be presented in the House Tuesday providing for five hours' general debate on the shipping bill with an hour devoted to a discussion of the rule.

In so far as the revenue plan is concerned, it was definitely determined that the additional money will be derived from the following sources:

Inheritance tax, increase on incomes and a tax on the manufacture of munitions of war.

It was determined not to levy any additional stamp taxes or to tax gasoline, checks or other negotiable paper. It was pointed out that on the eve of a presidential and congressional campaign, stamp taxes might prove a boomerang to the party in power and cause discontent among the voters of the country. The plan has the approval of President Wilson.

A. B. C. SAID TO FAVOR ANY U. S. MOVE AS TO MEXICO

South and Central American States Declared to Have Given Assurances to Washington.

NEW YORK, May 13.—A dispatch to the Sun from Washington says:

"The American Government has received unofficial assurances from the Governments of Argentine, Brazil, Chile, Bolivia, Uruguay and Guatemala that they will interpose no objection if the United States finds it necessary to intervene in Mexico.

"Although the source of the information cannot be disclosed, it can be stated authoritatively that not only have these six Latin-American Powers signified their willingness to keep hands off, but their informal assurances have gone so far as to indicate their willingness to back up the United States with moral support."

U. S. TELLS SANTO DOMINGO REBELS TO QUIT THE CAPITAL

Must Evacuate Today, American Minister Says, or City Will Be Taken by Force.

SANTO DOMINGO, May 13.—W. W. Russell, the American Minister, today notified leaders of the rebels holding Santo Domingo City that unless the city was evacuated by Sunday morning it would be taken by force.

Diplomatic and consular representatives here have received notification to this effect.

A delegation of Congressmen visited Minister Russell last night and informed him that Congress could exercise no authority so long as the rebel leaders were permitted to remain in the country. Russell was asked to bring about the expulsion of the rebel leaders.

Forest Fire Burns Over 2500 Acres.

SANTA FE, N. M., May 13.—A forest fire burned 2500 acres in the Jemez division of the Santa Fe National Forest, and on adjoining lands of the Baca location and the Santa Fe Clara Indian Reservation, 50 miles west of here, last night. A force of 16 forest rangers and employes extinguished the fire early today.

LANGHORNE, 50 MILES IN COAHUILA, WAITS FOR HELP

Three Troops of Cavalry to Aid Him in Chase After Glenn Springs Raiders.

EL PASO, Tex., May 13.—Two attempts were made tonight to destroy Fort Bliss by fire. The warehouse in which guns and stores are kept was set on fire at 11:30 and later the cavalry stables east of the fort were found on fire. Great damage was done. It is believed by officers that the fires were the work of Mexican incendiaries.

MARATHON, Tex., May 13.—Fifty miles south of the Mexican border from Boquillas, Major Langhorne halted his dash after the Glenn Spring and Boquillas raiders, there to await the arrival of Col. F. W. Sibley and three troops of the 14th Cavalry.

Earlier in the day advance scouts of Maj. Langhorne's force of 200 men, met with Mexican cowboys, and from them learned that the bandits were concentrated about 50 miles southward in Coahuila, and numbered more than 500. Upon receipt of this news, Maj. Langhorne sent a courier to advise Col. Sibley, commander of the expedition.

From an authoritative scource it was learned that Col. Sibley had decided to cross with the 14th Cavalry, leaving a small garrison at Boquillas, the sub-base, and push on with all speed in the hope that Maj. Langhorne would not attack until he arrived.

Before fording the Rio Grande, Col. Sibley is said to have telegraphed Gen. Funston, now at San Antonio, asking for more troops for the expedition.

Otis Aultman, an American, arrived here tonight from Boquilla with details of Maj. Langhorne's second invasion of Mexico, which was made Thursday evening at 6 o'clock from San Vicente, 6 miles west of Boquillas.

Details of Invation.

Aultman's story to the Associated Press follows:

Maj. Langhorne's arrangements to exchange his Mexican prisoners for Jesse Deemer fell through. Early Thursday afternoon after a conference with Col. Sibley, commander of the second expedition, it was decided to make a quick dash across the river and follow the bandits' trail. Everything was prepared and shortly after 5 o'clock a start was made from Boquillas to San Vicente and from there to the crossing. San Vicente was reached about 6 o'clock and Maj. Langhorne, at the head of his cavalry, plunged through the river to the Mexican side and the chase began. Following the cavalry were three automobiles and two automobile trucks filled with food supplies and forage for the men and horses. Closing up the rear was a long line of pack animals laden with forage, machine guns and ammunition.

"This morning at 6 o'clock, Col. Sibley, with Troops F and H of the 14th Cavalry and a machine gun troop, left Boquillas for San Vincente to take up the trail of Maj. Langhorne. It was Col. Sibley's intention to establish a base 40 miles south of Boquillas and, if necessary, himself and troops to push on, leaving a small guard at the established base. Shortly after Col. Sibley left for San Vincente, two motor trucks and a large animal pack train left to follow him into Mexico."

PEACE ARMY OF 206,000 AGREED ON BY CONFEREES

First of Great Preparedness Measures Will Go to House and Senate on Monday or Tuesday and Is Expected to Pass.

Volunteer Army Proposal Is Abandoned, but Clause for National Guard of 425,000 Retained.

Bill Provides Government Can Take Over Munition Plants and for Reorganization of Army.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The army bill, the first of the great preparedness measures advocated by the Wilson administration, is ready for final consideration in the House and Senate, the conferees having agreed upon its provisions today. Monday or Tuesday the bill will be passed upon by both houses of Congress, and the President will get it soon thereafter. The conferees, at a brief session Monday, will go over the bill to see that the compromise features finally agreed upon today fit in.

Under the new bill, the peace strength of the regular army can never be below 160,000 and may be increased to 175,000. The authorized strength of the army now is 120,000. This does not include more than 31,000 members of the Quartermaster's corps, the medical corps, the signal corps, the Philippine Scouts and unassigned recruits. The peace strength, therefore, of the United States army will virtually be 206,000 men and the war strength, including 5733 Philippine Scouts, 6409 men of the Quartermaster's corps, 7290 men of the medical corps, 3387 of the signal corps and 8750 unassigned recruits, is 254,000 men.

The conferees eliminated the Senate provisions for a volunteer army, but provided for a national guard force of 425,000 men. Instead of the volunteer feature, a compromise bill carries provisions for training camps for volunteers, for whom the Government will provide transportation, uniforms, subsistence and medical supplies. The Lodge amendment providing, among other things, regular army pay for the citizen soldiers while in training camps was adopted in part, but the pay feature was stricken out.

Can Take Over Munition Plants.

The compromise bill provides for war materials in case of war or threatened war. The House provisions under which plants produce or can produce war materials shall dispose of their products at figures satisfactory to the Government, are retained. The bill gives the Government power to take over such plants, if the owners will not sell their products at reasonable prices.

The President is given power under the new bill to appoint a Board of Mobilization of Industry.

The provision which was put in by the House, whereby the Government will obtain gauges, dies, jiggs and the like needs for plants to produce munitions is retained in the bill.

The compromise measure provides for a board of two civilians and three army officers to investigate the Government manufacture of war materials and report by Jan. 1, 1917.

The conferees retained in the Senate bill the vocational education amendment, introduced by Senator Smith of Georgia. The Senate provision fixed 75 hours of training per month for men taking this vocational education. That was stricken out. No time limit is fixed.

The new bill contains the Senate committee provisions for the organization of the army.

"Excellent Bill," Senator Says.

Senator Chamberlain said today that he considers the plan he advocated for a complete organization of the army the most important provision in the army bill. Its adoption means that the army will not be organized on a skeleton basis, but upon a 75 per cent basis of the full strength. This was one of the things demanded by the army officers who helped the Senate committee frame its bill.

"We have an excellent bill," said Chamberlain. "It will greatly improve the army. The Senate confreres did not get all they desired, but to legislate you must give and take. I regret very much that the volunteer army plan had to be abandoned but the provision for training camps, with transportation and subsistence, will mean much for better preparedness. The bill, as a whole, is all right. It is a first-class beginning."

The regular army organizations will be maintained at peace strength and at a moment's notice the President can order it increased to war strength.

The bill provides for 65 regiments of infantry, 25 of cavalry, 21 of field artillery, 30,009 men for the coast artillery and seven regiments and two mounted battalions of engineers.

The aviation corps officers are increased from 60 to 148, including one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, eight majors, 24 captains, 114 first lieutenants.

The general staff has been increased from 34 to 52.

The national guard provisions are those of the House bill. Two national guard officers will have places in the

How U. S. Army Peace Strength Will Rank Among Big Countries

THE following figures on the peace strength of the armies of the larger countries were taken from a tabulation made before the war:

Russia	1,384,000
Germany	870,000
France	790,000
Austria	436,053
China	400,000
Italy	306,000
Japan	250,000
Turkey	210,000
United States	206,000
Great Britain	138,000
Spain	132,000
Switzerland	142,390
Rumania	113,257

bureau of militia affairs. The double oath of allegiance to State and nation, added to the Senate committee bill by the Wadsworth amendment, is provided for.

An important feature is that the bill provides for brigade and divisional organizations and for assigning officers for the organizations.

The general officers of the line are increased by four major-generals and 19 brigadier-generals. The President, when the bill is passed, will have important promotions to make.

The provision for the training of reserve officers is retained. A reserve officers' corps is provided for.

The enlistment terms are fixed at three years with the colors and four years in reserve. But any proficient soldier, on recommendation of his superiors, may end his active service after one year. The three-year term is in accordance with the House bill and represents the idea of Chairman Hay of the House committee, who has always fought the short-term enlistment idea advocated by Gen. Leonard Wood and other army officers. The Senate provided for a two-year enlistment term.

Provides for Nitrate Plant.

The House substitute on the nitrate plant proposition was adopted. The President fixes the site or sites. The appropriation is $20,000,000 and an issue of Panama Canal bonds for the purpose is authorized. The Government is to operate the plant or plants.

Other features of the bill include one for equalization of promotion among the different branches of the service; protection of the uniform of the army; and increase of the various staff corps.

The reduction of the size of the army from the Senate figure of 250,000 peace strength is a disappointmet to Senate members. The elimination of the Federal volunteers is a decided weakening of the bill to meet the wishes of little-army men on the House side.

The reduction of the size of the army in peace time from the Senate figure is less real than apparent, inasmuch as the 250,000 named in the Senate bill was not restricted to the line. The bill contemplates that the figures of total strength named therein both as to regulars and national guard shall be reached in five years.

The provisions looking to use and mobilization of industries in war time, it is believed, will be of great value in case of need.

prisoners captured shortly after the raid, is being used as a scout by Maj. Langhorne.

Deputy Sheriff James Shoemaker of Marathon, arrived here tonight from Boquillas, bringing with him under a guard of four soldiers Macario Alvarez and Regino Garcia, the bandits who guarding seven American mining men after the Boquillas raid, were in turn made prisoners by their captives.

A soldier of a troop of the 14th Cavalry, Cap. Cole, commanding, whose name could not be learned, disappeared from the garrison at Glenn Springs, just before the men were ordered away and up until late tonight had not been found by a posse hunting for him.

ORAL AGREEMENT FOR CO-OPERATION ON THE BORDER

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Indications reached the War Department today that the Scott-Obregon border conference, although officially described as having ended in a deadlock, actually had resulted in closer co-operation between the American and Carranza forces in Mexico, and there were intimations that no written agreement had been drawn by the conferees because they decided more could be accomplished without one.

Gen. Scott telegraphed that Gen. Obregon had indicated a fear as to the effect a formal protocol for continued presence of American troops on Mexican soil might have on Mexican public opinion, in view of Gen. Carranza's demand for withdrawal presented more than a month ago.

This generally was accepted here as explaining the failure of the conferees to go further than an unwritten gentlemen's agreement as to methods of co-operation in the campaign against banditry.

Evidences that this agreement was being carried out came today in official telegrams reporting the movements of both American and Carranza troops. Gen. Scott telegraphed that he had assurance from Gen. Obregon that Carranza commanders had been ordered to campaign against bandits, both about Parral and along the Coahuila-Chihuahua border, in the region of the Big Bend raids. Gen. Pershing reported that in accordance with instructions following the border conferences, he was shortening the American line of communication and drawing in his scouting patrols.

Officials here believe that Namiquipa soon will be abandoned by Gen. Pershing, as his advance field base. His telegram today was taken to indicate early retirement of the head of the American forces to Colonia Dublan. Gen. Pershing also reported that there were no Mexican forces in his vicinity.

With Carranza troops advancing toward the border adjoining the Big Bend region, reports from Gen. Funston indicated that American operations there were to attain considerable magnitude. An entire motor truck company has been transferred from Columbus to Marathon, Tex., to form the line between Marathon, as the base, and Maj. Langhorne's troopers pursuing the bandits who raided Boquillas and Glenn Springs.

While co-operative military movements are proceeding, diplomatic negotiations for a formal protocol covering the American expedition are expected to be resumed next week by Secretary Lansing and Eliseo Arredondo, Carranza's representative here.

Gen. Scott will return Monday from the border to report to Secretaries Baker and Lansing. That Gen. Carranza is waiting for Washington to make the next move was indicated today by Arrendondo and by Special Agent Rodgers at Mexico City. The former said he was awaiting instructions and Rodgers telegraphed that Gen. Carranza had not indicated that he would make immediate renewal of his demands for withdrawal.

Use of the Mexican railways for transportation of American soldiers as well as supplies, probably will be one of the principal points urged by the United States in the negotiations.

The advent of the rainy season in Northern Mexico, impeding motor truck transportation, emphasizes the need for the railways, although it was officially stated tonight that every pound of cavalry forage that has reached Gen. Pershing since establishment of his advanced base has been sent over the railways through private shippers.

That customs restrictions which have prevented shipment of ammunition to Carranza authorities would be continued while the diplomatic discussions proceed also was indicated. It was stated that the policy, which has stopped all munitions shipments across the border since the American expedition was launched had not been changed.

Orders issued today permitting Gen. Pershing to convene general courts martial were explained officially as calculated only to provide a means of dealing with infractions of military rules by Pershing's own men. It was emphasized that the courtmartial authority would not extend to prosecution of Mexican snipers.

The War Department was without confirmation tonight of new bandit operations reported in news dispatches from the border. Renewed activity of Zapata bandits near Mexico City and Villa outlaws near Tamaulipas was reported, however, in consular dispatches. Unconfirmed private reports to the State Department contained rumors that Felix Diaz, recently reported to be fomenting an anti-Carranza revolution in Southern Mexico, had crossed into Guatamala.

Trevino Starts Out to Clean Up Coahuila Bandits.

TORREON, Mex., May 12.—via El Paso Junction, May 13.—Gen. Jacinto Trevino, commander of the military division of the Northwest, in announcing today he would depart next Tuesday for Chihuahua City to take command of the campaign to clean up the bandits of Coahuila, said he hoped the American troops would co-operate actively in bringing the hunt to a prompt termination.

The general said he already was moving large bodies of troops into the infested region.

Gen. Jose Santos has reported to Gen. Trevino from Parral that he has entirely wiped out the Chacon band of outlaws. Twenty-six were killed in a battle, and eleven were captured and executed.

Chacon was the only bandit leader who refused an offer of amnesty.

An intermediate for Canuto Reyes said today that Reyes' people were only waiting for the retirement of the American forces to lay down their arms. He denied that the bandit Contreras is recalcitrant.

The notorious bandit leader, Pedro Cedillo, who had for a long time infested Northern Vera Cruz, two officers and 50 of his men have been killed in an engagement with Government forces under Gen. Eugenio Lopez at Ciudad del Maiz. Fifty of the outlaws surrendered.

Gen. Lopez captured Ciudad del Maiz and in further skirmishing killed Pedro Cedillo's brother, Martin. The 50 captured bandits will be executed. The Carranza losses are few. The battle with the Cedillos is looked upon as the successful beginning of a campaign that will clear Northern Vera Cruz of bandits.

Gen. Nafarrate, now at Tampico, wires Gen. Trevino here that he has taken over direction of the campaign with the exception of the port of Tuxpam. Gens. Domingo Arrieta and Jose Carillo have arrived here from Mexico City. After calling on Gen. Trevenino they departed for Durango, which now has unmolested train service from Torreon.

Military Men at Columbus Discredit Report Villa Is Near Border.

COLUMBUS, N. M. May 13.—Detachments of cavalry patrolling the New Mexico border tonight reported to Col. H. G. Sickle, commanding the patrol, that investigations disclosed nothing to support the rumor from Field Headquarters that Villa was hiding in the mountains of Northern Chihuahua. Military men here were inclined to place no credence in the rumor, which said that Villa had concentrated 1100 men about 30 miles south of Hachita, N. M., and about 40 miles northwest of Ascension, Chihuahua.

Unofficial reports from the field tonight indicated that the backward movement of troops and supplies from San Antonio and other advanced bases was completed and that the expeditionary command today was waiting passively for the next step in the campaign.

Platoons of militia marching overland from Deming reached here today and completed the mobilization of the New Mexico National Guard. No intimation was available as to when the guardsmen are to be distributed along the frontier. Officers of the medical corps here prepared today to inoculate the command against typhoid and smallpox, preliminary to mustering it into the United States service.

Funston Returns to Headquarters to Distribute New Force Along Border.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., May 13.—Major-General Frederick Funston returned to his headquarters here tonight from the El Paso conferences, to begin plans for distributing along the border the additional troops, regular and militia, recently put under his command by the War Department.

Mobilization of the Texas national guard at Fort Sam Houston here has been completed and a number of new officers appointed by Gov. James E. Ferguson. Headquarters had reports that the national guard of New Mexico was in camp at Columbus with a total of 642 infantrymen and 41 officers, and a battery of field artillery comprising 141 men and five officers. Reports from Douglas said the mobilization of the Arizona guard was proceeding rapidly.

HUGHES IS FIRST CHOICE OF REPUBLICANS IN HOUSE AND SENATE AS NOMINEE

Of 237 Party Members, 93 Representatives, 16 Senators Favor Justice—In 31 Favorite Son States He Totals 140.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, May 13.—A dispatch from the Washington bureau of the Chicago Tribune says:

"Justice Charles E. Hughes will be nominated for the presidency on the first or second ballot at the Republican national convention next month, if the overwhelming sentiment of members of his party in the House and Senate, expressed in a secret and confidential poll may be taken as a criterion.

"Of 237 Republicans in Congress the Justice is the first choice of 93 Representatives and 16 Senators, and the second choice in favorite son states of 31, a total of 140 and a majority of all members, despite the fact that 12 other names are voted for, 10 of whom may be considered to be active candidates.

The House Ballot.

"In answer to the question, 'Who is your first choice for the Republican nomination for the presidency?' the House members balloted as follows: C. E. Hughes, 93; A. B. Cummins, 17; T. E. Burton, 16; John W. Weeks, 12; L. Y. Sherman, 11; P. C. Knox, 9; Elihu Root, 7; Theodore Roosevelt, 7; C. W. Fairbanks, 3; R. M. La Follette, 3; James R Mann, 2; William E. Borah, 2; noncommittal, 15.

"On the same question the members of the Senate expressed their preferences as follows:

Hughes, 16; Burton, 2; Root, 3; Roosevelt, 3; Cummins, 3; La Follette, 2; Weeks, 2; Borah, 1; Sherman, 1; noncommittal, 7.

"Of candidates who received votes as second choice in favorite son states, Hughes was the favorite of four in Iowa, six in Illinois, two in Massachusetts, six in Ohio, seven in New York and one in Wisconsin. Burton received one in the states west of the Mississippi River and three in New York. Fairbanks was named by one in Massachusetts and one in Pennsylvania. Mann, one in Iowa, three in Illinois and one in Massachusetts.

Strong in Coast States.

"As first choice in the House, Justice Hughes was given nine votes out of ten in the Pacific coast states of California, Oregon and Washington; three out of four in the Rocky Mountain states of Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico and Utah; three out of seven in Kansas, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota; one in Minnesota, three in Wisconsin, eight out of ten in the border states of Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Maryland and Missouri; three in Illinois, ten out of eleven in Michigan, 15 in Pennsylvania, 14 in New York, 6 in New Jersey, 4 in Connecticut, 4 in Massachusetts and 4 in Rhode Island, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine. In two of the last named states Hughes received no vote.

"Former Senator Burton got three votes west of the Mississippi and 13 in Ohio; Weeks, three west of the Mississippi, seven in Massachusetts, and two in other states of New England; Fairbanks, one in Illinois and two in Indiana; Sherman, 11 in Illinois; Root, one in Minnesota, one in New Jersey, and five in New York; Knox, seven in Pennsylvania; LaFollette, two in North Dakota and one in Wisconsin; Roosevelt, one in Massachusetts, one in Minnesota, one in Nebraska, two in New York, one in Pennsylvania, and another in an Eastern Seaboard state; Borah, two in Idaho; Mann, one in Wisconsin. Several more said they would have voted for the Republican floor leader had he been prominently mentioned as a candidate.

How Senate Stands.

"In the Senate, Hughes received five votes in New England, four in the Middle States, and six west of the Mississippi; Burton, one in Ohio and one in New England; Weeks, two in New England; Root, two west of the Mississippi and one in New York; Cummins, two in Iowa and one west of the Mississippi; LaFollette, one in Wisconsin and one west of the Mississippi; Roosevelt, three west of the Mississippi, and Borah, one in the same locality. Avowed candidates were counted as voting for themselves without formality of an interview. Borah is an exception because not an avowed candidate. His one vote was not his own.

"To the question, 'Who is you second choice as the nominee of the Republican party for the presidency,' the response in both Senate and House was at follows: Hughes 44, Burton 18, Roosevelt 17, Root 14, Weeks 13, Cummins 10, Fairbanks 5, Mann 7, Borah 2, Harding 4, McCall 1 and Hadley 1.

"On the expression of second choice neither Sherman nor LaFollette got any votes. The ballot in the Senate alone was as follows: Hughes 4, Burton 3, Weeks 2, Fairbanks 1, Root 5 and Cummins 3.

"The strength of the last named was confined almost entirely to the states west of the Mississippi. The reason for the falling off in the total figures on second choice is that a large number confined themselves to first preference.

Members Seen Personally.

"During the entire poll nearly every member was seen personally. Secrecy as to names and districts was promised. The short interviews developed great bitterness among a large number against Roosevelt and a few enthusiastic encomiums.

So accentuated was the feeling in opposition to the former President in some quarters that another Republican ticket was promised in the event he were nominated in the regular convention of the party in Chicago.

"Others declared that he would be certain to be the standard bearer.

"Both Senators and Representatives indicated that with both Hughes and Roosevelt eliminated, Burton would appear as a large figure. And as a dark horse in the offing there loomed Senator Warren G. Harding, dependent always upon his making a great speech as temporary chairman of the convention."

BRYAN ADVOCATES DRAWING "PEACE" VOTES FROM G. O. P.

In Signed Article He Says United Republicans Have 1,300,000 Popular Majority.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 13.—In a signed article published today, William Jennings Bryan declares the Democratic party must, in order to win the coming campaign, "move toward peace" and thereby capture the peace element in the Republican party. He begins his article by quoting from a Chicago newspaper's editorial, in which Wilson is called a minority President, in that he received fewer votes than Roosevelt and Taft combined, and says the Democrats must face the fact that a united Republican party will enter the campaign with a popular majority of 1,300,000 votes.

Continuing, he says:

"To the normal Republican advantage must be added the disaffection among German and Irish Democrats. Without attempting to decide whether the President was wise or unwise in taking the course that alienated them, the party is confronted with the fact that this alienation will cost it a large number of votes—enough to defeat the party in several close states.

"From what source can we draw the number of recruits necessary to give the party a fighting chance? From one source and from one source only—namely, the peace element of the Republican party; we cannot draw votes from the war element.

"There is a peace element in the Republican party, as shown by the vote cast for Henry Ford in Michigan, Nebraska and other states. This is the only element to which the Democratic party can appeal, and to appeal to this element it will be necessary to do more than has yet been done."

"If any considerable number of Republicans felt friendly to the President, they would have shown it by writing in his name as their choice when they expressed themselves at the primary.

"If this element is to be conciliated, it must be done by a move toward peace. The opportunity is here. The German Government in accepting this Government's position in the submarine controversy gives as one of its reasons for doing so, its unwillingness to take responsibility for extending or spreading the war. It refers to the fact that it has twice expressed a desire to consider terms of peace.

"The way is open. Will the President take advantage of the opportunity? Failure to obtain peace would bring no humiliation, while success would be of tremendous advantage to him politically, as well as a blessing to this country and to the world. He can at one stroke destroy all the advantage the Republican party now has and make the race on the record of a peacemaker. Will he give voice to the world's conscience—to humanity's hope?"

J. W. Dwight on Tour in Behalf of Hughes Campaign.

CHICAGO, May 13.—Encouragement to friends of "favorite sons" to stand pat with a view to preventing an early stampede of the Republican National Convention to Justice Charles E. Hughes is believed to explain the presence in Chicago today of John W. Dwight, who is in charge of the destinies of Elihu Root. This is said by the supporters of Senator Sherman to be a logical conclusion when it is known that Dwight expects to make a side trip into Indiana for conferences with Charles W. Fairbanks, who is being groomed by the Indiana delegation, and arrangements have already been made for conferences of Dwight with leaders in the Sherman campaign.

"We are making an independent campaign for Mr. Root," said Dwight. "There is a crisis in the country today in international affairs, in industrial affairs, in financial affairs.

"The people will naturally turn to the ablest statesman that they have, Mr. Root. He will have a majority of New York's 87 delegates and he is a sure-enough candidate."

Conference of Loyal Provinces to Be Held at Nanking—Japanese Help Rebels.

PEKIN, May 13.—At the joint suggestion of the Loyalist generals, Feng-Kwo-Chang, Chang Hsun and Nishi Hchung, a conference has been called for Monday at Nanking to consider peace plans and to decide whether President Yuan Shi-Kai shall be retired. Each of the 16 loyal provinces will send one delegate to the conference.

The revolutionists have captured a number of important towns between Tsingtau and Tsinan-Fu in Shantung Province, where they have been operating along the Japanese controlled German railway. The Loyalist troops are helpless because the rebels seek refuge in the railway zone which the Japanese troops prevent the Loyalists from entering. The rebels are shipping big guns, arms and ammunition on trains without Japanese interference.

HAPGOOD MENTIONED FOR OFFICE

Reported That He Will Be Made New York Postmaster.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—That Norman Hapgood, editor and late owner of the defunct Harper's Weekly, will be named by President Wilson for postmaster of New York, is the latest report on the New York postoffice controversy in Washington. A high official of the administration said that the nomination of Hapgood for the New York office is one of the early probabilities.

Hapgood said he knew nothing of any such purpose on the part of the President.

BRITISH TO RESUME BUYING WAR HORSES IN EAST ST. LOUIS

Contract Provides That They Take 1000 Animals a Week—Out of Market Since November

The British Government tomorrow will resume purchasing war horses at the National Stockyards in East St. Louis. Their contract provides that they take 1000 horses a week, for which the commission firms will pay from $185 to $200 a head. The price paid by the British is kept secret.

Although the French and Italians have been taking all the eligible horses they could get for more than a year, the British have been out of the market since last November, for want of ships, it has been said.

More than 200,000 horses have been bought by the allies at the stockyards since the war began, at a total cost of more than $36,000,000.

BRIDEGROOM HELD AS BIGAMIST

Wife Faints When She Hears of Husband's Arrest.

Mrs. Lucille Ord, 20 years old, fainted after being taken to police headquarters yesterday and informed that her husband, T. G. Ord, had been arrested upon the request of the authorities of Gatesville, Tex., suspected of bigamy. She had been living with her husband at 2925 Olive street.

Mrs. Ord was Miss Lucille Hall of Gatesville. Her father, the police were informed, offered a reward of $100 for the arrest of Ord and the return of his daughter. Ord's first wife is reported to live in Houston, Tex.

$42,000 NECKLACE MISSING

Not Known If New York Jewel Was Lost or Stolen.

NEW YORK, May 13.—A pearl necklace valued at $42,000, owned by a woman of this city, has vanished, and every pawnbroker in town has been offered a tempting reward for its discovery and return. Whether the jewels—there were 53 on the string—were stolen or lost is not known.

The necklace is said to have been worn by the owner at an entertainment on the night of May 9. When she returned to her home she put, or thought she put, the necklace in a drawer.

PRESIDENT VISITS HISTORIC SPOTS ON JAMES RIVER

He and Party of Relatives Take 60-Mile Cruise From Newport News.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., May 13.—President Wilson cruised more than 60 miles up the James River today on the naval yacht Sylph, stopping several times along the way to visit points associated with events of the early days of the country and with the lives of several Presidents. It was a trip he had contemplated for weeks.

No important messages came from Washington to disturb the President's outing and he probably will not return to the capital until Monday.

On the naval yacht Mayflower, the President arrived off Newport News from Washington at 7:30 a. m. With him were Mrs. Wilson, Miss Margaret Wilson and a number of relatives. The Sylph was waiting here and the party was immediately transferred to her and started up the James.

Visits Old Mansion.

Passing by Jamestown Island, where were erected statues of Capt. John Smith and Pocahontas, an ancestor of Mrs. Wilson, the Sylph continued to Shirly, the homestead of the old Carter family, where the first stop was made. The President spent an hour on shore visiting the old mansion.

On the return trip the birthplace of John Tyler was passed and a stop was made at Lower Brandon, the home of William Henry Harrison. At Westover, the home of William Byrd, a colonial official, the President planted a popular tree on the lawn in front of the mansion. At each stop the President asked many questions about the local traditions.

Return Made at Night.

The Sylph did not return to Newport News until after 10 o'clock tonight. Mr. Wilson and his party were transferred to the Mayflower and spent the night on board her, anchored off the shipyard here. A British tramp steamer at anchor drifted so near during the night that Capt. Berry of the Mayflower sent an officer in a launch to request the commander to move farther away.

PEACE APPEAL TO PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The American Peace Society met here today and adopted resolutions requesting President Wilson to take the initiative at the earliest possible moment in tendering in conjunction with other neutral Governments, his good offices for the purpose of establishing peace in Europe. "There is evidence," said the resolutions, "that all nations, belligerent as well as neutral, long for a restoration of peace."

George W. Kirchwey, professor of law at Columbia University, was elected president of the society and William J. Bryan, William H. Taft, Andrew Carnegie and Theodore E. Burton, vice presidents.

U. P. SHOPMEN GET WAGE RAISE

OMAHA, Neb., May 13.—Raises in pay of about 5 per cent and amounting to about $500,000 a year was today granted Union Pacific shopmen, after W. Averill Harriman, son of the late E. H. Harriman, had made a personal investigation of the matter. All shopmen of the system will benefit by the increase, which takes effect from May 8.

Two thousand men in Omaha are affected; 800 at Cheyenne and hundreds at Kansas City, Denver, Ogden, Laramie and other shop points. All shops are working nine hours per day with full shifts.

JEWELRY GOES WITH WORKER

Mrs. William G. Wetstein of 5576 Bartmer avenue, yesterday employed a man, who called seeking work, to put in the screens for the summer.

He started on the second floor and worked only about 15 minutes when he went to Mrs. Wetstein and complained of having been taken ill suddenly. He said he would go home for the day and return to finish his work Monday.

An hour after the man left, Mrs. Wetstein went to her home and discovered that jewelry valued at $450 was missing.

DR. DELBRUECK WHO HANDLED GERMAN FOOD SUPPLY QUITS

Vice Chancellor Had Been Severely Criticised for His Direction of Situation.

BLAMED FOR THE RIOTS

Paris Reports Heavy Fighting Near Verdun—Turks Are Defeated.

BERLIN, May 13, by wireless to Sayville, N. Y.—Dr. Clemens Delbrueck, Minister of the Interior and Vice Chancellor, has resigned.

The Overseas News Agency says that Dr. Delbruecke's resignation is due to ill health. He is suffering from diabetes.

Clemens Delbrueck has been Minister of the Interior since June, 1914, when he succeeded Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, present German Chancellor. In the last few months he has been the subject of attacks in the German newspapers on account of the food situation of which he was in charge. Within the last few days the Paris newspapers have predicted that his resignation would be forced by the Emperor on account of the food riots which are reported to have occurred in the principal German cities.

British Repulse German Attacks in East Africa.

LONDON, May 13. — The German forces in German East Africa have been on the offensive against the British expeditionary force under Gen. Jan Christian Smuts there, but, according to an official statement issued tonight, the German attacks were beaten off, the attacking forces losing heavily. The official statement says:

"Telegraphing on May 12, Lieutenant-General Smuts reports that the enemy, having effected a concentration of troops under the personal command of Col. Von Lettow-Vorbeck (commander of the German Imperial troops in German East Africa) in the vicinity of Kilamatinde, made a considerable display of activity in the direction of Kondoa and Irangi since May 3. An attack at the latter place, preceded by a heavy bombardment was attempted during the night of May 9-10, and was driven off with severe losses.

"The enemy persisted in his offensive during the tenth and eleventh, and after sunset on the latter day, made a determined effort against the British left flank, which was repulsed. During the twelfth there were no enemy attacks. Our losses were inconsiderable.

"A report received, but not yet confirmed, is that Belgian forces in Ruinda have penetrated to Kigali, after encountering slight opposition."

Submarine Sank Galgate, Crew Left to Fate, Admiralty Says.

LONDON, May 13.—The British ship, Galgate, sunk May 6, was sent to the bottom by a torpedo from a German submarine, according to a British Admiralty statement this evening. The submarine did not provide for the safety of the crew, the statement declares, and 13 men who were in one of the Galgate's boats are still missing. The statement says:

"The ship Galgate was sunk by a torpedo from a German submarine on May 6, 130 miles west of Ushant. Twelve of the crew in one boat were landed at Brest. Another boat, with 13 men, is still missing. According to the mate's deposition, the ship hove to when signaled to abandon ship. The submarine made no provision for the safety of the crew, which was compelled to embark in boats and was exposed to great risk from high seas."

Heavy Fighting Continues in the Verdun Sector.

PARIS, May 13.—Heavy fighting continues in the Verdun region, but without important changes. The official statement from the War Office tonight says:

"On the left bank of the Meause the bombardment diminished in intensity in the course of the day. We repulsed an attack against our positions to the west of Hill 304. On the slope northeast of Le Mort Homme an attempt at a sudden attack by the enemy completely failed."

Turks Beaten in Fight on Way to Ersingan.

PETROGRAD, May 13.—The War Office statement today says:

"Caucasus front: In the direction of Ersingan, detachments of our regular troops, in conjunction with territorial reserves, following a merciless night attack powerfully organized by the enemy on a lofty range dominating the whole adjoining region, took prisoner in the course of the engagement 30 officers and 365 soldiers of Turkish infantry.

"On the left wing of our army, one of our columns having defeated the Turks in an engagement which lasted two days, took prisoners and captured an undamaged gun, more than 2000 rifles, many thousand cartridges and a large quantity of gunpowder and other material."

Germans Penetrate British Trench, Are Driven Out.

LONDON, May 13.—The British official communication on the campaign in the western zone issued tonight says:

"After a heavy bombardment last night against our trenches between the River Somme and Maricourt, the enemy made three attacks, one of which succeeded in getting into our trenches, but was at once driven out. Some dead Germans were observed on our wire this morning and one prisoner was taken. We lost one prisoner."

JUDGE RASSIEUR IN G. A. R. UNIFORM ASKS FOR RECRUITS

"You Cannot Fight Unless You Know How," Veteran Tells Young Men at Armory.

Former Judge Leo Rassieur, attired in his old Grand Army uniform, spoke at a recruiting rally at the First Regiment armory last night and told the young men present that if he were a girl he would say to any young man asking her hand in marriage: "I want no husband unless he is a man able to defend his country."

The audience, made up of about 200 men in uniform and about 200 young men who are trying to make up their minds to get into uniform, applauded vigorously.

Lieutenant-Colonel L. K. Robbins, who presided at the meeting, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that he was greatly disappointed at the small attendance, but that he believed the speeches of the evening would bring to the regiment the 300 recruits desired. The regiment now has a strength of about 900 men on the rolls. This would be sufficient to make a first-class showing, but there is generally a shortage of 300 men at regimental drill, which must be supplied.

Many Inquiries Received.

Only 12 recruits had been reported up to the time of the rally last night, but the officers of the various companies said that they had received many inquiries from young men regarding enlistment and they believed that they would be able to sign up at least 150 men before tomorrow. The time for enlistment, to enable a recruit to attend the annual encampment at Nevada with army pay the week of July 15 expires tomorrow night.

Walter H. Saunders, an attorney, who was the first speaker, said that the mistakes this nation had made in the past regarding preparedness were no excuse for mistakes that may come now.

"One hundred patriotic young men today are worth 100 millionaires in value to this country," he added. "We have, as a country, no friend in Europe or Asia. We are the richest nation in the world. The warring nations, all fully armed, will be obliged to replace their financial losses of this war. We will be the victims unless we arrange to protect ourselves.

"There is no use arguing against preparedness. A fire escape upon a buildig does not bring about a fire. If a man wears a raincoat it does not mean that it will rain.

Takes Issue With Bryan.

"The greatest intoxication of oratory is that of Bryan when he says that we can raise an army of 1,000,000 between sunrise and sunset. The other nations know that we cannot do any such thing."

Former Judge Rassieur pointed to the brass buttons on his blue coat and said: "I've been in the army, lads. I would like to join again, but I'm too old. They won't let me. You boys must make the new record. But you boys must get ready to fight. You cannot fighth unless you know how. It will be too late to get ready after the fight starts.

"No man is worthy of citizenship if he does not prepare to discharge his duty to the country. Those who learn in time of peace to do duty in war will be the leaders when war comes. This was true in 1861 and it is true today.

"I was earning $10 a month just before the outbreak of the Civil War. I bought a book of tactics and studied it night and day. I practiced tactics with my father's shotgun. When the call came I was better prepared than the majority of captains in the Union army.

"I constantly wonder why more young men do not join the militia. I know that any business man would rather pick out as an assistant a young man who has had army training.

"Missouri is not ashamed of anything except the lack of interest here in the National Guard. The elements fighting against the growth of the guard should go elsewhere. Who opposes the growth of the National Guard is a friend of disorder. The National Guard is not an institution created to put down labor, but to uphold liberty. I hope all the young men here tonight who are qualified to do so, will join with the men of this splendid regiment."

YOU CAN'T SWIM WITH 'HER' IN CITY POOLS THIS YEAR

Men and Women Will Not Be Allowed to Use Them at Same Time.

No use inviting HER to come and float with you, this summer, unless you have the price of admission to a private natatorium or a trip to the Meramec or some other such water. So far as the municipal swimming pools are concerned, She will have to do her floating at such times—probably the forenoons—as when all men folk are barred.

Park Comissioner Cunliff, in announcing yesterday the program for public recreations for the season, said that a new rule had been established in this respect. Heretofore men and women were admitted to the Fairground pool at the same time.

Various organizations, he said, had made serious complaints about the practice, so it is to be abandoned. On account of a shortage in the appropriation, the swimming pools will be kept open only eight hours a day. Men will get the lion's share of the time, as the afternoons and evenings will be allotted to them.

Complains of Lack of Funds.

The Commissioner complains that his department is to be handicapped in many respects because of insufficient funds. The cost of running it should be about $30,000 more than last year because of new pools and playgrounds, he said, but the appropriation allowed by the Board of Aldermen and the Board of Estimates is only $1000 greater. By working economies, however, the Commissioner believes it will be possible to accommodate as many, if not more, persons than last year.

The real beginning of the season will be on Sunday, June 4, when there will be a band concert on Art Hill in Forest Park and a chorus of 2000 high school students, who will sing selections from the opera "Aida." Bleachers will be formed for the singers and a canvas curtain, 12 feet high, back of them, will serve for a sounding board.

Regular band concerts will not start until the week following. The first one will be in Forest Park, and after that there will be a concert in a different park every night.

Municipal dances will be held in six playgrounds as last summer, although there will be no dances on Tuesday and Thursday nights. An eight-piece orchestra will play for them. The first will be at Dakota Playground June 19. These dances are chaperoned by officers of civic organizations in the various neighborhoods.

Forest Park to Have Bus Line.

After much delay, the Board of Aldermen has finally consented to finance a municipal bus lines in Forest Park. One can take a 45-minute, continuous ride for five cents. As the busses are to make regular ascensions of Art Hill St. Louisans are expected to form a more intimate acquaintance with the art treasures in the Museum.

The swimming pools will be opened June 17, the day after school closes. Two new pools, one for negroes at Garrison and Lucas avenues, and the other the South Side Pool at Osage and Minnesota avenues, will be operated this year. The latter will be opened formally June 24 under the auspices of the Tenth Ward Improvement Association.

Municipal Playday, which was so successful last year, will be observed again, probably on one of the last two Saturdays in July. The plans call for a half holiday, a parade including the fire department and other municipal departments, which will have floats, athletic games, etc.

Will Be No Free Movies.

There will be no free movies. Commissioner Cunliff apparently is greatly chagrined at this, for he says, in his official announcement:

"The appropriation for this purpose was eliminated by the Board of Estimates and Apportionment on account of the protests from the owners of the moving picture shows throughout the City of St. Louis. The absence of the moving pictures will leave a large gap in the work of the department, and am sure that the fact that we do not have these shows will be greatly felt by the great many people who would otherwise be unable to see moving pictures.

"The educational value of these pictures in the past has been very great. The co-operation between the pictures and the story-telling hour on the playgrounds worked out very well, stimulating the interest of the children and carrying on an educational work that could not be otherwise developed."

May 27 there will be a field day in Fairground Park, conducted under the supervision of the Board of Education and developed in conjunction with the Division of Parks and Recreation.

June 10 the Sunday School Athletic Association will open a new running track and athletic field in Carondelet Park. A quarter-mile track is being prepared and grading is under way to provide a large natural amphitheater. These grounds will be available for inter-city athletic contests which can be witnessed by thousands.

Commissioner Cunliff departed yesterday with George E. Dieckman, member of the Zoo Board, for a tour of Eastern cities, in which the construction of bear pits, sea lion tanks and other zoo facilities will be studied. They will visit New York, Philadelphia, Washington and other cities within the next week, and will attend a gathering of zoo officials in New York.

GRAN'PA MARSHALL, 90, HOPES TO LAUGH HIS WAY TO 100

The Girls—His Granddaughters—Planned a Surprise Birthday Party, but He Fooled 'Em.

They tried to fool Gran'pa Marshall—his three granddaughters did—by giving him a surprise party in honor of his birthday, last night, but Gran'pa hasn't lived 90 years and gone 20 years without a drink of clear water for nothing. Such goings-on as baking a cake as big as a dishpan, buying candles and mixing punch meant birthday parties when Gran'pa was a kid, and there isn't anything wrong with Gran'pa's memory.

So the old gentleman took a little stroll, along in the afternoon, and invited a few friends on his own account. There were more guests than the granddaughters expected, but the cake was big enough and the punch plentiful enough. Gran'pa himself isn't much of a cake eater, but the punch had a "stick" in it, and after he had quaffed a few glasses he pronounced, with the air of a connoisseur, that it would do.

Likes to Visit Coney.

Gran'pa's full name is J. H. Marshall, and he lives with his son-in-law, Dr. E. J. Norris, and his three granddaughters, Misses Helen, Beatrice and Kathleen Norris, at 4223 Russell avenue. He settled on a farm near Chillicothe, Mo., when he was a young man. After a time, a railroad was built through his property. He divided the farm into town lots, sold many of them and saw the new town of Chula grow up.

Twenty-five years ago he decided rural life didn't agree with him, so he came to live with his daughter, Mrs. Norris, who died four years ago. His wife died 15 years ago.

Gran'pa's hearing has gone back on him somewhat, but there isn't anything the matter with his eyes. He takes a trip to New York every summer, when his favorite diversion is visiting Coney Island. He loves to watch the people in swimming. His teeth and his appetite are excellent.

Runs Lawn Mower.

He thinks running a lawn mower and raising radishes and onions the best of outdoor sports. When he gets done gardening he likes to go visiting. He visits the men of the neighborhood, when they are at home, and the ladies too, God bless 'em!

Mr. Marshall has one ambition and one recipe. His ambition is to live to be 100, and his recipe is laughter. Laughter, he says, is the solution to all the worries of life and the surest guarantor of longevity.

His relatives say he has not been known to take a drink of clear water in two decades. He drinks tea mostly and occasionally flavors it with a nip of beer. He likes a quiet smoke, too, and had the time of his young life at the circus a week or so ago.

INVESTIGATION IN CONVICTION OF 7 VILLISTA BANDITS

New Mexico Governor Inquires Into Death Sentences at Request of President.

SANTA FE, N. M., May 13.—Governor W. C. McDonald at the request of President Wilson is investigating the cases of the seven Villista bandits, convicted at Deming, N. M., of murder for their part in the raid on Columbus and sentenced to hang at Deming on May 19. Friends with the prisoners, who are in the State Penitentiary at Santa Fe appealed to the President for an inquiry on the ground of "humanity."

Attorney Buel R. Wood of Carrizozo, N. M., appointed by the Trial Judge, Judge E. L. Medler, to represent the bandits at the trial, in a published statement has declared the convicted men had a fair and impartial trial before an unprejudiced Judge and jury and that the legal evidence absolutely proved their guilt. The men admitted when placed on the stand in their own behalf that they took part in the raid, but declared that they did so under threat of death at the hands of Villa. They are of a very low order of intelligence.

RESERVE AVIATOR HURT IN FALL IN EAST ST. LOUIS

Engine Stops When Lieut. W. H. Bleakley Is Several Hundred Feet in Air.

Lieut. W. H. Bleakley of the United States Army Aviation Reserve Corps, was slightly injured in a spectacular fall in his aeroplane, yesterday afternoon, as he was starting on a "bomb-dropping" flight from Washington Park, East St. Louis, to Forest Park.

The machine had got several hundred feet above ground when the motor stopped. Bleakley tried to volplane back to the starting point, but the plane fell headlong into a clump of thorn trees. The aviator escaped with scratches and bruises and the machine was damaged about $300. Three men at work in the corps had to run to keep from being hit.

About a month ago Bleakley fell in the same manner and at almost the same place.

Yesterday he had planned to fly across St. Louis, dropping imitation bombs over downtown buildings and to circle Forest Park. His plan was similar to those of De Lloyd Thompson, who recently flew over Washington, D. C., and "bombarded" Washington Monument. As Thompson was repeating the experiment over New York City some days later, one of his "bombs" caught in the mechanism of his aeroplane and exploded, damaging the machine.

For our shops, working to capacity since December, have taken care of every detail of refinishing and renewal of parts.

In fixing prices, however, we have had to disregard the unusual quality of goods and the fact that we are dealing practically with a stock of new instruments.

We cannot crowd our warerooms with this stock. We cannot give up space in our storage houses to accommodate it. Clearance must be immediate.

Our prices have been calculated to accomplish this purpose within this period—the period of your opportunity.

ASQUITH REMAINS IN DUBLIN; REBELS' TRIALS ARE RUSHED

Several Prominent Men Acquitted Because Evidence Was Only Circumstantial.

SNIPERS FIRE FEW SHOTS

Parades and Athletic Meetings Forbidden Without Police Authority.

DUBLIN, May 13.—Premier Asquith continued today his conferences with authorities here who are in the closest touch with the course of events in connection with the recent rebellion. No definite information became available, however, as to any decisions that may have been reached.

The trials of the few remaining men accused as rebel ring leaders who are to be dealt with in Dublin are being proceeded with rapidly by the courts martial. It has been learned from the adjutant-general that several prominent men accused of complicity in the rebellion were acquitted by military judges because direct evidence of such complicity was not produced, although the circumstantial testimony is declared to have been of the strongest character.

Evidence Open to Public.

Despite the fact that the courts martial are closed to both press and public, the adjutant-general pointed out that the proceedings of the courts were public property, as all the documents and evidence are sent to the Judge Advocate General for examination and should the fact warrant such a procedure, sentences may be quashed or revised, even after the commanding general has confirmed them. Naturally, he said, this could not be effective when a death sentence was carried out, but in virtually every instance so far, he declared, the prisoners sentenced to capital punishment had admitted their guilt.

There was no desire on the part of the military, the adjutant-general said, to screen the proceedings of the courts from public view, and the military authorities felt entirely assured that their acts would bear the closest scrutiny.

Some cases may have arisen, he admitted, where military officers of junior rank had exceeded their powers, and these cases were undergoing investigation, especially the case of the death of F. Sheehy Skeffington. The officer connected with this case was immediately placed under arrest by Gen. Maxwell, commanding the British forces, the adjutant-general added, with a view to the officer's trial by court martial in the event that the facts justified such a procedure.

Snipers last night fired a few shots in the neighborhood of Broadstone Station, a suburb of Dublin. Otherwise there were no incidents. Looters, arrested during the recent arising, are being tried in batches daily by civil magistrates. Dozens of them have been sentenced to fines or short terms of imprisonment.

Gen. Maxwell today isued a proclamation forbidding all parades and political or athletic meetings in Ireland without written police authority.

There is a new idea being set forth for the ruling of Ireland, through the present war crisis. This is to have the country governed by an executive council on which will be both Nationalists and Unionists.

Although the idea has only just been suggested, it has found wide-spread support.

An order issued today permits the people to be on the streets until midnight and as early as 4 o'clock in the morning, giving them many more hours of freedom at night. The concession is generally attributed to a suggestion from Mr. Asquith.

A relief to the tension in Ireland occurred today when Gen. Maxwell, commander of the British forces, publicly reviewed and thanked the auxiliary troops who fought for the Government against the rebels. Lady Wimborne, wife of the former Lord Lieutenant and Premier Asquith accompanied Gen. Maxwell at the review. The Premier declined to respond to enthusiastic calls for a speech.

Maxwell Thanks Officers.

Gen. Maxwell's address was an expression of gratitude to the officers' training corps, which held Trinity college and guarded the Bank of Ireland, both of which might have become strong positions for the rebels; to the veterans corps, which lost many men when the rebels attacked them Easter Monday, when they marched unarmed into Dublin, and to the drivers and attendants on the ambulances who worked night and day succoring soldiers, civilians and rebels, without discrimination. He also praised the nurses, doctors, postmen, policemen and telegraphers, who, he said, "most nobly responded to the call of duty and performed many acts of great heroism."

"It is a great satisfaction," he continued, "to know that in times like those which we have gone through, there are so many on whom we can rely absolutely."

EXECUTED IRISH EDITOR WAS ST. LOUIS VISITOR IN DECEMBER

F. Sheehy Skeffington Told Knights of Columbus of Efforts to Discourage Army Enlistments.

F. Sheehy Skeffington, the Irish editor who was executed by a firing squad in the recent Dublin revolt, was in St. Louis last December, speaking at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

In his address he told of the conditions in Ireland just after the start of the war and of how he and others were trying to discourage the enlistment of Irishmen in the allied army. He came here shortly after being released from prison in Ireland as the result of a successful hunger strike which he went on to escape serving a year's sentence imposed for his activity in discouraging recruiting.

SIR EDWARD GREY OUTLINES BRITISH POSITION IN WAR

English Foreign Minister Reiterates That Allies Will Not Tolerate Prussian Tyranny Over Western Europe.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, May 13.—Edward Price Bell, in a copyrighted cable to the Chicago Daily News today, tells of an interview with Sir Edward Grey, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. Sir Edward talked with Bell at a luncheon in the statesman's home in London. The Foreign Minister, in discussing peace, is quoted as follows:

"Prussian tyranny over Western Europe, including these islands, our people will not stand. The pledges given by Mr. Asquith as regards the restoration of Belgium and Servia shall be kept. We have signed a pact to make peace only in concert with our allies. This pact, I need not say, we shall honor strictly and to the end.

For a Free Europe.

"What we and our allies are fighting for is a free Europe. We want Europe free not only from the domination of one nationality by another, but from hectoring diplomacy and the peril of war; free from the constant rattling of the sword in the scabbard and from the perpetual talk of shining armor and war lords.

"In fact," added Sir Edward, reflectively, "we feel that we are fighting for equal rights, for law, justice and peace and for civilization throughout the world, as against brute force which knows no restraint and no mercy."

"What do you mean by the destruction of Prussian tyranny?" Bell asked.

"What Prussia proposes as we understand her," replied Sir Edward, "is Prussian supremacy. She proposes a Europe modeled and ruled by Prussia. She is to dispose of the liberties of her neighbors and of us all.

Fighting the German Idea.

"We say that life on these terms is intolerable. This also is what France, Italy and Russia say. We are not only fighting Prussia's attempt to do in this instance to all Europe what she did to non-Prussian Germany, but we are fighting the German idea of the wholesomeness—almost desirability—of ever recurrent war. Prussia under Bismarck deliberately and admittedly made three wars.

"We want settled peace throughout Europe which will be a guaranty against aggressive war. Germany's philosophy is that settled peace spells disintegration, degeneracy and the sacrifice of the heroic qualities in the human character.

"Such philosophy, if it is to survive as a practical force, means eternal apprehension and unrest. It means ever-increasing armaments. It means arresting the development of mankind along lines of culture and humanity.

"We are fighting this idea. We do not believe in war as the preferable method of settling disputes between nations. When nations cannot see eye to eye; when they quarrel; when there is a threat of war, we believe that the controversy should be settled by methods other than those of war.

Believes in Negotiations.

"Such other methods are always successful when there is good will and no aggressive spirit. We believe in negotiation. We have faith in international conferences. We proposed a conference before this war broke out. We urged Germany to agree to a conference. Germany declined to do so."

"Do you think the neutrals will ever be able to help toward peace?" Sir Edward was asked.

"The injustice done by this war has got to be set right. The allies can tolerate no peace that leaves the wrongs of this war unredressed. When persons come to me with pacific counsels I think they should tell me what sort of peace they have in mind. They should let me know on which side they stand, for the opponents do not agree.

"If they think, for example, that Belgium was innocent of offense; that she has been unspeakably wronged; that she should bet set up again by those who tore her down, then it seems to me that they should say so.

"Peace counsels that are purely abstract and make no attempt to discriminate between the rights and wrongs of this war are ineffective if not irrelevant."

"German statesmen assert that England is the only real obstacle to peace," Sir Edward was told.

England Wants Peace.

"Nobody wants peace more than we want it, but we want a peace that does justice and a peace that re-establishes respect for the public law of the world.

"Presumably Germany would like the neutrals to think that we are applying pressure to keep France, Russia and Italy in the war. We are not. France, Russia and Italy need no urgink to keep them in the war. They know why they are in the war. They know they are in it to preserve everything that is precious to nationality. It is this knowledge which makes them determined and unconquerable.

"It is impossible for me to express to you our admiration for the achievements of our associates in this struggle. And as is the measure of our admiration, so also will be the measure of our contribution to the common cause.

"There are two statements that come from German sources. One is that we are preventing the allies from making peace. This goes to the address of the neutrals. The other is that we are meditating a separate peace with the allies. This goes to the address of one or the other of the allies. Each statement is absolutely untrue."

Big Demonstration for Preparedness Staged in New York

ively. Every guard unit in the city was ordered out in uniform and heavy marching order, to show New Yorkers how they would appear if they actually were answering a call to the colors. All branches of the service were represented. It was the first time since the Hudson-Fulton celebration that all the militia of the city had turned out.

The new armored motor battery, the first thus far acquired by any national guard organization in the country, was greeted with cheers all along the line. There were seven regiments of infantry, three of coast artillery, a part of the First Cavalry, batteries of field artillery, the signal corps, engineers and the new motor car battery.

There was an all day effort of anti-preparedness people to arouse interest among the onlookers. There were opposition banners across the streets and cartoons at every turn.

Duty to Prepare, Says T. R.

Col. Roosevelt, who had a boy scout parade of his own down at Oyster Bay today, said:

"Mrs. Roosevelt felt that she must go in and march because we both regard the prime duty of this country, at this moment, is to prepare. Unless a nation is true to itself it will be false to every one else. No nation can help any other nation, if it can't protect its own national honor and its sons and daughters wherever they are; and this is can never do without preparation. And I believe that the significance of 130,000 people marching, means that our country is waking up. I believe that Congress misrepresents the attitude of the American people toward preparedness.'

William J. Bryan, in a message to the New York World, from Lincoln, Neb., said: "Such a parade as you describe ought to have no effect on the sentiment of the country. Those who take part constitute but a small per cent of the voting population of one city in one State.

"It would not be strange if the manufacturers of munitions, who find a profit in preparedness; militarists who, like the militarists of other nations, have faith in no influence but force, and the big corporations that desire a large army to overawe their employes—it would not be surprising if such powerful organizations as these should be able to work up such a parade.

"These people, however, do not represent the public in general and ought not to be able to stampede the nation into a policy which would be grievously burdensome to our taxpayers and a menace to the peace of the nation. When the public understands that the army and navy experts, suported by the munition manufacturers and big corporations, demand an increase of more than $800,000,000 a year in the appropriations of the army and navy, they will make their protests heard.'

Among the members of Congress who came from Washington to view the parade were two of the Missouri delegation. Their views follow:

James A. Lloyd: The greatest parade I ever saw. It represents more varied interests than any assemblage I ever witnessed.

L. C. Dyer: I have witnessed today the greatest civic demonstration in the history of the world. It was a wonderful tribute of American patriotism. The thought which impressed me was that these men would willingly give up their lives for their country and that is what they would have to do unless they were trained. We need more camps where volunteers can be made ready to serve their country. This is the lesson of today's parade.

FREDERICK W. STINES, FOR 40 YEARS JUSTICE OF PEACE, DIES

Picturesque Figure of Meramec Township Was Born in County 76 Years Ago.

Frederick W. Stines, a picturesque figure in Meramec Township, St. Louis County, where he had been Justice of the Peace for 40 years, died yesterday at his home in Pond from the infirmities of old age. He was born in the county 76 years ago and was first elected Justice of the Peace in 1876, holding the position at his death.

He was a Civil War veteran and was one of the organizers of the first Republican party organizations in the county. He was sought by nearly everyone in his township for advice in matters of all kinds and was noted for his efforts to get litigants to settle their disputes out of court, although such settlement meant the loss of fees to himself.

He is survived by his wife, who is 68 years old, and seven married sons. His funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon. Burial will be in Bethel Cemetery.

T. R. WILL SPEAK IN DETROIT

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., May 13.—Col. Roosevelt will invade Detroit, the home town of Henry Ford, peace advocate, next Friday. He will speak there at a morning meeting.

Col. Roosevelt was prompted to this course by the following invitation, which carries the signatures of many prominent citizens of Michigan:

"Detroit, Mich, May 12, 1916.—Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, Oyster Bay, L. I., N. Y.: The undersigned residents of Detroit, being desirous of promoting the development of our country along the lines of preparedness for peace and true Americanism, earnestly invite you to make an address in Detroit at some early date which you may fix. We solicit the favor of an early acceptance."

The Colonel's reply was brief and straight to the point. It read:

"I thank you heartily. I accept with great pleasure and in accordance with your request appoint Friday morning next."

LONDON EDITOR CALLS U-NOTE BAD GERMAN DEFEAT

Declares Kaiser Lost Only Chance to Have British Blockade Lifted.

(Copyright, 1916, by Press Pub. Co.)

LONDON, May 13.—A. G. Gardiner editor of the Daily News, on the subject of the Kaiser and the President writes this in his paper today:

"It is not easy to measure the significance of the events of this war as they race by, but there are some incidents whose importance will only be fully discovered by time; among these it is not improbable that President Wilson's note will be conspicuous.

"The Kaiser has suffered a defeat more vital than that at Verdun. He knows that with his failure to get a swift decision, that the Britsh navy became the dominating factor in the war. He did not dare challenge the British fleet and must therefore use the weapon of terrorism. Through that weapon he would make a bargain with the United States. He would surrender his submarine warfare, if the United States would make us surrender the blockade which was destroying him.

What Kaiser Thought.

"If the United States fell into this trap one of two things would happen. At best we should, to avoid a rupture with America, lift the blockade or so modify it as to give the Kaiser a fighting chance. At worst the United States would come into collision with the allies and be driven willingly into sympathy with Germany, and, once in sympathy with Germany, anything might happen.

"The scheme has finally failed. The President's note dismissed the idea of bargain. The United States has ranged herself on the side of the allies. She has made an enemy. She must make a friend.

"The President has found that the policy of isolation from the quarrels of Europe is impossible. Whether it likes it or not, the new world must come in to redress the balance of the old, and isolation will be no more possible when the war is over than it is today.

"That fact is well understood in the United States, and probably by no one better than by the President. He himself clearly has in view a very definite policy for bringing the democracies of the world into closer union. The A. B. C. treaty, by which he has sought to remove the suspicions of the South American republics and unite them with the United States in common bond of mutual protection, indicates his trend of mind.

"The extension of such a scheme to Canada would serve as a basis for co-operating with the British Empire on specific issues affecting the peace of the American Continent, and the step from that to complete understanding with the democracies of Europe would be easily taken.

"But the task of smoothing the path to this great goal belongs to us as well as to the United States, and it is in this connection that the Irish question assumes such vital importance. The one permanent difficulty in our relations with America has been the hostility of that large and powerful section of the American people who live under bitter memories of English rule in Ireland. Remove that and final accommodation between British and American democracies will be established.

"That is an end worth striving for and may we not hope that the men who have the fate of Ireland in their hands will seize this great moment not only to bring peace to that distracted country, but to inaugurate a vaster reconciliation that will make for the peace of the whole earth."

WANTED TO KEEP WEDDING QUIET

Thomas W. Churchill, 25 years old, and Miss Estelle E. Rees, 24, both of St. Louis, got a marriage license in East St. Louis last night, but the Rev. George H. Trickette, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, declined to perform the ceremony. They made the trip in an auto.

With the couple were two youths, who said the marriage must be kept secret because Churchill's father had threatened to disinherit him if he married before he became 30. Miss Rees gave her address as 1012 Hickory street, after first writing another address and then erasing it. At that address it was said Miss Rees was not known there.

JUDGES TO INQUIRE INTO DISCHARGE OF COURT EMPLOYE

Lamm Affiliations Said to Have Lost Job for Deputy Jury Commissioner.

THIRD TO BE DEPOSED

Mayor Denies Men Are Being Dropped Because of Part in State Campaign.

The St. Louis Circuit Judges, in general term yesterday, ordered an investigation of the discharge of Deputy Jury Commissioner William C. Heusmann, who is said to have been dismissed by Jury Commissioner Amos Seaman, because he was a supporter of Judge Henry Lamm, for the Republican nomination for Governor.

The investigation was ordered when Seaman presented the name of Claude W. Martin, a lawyer, of 2907 North Grand avenue, to succeed Heusmann, Judge Hennings, when Martin's name was presented, said he had read in the newspapers that Heusmann was to be discharged for political reasons, and made a motion to hold up confirmation of Martin's appointment, pending an inquiry.

Seaman a Court Appointee.

Seaman is an appointee of the Circuit Court. Martin was appointed by Seaman on the recommendation of Maurice Gordon, Republican City Committeeman for the Twentieth Ward, who has lined up with the Kiel-Schmoll-Graves faction of the city organization, which is supporting John E. Swanger of Sedalia, for Governor against Judge Lamm.

Seaman refused to state, when asked by a Post-Dispatch reporter, why he had discharged Heusmann. The salary of the Deputy Jury Commissioner is $104 a month.

Heusmann is the third jobholder to be notified that his services were no longer acceptable. Charles Eggemann, Republican City Committeeman for the Eleventh Ward, who refused to vote in the committee for the indorsement of Swanger for Governor, was asked by Director of Public Safety, Swingley, to resign as his private secretary. Eggemann refused to resign, and said that the only way to separate him from his job, which pays $150 a month, was to discharge him.

Reporters were unable to reach Director Swingley for a statement. He was not at his office when reporters called at the city hall Friday or yesterday, although his assistants said they expected him momentarily.

Charles S. Luce, Superintendent of Dumps in the Street Department, was discharged by Street Commissioner Slater, because he would not cease his activities for Judge Lamm in the Fifth Ward.

Mayor Kiel, on his return to the city yesterday from Peoria, said that he had not ordered the dismissal of the Lamm supporters. He said that he had been generous in his treatment of city employes who held different views than his own, and that he did not know why the men who are supporting Judge Lamm and opposing Swanger were being dismissed.

"This fight over the governorship is merely incidental," Mayor Kiel said. "The real fight is against me for renominkation next year. The fight has been going on ever since I signed the bill for the repeal of the Southern Traction franchise. Jep Howe, the moment I signed that bill, decided to defeat me for re-election. He has been building up his organization ever since that time.

Howe Won Stifel Over.

"He won over Otto Stifel by going to the Federal League baseball games last summer when the attendance was small and sitting in a box with Stifel. Otto is one of the best fellows in the world, and everybody likes him, but Howe has induced him to join in the fight on me.

"I do not care what the opopsition does. I feel sure that I shall be renominated for Mayor."

All city officials at the heads of departments were required, on taking office, to take an oath that they would not appoint, dismiss, promote or demote any city employe for political reasons. For violation of their oaths of office, city officials may be removed by the Board of Aldermen. The charter also prohibits the dismissal of any appointees in the classified service for political reasons, but there is no provision for the punishment of an official who violates that section of the charter.

Woman Fails to Recover Maiden Name, Dunnegan, From Judge Dunnegan.

When Mrs. Barbara Schwallensticher, who got a divorce in the Alton Circuit Court yesterday, asked for a restoration of her maiden name to Dunnegan, Judge Dunnegan refused her request.

The Judge smilingly admitted that he was partial to the name and would be pleased to grant the woman's request, but as Mrs. Schwallensticher had received the custody of her 10-year-old child, he thought it was best for her to keep her married name.

CAPT. KING GAVE HER BANK STOCK, MRS. HAWLEY SAYS

Files Answer to Suit of Mercantile Trust to Determine Owner of Shares.

Mrs. Bessie Hawley of 3864 Cleveland avenue, wife of Dr. Nelson J. Hawley, and foster-daughter of the late Capt. Henry King, editor of the Globe-Democrat, filed an answer yesterday, in Judge Arnold's court, in the suit instituted by the Mercantile Trust Co., to determine the ownership of 25 shares of the company's stock.

At the present market price of $343 a share, the stock is worth $8575, and it yields monthly dividends of $1.50 a share, or $37.50 a month for the block of 25 shares. It is in Mrs. Hawley' name, and she asserts that the stock was was given her by Capt. King before his death, which was a year ago tomorrow. But as it was in Capt. King's safe deposit box, Capt. King's grandsons, Albe W. King and Harry L. King, who are executors of the estate, took possession of it, and they contend that it belongs to the estate. The trust company accordingly filed suit to determine the ownership, and is holding back payment of the monthly dividends on the 25 shares, until the case is settled.

Lived at Hawley Home.

Mrs. Hawley, in her answer, says she entered Capt. King's home when she was 3 years old, and that from that time until his death they treated each other as father and daughter. For the last 12 years of his life, she says, Capt. King lived at the Hawley home, paying $75 a month toward the household expenses.

She says he bought the Mercantile Trust stock in June, 1902, paying $400 a share for it, and that it was put in the name of Capt. King's friend, Max Kotany. The reason for this, Mrs. Hawley sets forth, was that, "as editor of a newspaper, Capt. King did not desire to appear as the owner of stocks." The stock remained in Kotany's name, she says, until Sept. 2, 1914, when, realizing his poor health would soon compel him to retire from active work, Capt. King had the stock transferred, not to his own name, but to Mrs. Hawley's

Mrs. Hawley says this action was intended as a gift of the stock to her, and that the stock was placed in his deposit box for safe keeping. She said the checks for dividends were made out in her name, and that she indorsed them and gave them to Capt. King, who continued to pay $75 a month toward household expenses.

Capt King's will, after disposing of his valuable library, left the remainder of his property in trust, with the two grandsons as executors and Mrs. Hawley as executrix and provided that Capt. King's son, Henry L. King, should receive $600 a year and his wife $960 a year for the rest of their lives. The rest of the income is to be divided between the two grandsons and Mrs. Hawley, with the proviso that, after Mrs. Hawley's death, her share shall go to her daughter, Henryetta, now 9 years old.

DOCTOR WANTS DIVORCE, SAYS WIFE WORRIED HIS PATIENTS

Alleges She Would Go to His Office and Ask Those There What Ailed Them.

Dr. I. Ross Clark, 40 years old, a physician with offices in the Metropolitan Building, yesterday sued to divorce Mrs. Nell Clark, 38 years old, of 4130 Botanical avenue. He alleges that she would go to his office and humiliate him by asking his patients what was wrong with them, that she slapped him on the face and dared him to retaliate in kind, and that she kept her clothes packed so that she could leave him on a moment's notice.

He also says that on many occasions when he returned home late, after visiting patients, his wife found fault with him so that he lost sleep and was unable to properly attend to his practice the next day.

Mrs. Clark told a Post-Dispatch reporter that her husband had failed to support her. She said she had obtained the majority of his patients through personal acquaintance, and at his request had attended to office duties while her husband was ill. She denied his allegations.

They were married Oct. 12, 1912, and separated last March. They lived at 5778A McPherson avenue.

BERNHARDT PLAYS AT FRONT

Says It Was Incomparable Event of Her Life.

PARIS, May 13.—Sarah Bernhardt returned today from the front, where she gave six performances in three days to the soldiers.

"Nothing could be more moving," said Mme Bernhardt, "than playing before such heroes. It was the incomparable event of my life. The warmth and heartiness of their applause was most touching. I was delighted with my trip. I even persuaded Gen. B—— to take me to a place near Pont-a-Mousson which is usually bombarded by the Germans. The General refused at first, but then consented, saying: 'Since you insist, very well. You are worthy, Madam, to be at the post of danger.' I regard that as the highest compliment that has ever beei paid to me in my whole life."

GRAND JURY TO REPORT TO MAJOR ON SANATORIUM

From a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MOUNT VERNON, Mo., May 13.—News which leaked out of the Lawrence County grand jury room today indicated that instead of indictments being returned as a result of the investigation of the financial management of the State Tuberculosis Sanatorium, the grand jury will make a recommendation to Gov. Major that there be a thorough reorganization of the management and many officials removed.

Five members of the board of managers of the sanatorium, Dr. C. C. English, the superintendent, and William J. Salts, the steward, were the only witnesses before the grand jury. There have been no other material witnesses summoned.

It is known that the jurors have discussed returning into court a recomdendation that the Governor ask for the resignations of members of the board of managers and of several of the leading officers of the sanatorium.

Questioned About Furniture.

The witnesses heard by the grand jury were questioned about the shipment of a handsomely upholstered chair to each of four members of the Board of Managers, which was quickly stopped more than a week ago when the Post-Dispatch began an investigation of the shipments, the disappearance of several valuable registered cattle from the sanatorium's herd of Holsteins, and of the payment of $500 to President Eaton of the Board of Managers and H. H. Hohenschild of St. Louis, architect for the board, for expenses of a trip to San Francisco, when the Panama-Pacific Exposition was in progress.

The trip was made for the announced purpose of superintending the packing and shipping of furniture in the Missouri Building, which the Legislature ordered should be sent to the sanatorium without expense to the sanatorium.

Affairs at the sanatorium have been in a somewhat chaotic condition since Wednesday, when Supt. English discharged Miss Pearl Sims, a nurse, who was a great favorite with patients, and since the fist fight the same afternoon between Supt. English and Steward Salts.

As a testimonial to Miss Sims more than 50 patients marched to the railroad station in violation of the rules of the sanatorium and cheered her lustily. Superintendent English told the Post-Dispatch reporter that he had no intention of punishing the patients who had violated the rules. He said the demonstration "reminds him of his college days," and that it was "more like a prank of college students than anything else."

More than a dozen patients to whom the reporter talked referred to the demonstration as "a riot." These patients and others have signed letters and telegrams to Gov. Major, urging him to make a personal investigation for the good of the sanatorium. They said today they had received no replies to their telegrams and letters.

Farmer Still at Sanatorium.

Jerry Farmer of Kansas City, a patient, is still at the institution, although he says that Superintendent English ordered him to leave it. Farmer said he refused to go and told the Superintendent he would remain at the sanatorium. Superintendent English said he had not ordered Farmer to leave. Farmer is considered by Superintendent English to be the leader of the patients who are demanding an investigation.

Farmer said he thought the Superintendent's idea that he was a leader was correct. Farmer is the patient who started after the Superintendent with a baseball bat after the removal of Miss Sims. He was restrained by other patients.

DATA ON GOOD ROADS ASKED FOR Three More Missouri Counties Planning Big Bond Issues.

The "good roads movement" in Missouri continues to spread. Yesterday William Seibel, Clerk of St. Louis County, received a letter from citizens of Phelps County, asking for data and literature concerning St. Louis County's $3,000,000 bond issue for good roads. Phelps County is contemplating a special election to authorize a bond issue for this purpose, it was said.

Clay County is considering an election t ovote on a bond issue of $1,250,000, and Stoddard County is planning a $1,000,000 bond issue.

DR. JUDD TAKES FIRST STEPS IN SCHOOL SURVEY

ASSEMBLING EXPERTS

Supt. Blewett Explains the Present Necessity for a $3,000,000 Bond Issue.

The first step in the survey of the St. Louis public schools, which has been decided upon by the Board of Education in order to present to the public the facts of the school situation before the proposed $3,000,000 bond issue is submitted to a vote, was taken yesterday when Dr. Charles H. Judd, director of the School of Education of the University of Chicago, who has been employed to make the survey, outlined the plan before a meeting of the teachers and principals at Soldan High School.

Dr. Judd also spent part of the day examining records in the Board of Education office, in order to familiarize himself with the organization of the St. Louis schools. He returned to Chicago last night and will spend the next few days getting together a commission of six or seven experts in various phases of educational work, who will assist with the survey under his direction. A fund of $10,000 was voted by the Board for the survey. This is expected to cover all cost, including the salaries of Dr. Judd and his assistants.

Time for Investigation Short.

Dr. Judd told the teachers that he expected their full co-operation. All the investigating of the schools must be concluded before the schools close the middle of June, he said. He thought the commission could not get started earlier than a week from tomorrow and the time left would be extremely short for the work to be done. He told a Post-Dispatch reporter before the meeting that if the schoolroom data is collected before schools close the commission can later examine records and amplify its report.

"In making this survey," Dr. Judd said, "we will keep in mind that the St. Louis public school system is but a part of the national school system. The results of our investigation here will be measured in their relation to the national system. Comparisons will be made with other school systems."

The personnel of the commission that is to assist Dr. Judd could not be announced yesterday. He has sent telegrams to all parts of the country, he said, and hopes to have answers upon return to Chicago. He felt reasonably certain that Dr. H. C. Morrison, Superintendent of Schools of New Hampshire, would accept the assignment to report upon the distribution and organization of the method of supervision. Special men will be engaged to investigate other phases of the work, including financial organization, buildings and equipment and methods of instruction. The last-named phase is to be under the personal direction of Dr. Judd, aided by two or three assistants.

The investigators of the methods of instruction will go into the schools, Dr. Judd said, and, by picking out typical cases, attempt to determine to what degree the methods used are successful. For example, he said, the progress of children in reading is measured by a number of standardized passages. The first passage is easy, the second is slightly more difficult, the third is harder still, and so on. The ease with which the pupil reads them is the basis upon which instruction in reading is measured.

Blewett Denies Rumors.

Ben Blewett, Superintendent of Instruction, also spoke to the teachers, explaining in detail the financial condition of the St. Louis public schools which led the Board of Education to determine to submit a bond issue to public vote. He prefaced his address with an emphatic denial of rumors that he intended to resign because of disgust with the situation. He said it had been reported that he recommended a cut in teachers' salaries and would resign because the board would not follow his recommendation. He denied there was any truth in this.

Supt. Blewett reviewed the last year, explaining how shortage of funds had caused buildig operations to be suspended, summer schools to be abandoned and the night school term shortened.

Prospects for the future are discouraging, Supt Blewett said, unless relief is obtained soon. He declared that it would take $1,500,000 to erect new buildings that should be in service now. The grade schools are fuller than ever before, he said, and increasing at the rate of 1200 pupils a year.

Within the next five years, Supt. Blewett said, it will take $1,250,000 to furnish the additional high school accommodations that will be absolutely necessary. He said he was scoffed at a few years ago when he predicted high school attendance would increase at the rate of 500 a year. The actual increase of the present year over last, he said, is 1300 pupils.

Supt. Blewett declared that unless bonds are issued to take care of the building program," it will be necessary to cut down the funds spent for instruction until St. Louis won't have anything left but an A B C school."

FAIR FUND TO BE USED TO COLLECT HISTORICAL BOOKS

Exposition Directors to Take Income of $100,000 Surplus to Establish Library.

The plan of the directors of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition of 1904, for the use of the $100,000 surplus still remaining from the Exposition funds, was made public yesterday, with the filing in the Circuit Court of a petition to incorporate the Louisiana Purchase Historical Association. It was isgned by nearly all the directors now living.

The plan, as stated in the petition, and as explained last night by Walter B. Stevens, secretary of the exposition corporation, is to spend the annual income of the $100,000 in building up a historical library. This library will be kept in the Jefferson Memorial, and, for the present at least, it will be in charge of the library staff of the Missouri Historical Society.

Rooms in the west wing of the Memorial Building will house the new collection. As the Missouri Historical Sociey library now has a large collection of Missouri history, the new collection will be made to include books, documents and letters bearing on the history of other states in the Louisiana Purchase. With these will be included letters of Thomas Jefferson, some of them from the W. K. Bixby collection.

Another interesting division of the new library will contain exposition literature. A large body of this matter is now on hand, dating back to the Crystal Palace exhibitions of more than 60 years ago. An attempt will be made to complete this collection, and the documents and other memorials of the various expositions will be assembled and bound.

With the establishment of this fund for the maintenance of a library, the Exposition directors practically complete their work. Their task, as prescribed by an act of the Legislature, was to hold a world's fair, to erect monuments, and to establish a historical library and museum. The monuments are the Jefferson Memorial and the St. Louis statue on Art Hill.

GRAND JURY AFTER TAX-DODGERS IN LAWRENCE COUNTY

It Is Predicted That 100 Bills Will Be Returned Against Rich Citizens.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOUNT VERNON, Mo., May 13.—An investigation of tax dodging by wealthy citizens of Lawrence County has been in progress before the grand jury here for a week.

A prediction was made today by a county official that at least 100 indictments would be returned. The grand jury will be in session for several days.

During the past week an officer of every bank in the county has been before the grand jury and has been compelled to produce the books of his bank, showing the amount to the credit of every depositor who had more than $1000 in the bank June, 1915.

These deposits have been compared with the tax returns of the depositors for the same date. The grand jury has been asked to indict all whose tax returns failed to show as much money as they had on deposit.

Bank officials, it is reliably stated, have protested against giving the information on the ground that depositors will remove their money from the banks before June 1 this year and will keep it out until the danger of it being assessed is passed.

The bankers say the literal enforcement of the tax laws will damage the county. They say that bankers will be required each June 1 to prepare for heavy withdrawals and that to meet the demands the banks will be required to call loans and to restrict credits at that period.

BODY IN RIVER WAS EMBALMED

Undertaker Believed to Be Involved in Chicago Murder Mystery.

CHICAGO, May 13.—The mutilated body of the man taken from the Des Plaines River in River Forest was partly identified in the county morgue today as that of Francis Zuchowski, 27 years old, who disappeared from his home with $200 in his possession Nov. 27.

The fact that the body was embalmed led to the conclusion that the man was slain by an undertaker, or that an undertaker was an accomplice.

FATHER DEMPSEY TRIES TO SETTLE LABORERS' STRIKE

Priest Helps Builders and Men Thresh Out Difficulties for Several Hours.

Representatives of the Master Builders' Association and the Hod Carriers' and Building Laborers' Union met in the Century Building yesterday afternoon for the first time in an effort to patch up their differences and settle a strike which began a week ago yesterday, when more than 2000 men quit work. They had been in session less than a minute when the union spokesman demanded full recognition for the Building Laborers' Union.

One contractor arose from his seat, picked up his hat, and announced: "Then there's no use talking. We'll never do that." He started for the door.

Father Timothy Dempsey, the priest, who has mediated successfully in several recent strikes, stretched up to his full "six foot six," and holding aloft one hand, interposed.

"Just a minute, men. I think we had better talk this over just a little."

Father "Tim's" advice was taken, and they talked it over amicably for two hours and 40 minutes, but wtihout coming to agreement.

S. J. McCoy of Chicago, business agent of the union, was excluded from the conference at the request of the contractors, and a number of the laborers followed him out. Charles J. Lammert, president, and Maurice J. Cassidy, secretary of the Building Trades Council, then represented the union. C. B. McCormack, a contractor, spoke for the Master Builders' Association. Father Dempsey acted as arbiter.

After the conference Father Dempsey announced that no agreement had been reached. He thought a satisfactory agreement would be reached at another conference to be held tomorrow afternoon. "Everything looks very bright," he added.

The laborers insist on recognition. McCormack said that the Master Builders would continue to oppose it. "These men are not hod carriers; they are merely laborers," he said. "And if they don't want to work we can get others."

The laborers demand recognition of their union, a minimum wage of 35 cents an hour and an eight-hour day. The Master Builders' Association, comprising about 80 per cent of St. Louis' building contractors, offers from 20 to 27½ cents an hour and a 10-hour day, without recognition.

Cassidy announced that 850 of the laborers are still on strike, and that the remainder of the strikers are skilled artisans affiliated with the Council who are out in "sympathy."

GUARD OFFICERS ASKED TO QUIT

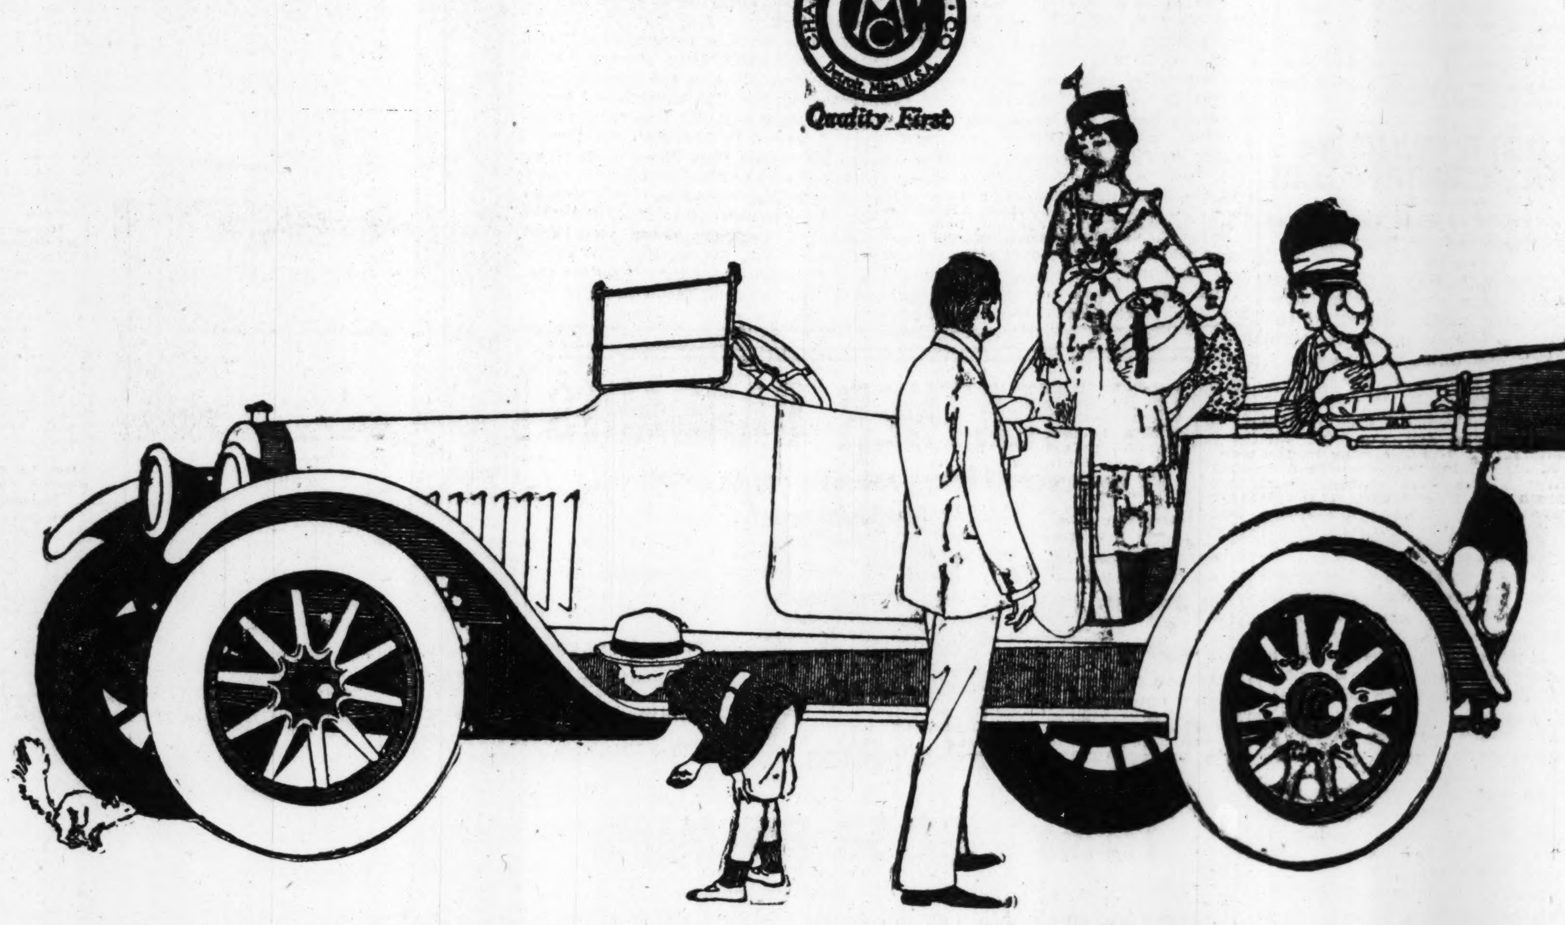
Colorado Adjutant-General Says It Was With View to Promote Welfare.

DENVER, Col., May 13.—Adjutant-General Harry P. Gamble today requested the resignations of all officers of the staff departments and of the field and taff, in letters which stated that they were called for in order that "such action may be taken as will promote the welfare" of the Colorado National Guard. About 15 officers are affected by the request, which was not addressed to the line officers.

"The step we are taking is not aimed at any individual," said Gen. Gamble, in a formal statement. "It has seemed best that we should be in a position that we can proceed at once with a reorganization."

This Six-40 Seven-Passenger Chalmers—$1450 Detroit

Quality First



$9,000,000 of these Six-40 Chalmers have been bought by persons who had intended paying $2,000 for a car

They took one look; were surprised a car of such size could be obtained for the money; drove around 10 miles in her—and bought.

They laid down the astonishingly small sum of $1450 plus the freight, and mentally noted a saving of $550.

For the men who are driving the Six-40 Chalmers today are the kind who have been thinking motor cars in terms of $2,000.

They have had more surprises than the price, too. They have found the Six-40 Chalmers to possess more room than any seven-passenger car of the day under $2500.

Most persons are pretty particular about room. I do not know just how to express the ROOM in this car.

Dimensions in inches do not tell the story. I simply spell the word in capital letters. Then you find later I have understated the case.

Surprise No. 3 that will stir your emotions is the great big subject of color options.

Now in these days when most cars resemble hearses in their soberness, or the "back drop" in a new musical comedy in their color excitement, here comes something refreshing.

You can get a Six-40 Chalmers in any of these colors:

Oriford maroon or Valentine green with hoods to match.

Meteor blue with black hood.

Just think that over. And remember this is the only car under $2,000, so far as I have ever learned, that provides for you a color range like this.

Colors are getting just a little more important every day. I find most men, and particularly most women, have their own ideas about color—just like the decorations in a library or a living room.

Now there's one more big item about the Six-40 Chalmers. It's too bad I can't set that down as Surprise No. 4.

Some secrets cannot be kept. Nearly everyone knows what a fine beast she is on the road. She certainly can perform.

They know that her real name is Six-40 Performance Chalmers.

She has a reputation on a hill like Caesar had with his armies.

She has a reputation for responsiveness that every traffic cop in America is well aware of.

She has, like a great baseball pitcher, "everything on the ball." She is good at low speeds, good at high speeds, good on the hill, good on the long march, good on the short haul.

She's a fine animal. As fine as any you'll ever run across in 10 parasangs.

I drive her myself. She's my preference. But the big thing, of course, is that men with clear minds and rare judgment have laid down $9,000,000 on her. If you are wise you'll never question success—a success like the Six-40 Chalmers.

ATHLETICS GO TO 7TH PLACE, GUESS WHO'S IN EIGHTH?

Pitcher Elmer Myers Defeats Browns, 4—3, for His Third Conquest of the Week.

By J. E. Wray,
Sporting Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.

MAHOUT CONNIE MACK, the tallest and thinnest elephant jockey in the world, rode his pachyderms into our bewildered Browns here this afternoon, crowding them off the brink of last-place precipice where they had been grappling desperately for a toe hold.

The Brown pitchers fed elephant hitters the wrong kind of balls at critical times, enabling them to whack in enough runs for a 4—3 victory.

Buried in the crash that followed the St. Louisans' drop to the cellar abyss were Derrill Pratt, George Sisler and Armando Marsans, each of whom had it in his power on at least one occasion to win or tie the old ball game and kept the Connie Mackites where fate and a lot of expert baseball writers seem to have decreed they shall finish—last.

Elmer Myers, Mr. McGillicuddy's one best pitching bet, for the third time this week, assumed the role of elevator boy extraordinary to the Philadelphians. Elmer began the Athletics uplift last Monday when he pitched Walter Johnson into defeat. He boosted his club another notch in the world on Thursday, when he trimmed the Tigers, although he gave 10 bases on balls; and hauled the club clear of the American League foundation apartment today, when he rather luckily pulled through with the third victory of the week.

Third Win for Myers.

Considering that Elmer is fresh from the wilds of Raleigh, N. C., where he hove successfully from the starboard side, the achievement of this young man should cause the reader to pause and mark time while he thinks seriously on the future of this Mack follower.

Elmer was wild this afternoon. He gave half a dozen passes and some of them spelled trouble. In the earlier rounds of the fray he was breaking a sharp curve unhittably, in the pinches, and the Brownie batters were dislocating their vertabrae after his benders. But with any kind of a punch in the pinch, the Browns would have walked away with the game.

Bob Groom was working like a tramp at a free lunch counter—he was at his best, only two or three bad pitches made to batters on whom the club dopesters had no line was responsible for the defeat.

For, be it known, all the veteran Mackmen and their weakness are graven in the Fielder Jones book. This volume tells accurately just what men like Lajoie, Strunk and the others hit at.

Old Timers Are Known.

But there was nothing in the little old dope which showed whether Witt, Pick and Stellbauer preferred waist, low or high balls.

It was this lack of information concerning the baby elephants that caused the trouble. To show that this is true take a run through the box score. You will there observe that of the five hits made off Groom the veterans Schang, Lajoie, Strunk, McInnis and Walsh obtained only one, that made by Strunk to start the fourth inning. Davenport and Fincher did not let the veteran elephants have a single safety during their short terms on the mound.

Hit by pitcher—By Myers (Miller); by Davenport (Walsh). Struck out—By Groom 6, by Davenport 1, by Myers 6. Umpires—O'Loughlin and Chill. Time—1h. 50m.

And, it may be said, the new men will never again beat Groom's pitching, if he is in the same form he was today.

The lack of knowledge of the newcomers hitting weaknesses developed first in the third inning. With two down Groom put one where Pitcher Myers liked it and he singled. Bob then made the mistake of putting one where Witt could hit it, instead of keeping it away from him. A triple and the first run followed.

Witt Cracks Out Triple.

In the next round Strunk singled and was sacrificed. Groom kept them away from Lajoie and the big Frenchman bounced an out to the infield. Walsh was walked.

Del Pratt contributed a run here when, on an attempted double steal, he threw wild to the plate. The throw was about as close to the plate as the Browns are to the pennant at the present writing. The remaining runner went to third. Here Pick, another Mackman on whose batting frailties the dope says nothing, singled Walsh home, making the score 3-0.

Pratt and Marsans Fall Down in Seventh With Two Men on Bases

IT was not until the Browns half of the seventh that St. Louis showed symptoms of having any attack. In this period it really appeared that the downfall of Myers was in sight.

Witt, who is one of the Connie Mack university class and hails from Barre University, Vt., and who has been pleasing Philadelphia fans immensely, let Hartley's grounder get away from him at the start of the session. Myers walked Borton, who batted for Groom and Shotton's out boosted both runners along.

Ernie Johnson, who looks more like a major league baseball player than any of his teammates at the present writing, singled Hartley home, Ernie let Ward Miller jockey himself into a 3-2 hole, then he stole second at which critical point of the game Mr. Miller came through with a dinky hit back of third base on which both Borton and Johnson scored, Ward going to second on the throw.

Johnson Drives in Pair.

With the winning run—at that time on second—Sisler hit one straight at Lajoie—they have to be hit directly to Larry these days if he is to handle them—and the big fellow swabbed it around like a pup tossing a rat until the runner was perched on first, Miller going to third.

Two on, score tied and Del Pratt up. The punch of the team (under normal hitting conditions) trundled his heavy artillery to the plate.

He lifted a high foul, the only merit of which was that it enabled Sisler to take second after the catch.

Then up came the secondary punch, Armando Marsans. He delivered a shot aimed across Lajoie's bows, but this time the Frenchman was all set and threw out the runner, ending the rally.

However, the game appeared to be even up in chances as well as in score at this time. But Davenport proved to be not as reliable as Groom and the winning run made off him in the Athletics' half of the seventh. Davenport tried to puncture Walsh with a fast one, but only succeeded in hitting his uniform. It was enough to earn the Philadelphian a place on first base. He was forced by Pick, but Stellbauer advanced Pick with a single. Again it was Witt's safety that tallied a runner, Pick crossing the plate with what proved the winning run.

Miller and Sisler Fail.

Fielder Jones' men went out in order in the eighth, but in the ninth it appeared that the knockout blow for the Athletics might again be delivered. This happened when Bert Shotton jockeyed his way to first on four pitched balls and was neatly sacrificed by Johnson. It was up to Ward Miller and Sisler to punch him home, but they could produce nothing more than two infield taps which did not even annoy the Fielders.

So its last place today men.

Fielder Jones entertained in the clubhouse after the game. He spoke forcefully on the subject of timely hitting—a lost art with the Browns, it seems. No dictagraph recorded his speech, but its purport, as reflected on the faces of some of the listeners after they came out of the dressing room, must have been as plain as an old maid's face and as pointed as the business end of the tack teacher sat on.

In fact, it is still the hitting, if you are still interested enough to inquire: What's the matter with the Browns?

Sisler Is Hitting .161.

George Sisler, who started out to be a smasher of timely blows, has faded away to nothing. In the eight games played away from home he has been at bat officially 33 times and has hit safely but on three occasions. Del Pratt has made only four hits in 25 times up.

Here are the figures for the regulars at the present time:

PLAYER.	AB.	H.	Pct.
Shotton	32	7	.219
Johnson	25	7	.250
Miller	26	9	.346
Sisler	33	3	.121
Pratt	25	4	.160
Marsans	33	9	.273
Deal	29	6	.207
Hartley	22	4	.153

The club has received good enough pitching to win a majority of its games. Weak hitting has cost the club every defeat it has suffered. Shotton, Sisler and Pratt will have to come back to normal hitting figures before the club can be expected to climb. Manager Jones figures they are certain to find the lost eyes shortly.

GEORGE SMITH IS WINNER OF 42D KENTUCKY DERBY

STAR HAWK OFF BADLY

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 13.—With Star Hawk, A. K. Macomber's English-bred colt, only half a length back and gaining at every stride, George Smith, a three-year-old out of Reach-Consuelo II colt, bearing the colors of John Sanford of Amsterdam, N. Y., won the forty-second annual running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs today. With 117 pounds up the black colt covered the mile and a quarter in 2:04. He was third choice in the betting, $2 winning perimutuel tickets paying slightly better than 4 to 1.

The fast tiring Franklin, J. S. Ward's son of Jim Gaffney, after having set the pace part of the way, lasted to win third money by a head from his stablemate, Dodge. The other five starters were strung out for an eighth of a mile.

Surprisingly disappointing to the thousands at the track, was the running of the Harry Payne Whitney pair, Dominant and Thunderer, installed heavy favorites. Dominant for a short distance flattered his backers when Jockey J. Notter hustled him into the lead at the rise of the barrier. The heretofore unbeaten Thunderer, full brother of last year's Derby winner, Regret, never was prominent.

Star Hawk's performance was sensational. Apparently unacquainted with American post usage, the English colt was almost left and trailed the field by many lengths when passing the grandstand the first time. He did not seem to strike his stride until half of the race had been run, but then he came with a terrific rush and overtook the field one by one except the winner.

Dominant set a fast pace for three-quarters of a mile, closely attended by Kinney, when both stopped badly. Franklin, a Kentucky colt and on which the hopes of the Kentuckians were pinned, assumed the lead momentarily. Turning into the stretch, George Smith took command and was urged by Jockey Loftus into a long enough lead to win, despite Star Hawk's belated sprint.

At all stages of the race, Dodge was well up. Lena Misha, running in the colors of the Beveryck stable, ran poorly and pulled up lame. The Cock, another of Macomber's English horses, coupled in the betting with Star Hawk, raced poorly. Bulse, Huffaker St. Isador were scratched.

One of the largest crowds that ever attended a derby saw Gov. A. O. Stanley of Kentuck place a wreath of roses around George Smith's neck and present a boquet to Jockey Loftus.

The race today was the forty-second annual running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs and the field of starters comprised the greatest three-year-olds in the country today. There were 56 nominations, from which number 12 starters were picked. Star Hawk was an early favorite in the pari-mutuel betting.

The race was worth approximately $15,000 and was for a mile and a quarter. Arrangements had been made by the officials to accommodate 100,000 patrons and the largest crowd that ever witnessed a Derby was on hand.

Simpson Shatters Three Records and Wins Five Firsts Against Kansas

BOB SIMPSON..

Famed Missouri U. Star Again Negotiates High Hurdles in World's Time of 14 4-5 Seconds—Breaks Conference Record for Broad Jump and Low Hurdles.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 13.

ROBERT SIMPSON of the University of Missouri tied the world's record of 14 4-5 seconds in the 120-yard high hurdles in the Missouri-Kansas dual meet here this morning, a record which he himself set last Saturday in the dual meet with Iowa State College. Missouri won the meet, 68-41.

This morning's race was a thing of beauty. In contrast to the hard rain of the day before the sun was shining brightly and there was a slight breeze blowing diagonally across the track to the runners' backs. Both stands were filled with spectators, including several hundred school athletes who will never forget the race they saw.

Simpson Leads All the Way.

At the crack of the gun four athletes leaped from their marks, the two Missouri men slightly in the lead. After the first hurdle was cleared, Simpson assumed the lead. Hurdle after hurdle he cleared in matchless form, just grazing each one as he flew over. At the tape he was five yards ahead of Elliott of Kansas. Leas of Missouri also led Elliott until the last hurdle but was a close third.

Simpson's lead over his field today was not so great as it was last Saturday over Packer of Ames, and the spectators did not think the time would be as fast. But two of the five timers caught it at 14 3-5 seconds and three at 14 4-5 seconds.

The timers were all out-of-town men: Harry Selvidge of Manual Training High School, Kansas City; C. B. Root of Westport High School, Kansas City; B. E. Wiggans of the Polytechnic Institute of Kansas City; Charles Roberts of Webster Groves High School, Webster Groves, and L. Moyer of the High School St. Joseph.

Simpson is a junior in the college of agriculture, hailing from Bosworth, Mo. An athlete of fame before coming to the university, he has developed wonderfully since he has come under the tutelage of Coach Schulte. He now holds the world's record in the 120-yard high hurdles and Missouri Valley and Western Conference records in the high and low hurdles. This morning he broke two more Missouri Valley records, negotiating 23 feet, 6 3-4 inches in the broad jump and running the 220-yard low hurdles in 24 2-5 seconds.

He finished first in the 220-yard dash with the time of 22 seconds flat, a fifth of a second slower than the Valley record, and ran the 100-yard dash in 10 1-5 seconds, winning this event.

He has run the high hurdles twice at the Pennsylvania games, finishing second in 1915 to Fred Kelly, and this year, running on a grass track for first time in 15 seconds. He has one more year at Missouri. His contests this spring and summer will be the Missouri Valley and Western Conference meets and the National A. A. U. events.

Missouri won this morning's meets, score 68 to 41.

CHICAGO, May 13.—Jess Willard and Fred Fulton were matched here tonight for a fight next Labor day, according to announcement by Mike Collins, Fulton's manager.

Tom Jones signed for Willard, the fight to be "10 rounds or more" before the club offering the most money. Willard was promised two-thirds of the purse and Fulton one-third.

Bids according to Collins will be received up to July 1. David Griffith, he said, informally offered $37,500 to bring the contest to St. Paul.

Wisconsin Track Team Defeats Gophers; New Mark in Javelin Throw

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 13.—The University of Wisconsin easily defeated the Universitiy of Minnesota today in their annual dual track meet, 85¾ points to 49¼. Rain and wind prevented fast time in the track events. A conference record was broken when Hauser of Minnesota threw the javelin 161 ft. 6 in. Mucks of Wisconsin was the individual star of the meet, winning the shot-put, hammer and discus events.

MEREDITH BREAKS OLYMPIC RECORD IN HALF-MILE RUN

Pennsylvania Flier Betters His Own World's Mark Made at Stockholm.

CORNELL WINS POINT CUP

Windnagle, of Ithacan Team, Finishes First in Quarter and Second in 880.

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—Running his last race in a dual college event on Franklin Field today, Ted Meredith, Pennsylvania's champion, broke the world's record when he won the half-mile race in the track meet with Cornell. The Ithacans won the meet in easy fashion, 83 1-4 to 33 3-4 points.

Meredith's time was 1m. 52 1-5s., lowering the time of 1.52 1-2 made by him in the Olympic games at Stockholm in 1912, when he won the 800-meters championship and continued to the half-mile mark for a new world's record. The Pennsylvania flier entered only the half-mile event in today's meet so as to be in first-class condition for an effort against the record.

Cornell Man Close Second.

The race was run with one turn on the quarter-mile track and with the finish in the straight-way. Meredith led Windnagle and Taylor, two of Cornell's best half-milers, all the way. Toward the finish Windnagle spurted, but Meredith, inch by inch, drew away and finished three yards in front of Windnagle. The Cornell's man race in this event was also considered remarkable, as he had run in the quarter-mile event and finished second but a short time before, being called out for the half-mile distance.

220-yard dash—Won by Van Winkle, Cornell; second, Kauffman, Pennsylvania; third, Bartset, Cornell. Time, 22 2-5s.

One mile run—Won by Beckwith, Cornell; second, Windnagle, Cornell; third, Irish, Cornell. Time, 4:25 1-5.

440-yard dash—Won by Grimm, Cornell; second, Scudder, Pennsylvania; third, Shelton, Cornell. Time, 50s.

120-yard hurdles, final—Won by Starr, Cornell; second, Watt, Cornell; third, Gubb, Cornell. Time, 15 3-5s.

Two-mile run—Won by Potter, Cornell; second, Hiffmire, Cornell; third, Horwith, Cornell. Time, 9:35.

High jump—Tie between McClaren, Cornell; Turner, Pennsylvania; Crane, Pennsylvania, and Diebold, Pennsylvania, at 5 ft. 8 in.

Shot put—Richards and Howell, Cornell, tied for first place at 42 ft. 6¼ in.; Moore, Cornell, 42 ft. 1¾ in.

Half-mile run—Won by Meredith, Pennsylvania; second, Windnagle, Cornell; third, Taylor, Cornell. Time, 1:52 1-5, breaking world's record of 1:52½ held by Meredith.

Fitzgibbon Low Medal Man for Normandie Meet

Returns a Card of 76 in Field of 120 Golfers for Opening Tournament.

A perfect day for golf had the desired effect at the local country clubs yesterday, and every course in and about St. Louis was well populated. Tournament play held at only two of the clubs, match play being in order at Algonquin, while the Normandie stickers played for medal scores in the qualifying round of the annual spring tourney.

One hundred and twenty golfers turned in scores for the inaugural 1916 tourney, it being necessary to divide the match play into five classes, A, B, C, D, and Special. Frank Fitzgibbon was the low medal man with a 76, while T. McGeorge turned in a 79. Bogey at Normandie is 80, while par is set at 72. The highest score to get into the title class was an 88, while 93 was the highest to qualify in Class B.

Lueking Springs Surprise.

The third round of play in the annual opening tournament was played at the Algonquin Country Club, with A. C. Lueking, F. O. Hale, C. C. Pangman, E. H. Hughes and E. M. Cain remaining in competition for the spring title. A. C. Lueking sprung quite a surprise when he eliminated De Witt Peterkin. Peterkin was last season rated as one of the best golfers on the Webster links, while Lueking was not known to flirt around in the title class. No score was turned in for the match.

F. O. Hale won from J. C. Jones, 3 up and 1, and C. C. Pangman eliminated W. C. Wagner, 3 and 2. E. M. Cain and E. H. Higbee struggled to an even score for 18 holes. The match will be completed today.

Scores in the other classes were as follows: Class B—S. U. Busch won from J. P. Henry, 6 and 5; L. C. Turner won from M. C. McArdle, 2 and 1; D. C. Curtis won from Judge Harsh, 6 and 5. Class C—J. F. Oberwender won from J. S. Leahy, 2 and 1; S. H. Haskins won from D. W. Moss by default; L. R. Milliken won from J. P. Hurrey, 1 up; W. M. Smith won from H. H. Rauth, 1 up; W. C. Doerring won from H. A. Koehler, 3 and 1; C. S. Brown won from S. R. Ward, 2 and 1; C. H. Schlabb won from W. S. Semple 2 and 1. The fourth round will be played on or before next Saturday.

CARDS MOVE INTO THIRD PLACE BY BEATING DELL, 2-1

Hornsby's Double, Snyder's Single and Mowrey's Error Save Game Apparently Lost.

By W. J. O'Connor.

WHEEZER DELL whizzed 'em past the Cardinals for seven innings yesterday so fast that the proteges of Miller Huggins didn't know whether Wheezer was throwing or shooting at them. Brooklyn was buoyantly bounding along the boulevard of victory, 1—0. The croakers were croaking and the quitters were starting, when:

Hornsby hammered the first ball pitched in the eighth to left center for a double. Snyder exploded a single in center and the block signals broke, leaving Hornsby on third. Snyder didn't even whistle rounding first and lo! he was trapped in a runup. Hornsby then bolted for the plate and eluded Oh! Miller, tying the score. Snyder sneaked to second.

Gonzales' Run Wins It.

Doak sacrificed in spite of Daubert, and Gonzales, running for Synder, gondola-ed into third. Huggins hung out the sign for the squeeze. Bescher failed to connect with the ball, and Gonzales was caught like a rat in a trap halfway between third and home. O! Miller chucked panickly to Mowrey. Mike returned with added fury and Gonzales plowed his way over the plate, upsetting such things as he encountered, particularly O. Miller. The Cardinals had won, 2—1, rubbing the Dodgers into the dirt, although Brooklyn is boastfully setting the pace in the National League.

This victory, snatched as it were from the well-known jaws of defeat, moved the Cards into a tie for third place while it took a heluva lot of conceit out of the common enemy. It was easily the prettiest battle of the season, culminating as it did, in a home triumph. However, only 6000 fans were present to enjoy it, but they will have something to talk about this May day.

Doak Outpitches Dell.

It was essentially a pitchers' battle between Spittin' Bill Doak and Wheezer Dell, who was a Cardinal for a brief spell in 1912. Doak had a shade, yielding only four hits and as many walks in the entire battle. He retired the side in order in the seventh, eighth and ninth frames, removing any strain that might have fallen on the shoulders of Hug's pony ballet.

Dell started like a Texas steer on a stampede in a china chop. Only 12 men faced him in the first four frames. Two hits were made off him in six innings and all these went to Bob Bescher, the rejuvenated kid. Dell passed only two men and he looked like American money in Mexico.

His co-workers sneaked over a run in the third when Rogers Hornsby temporarily lost his poise and made a wild throw that will defy all competition for the rest of this season. One was out in this frame when Mowrey maced what would have been a double just inside third. Hornsby made a circus stop, but the force of the blow wheeled him around so that he faced left field. He turned, seemed to measure his throw and let go.

Away the ball sailed, 10 miles over Miller's head and was barely stopped by the pavillion fence. Mowrey went to third. Cutshaw clouted to Jack Smith in deep center and Mowrey meandered home with a run that stood out like the nose on Herzog's face for the succeeding four innings.

Bescher's Great Catch.

The Cards were impotent with the stick as the game wore on. Bescher combed three hits but he got his second after two were out. He died on an attempted steal in the first inning, after compounding his first single. But hitting is not how Bescher contributed most to the Cardinal victory.

In the sixth frame Bescher saved the ball game by the most daredevil catch of the season. Casey Stengel had hit a line drive that seemed ticketed for East St. Louis with stopover privileges on the Eads Bridge. Bescher turned when the bat impigned the pill, galloped, paced, trotted and single-footed until he had gone many, many parasangs. Then he extended his right hand and pulled in the ball. Salvo of applause from the bugs! A bow by Bescher and a great feat was history!

Superbas Fill the Bases Twice But Fail to Score; Sal vs. Pfeffer Today

IT was Bill Doak's third cleanly defined triumph of the season. On opening day he defeated Kantlehner and the Pirates, 2-1, yielding six hits. On May 3 in Chicago he dipped the Cubs in the calcimine vat, 3-0, allowing only two hits. Vaughn was his vis-a-vis that day.

Yesterday Lumbago Bill was in trouble only twice outside of the inning in which Hornsby's horried heave shoved over a Brooklyn tally. In the sixth inning after one was out, Wheat walked. Mowrey singled and Cutshaw then tapped to Doak, who tossed to Snyder, who tossed to Hornsby, effacing Wheat. Olson walked filling the bases, but Miller forced Olson.

Stengel Fails in Pinch.

In the third, passes to Miller and Myers and Daubert's infield single filled 'em up, but Stengel's best was a boost to Smith. Doak had his spitter snapping like a whip, and he played the outside corner like a Plank.

For the second sortie with the chesty proteges of Wilbur Robinson today, Manager Huggins intends to send Harry Sallee to Hurling Hill. Robert will counter with Jeff Pfeffer, one of the biggest and best pitchers in baseball. Play at 3 o'clock.

What must a St. Louis club do to drag 'em in at the gate? The Cards won two out of three from the champion Phillies, occupied a first division berth, and were opposing the league leaders, but only 6000 fans turned out yesterday. Where are the rooters of yesteryear?

Roy Corhan's arm isn't weak; neither is it strong. Roy made a circus stop of Daubert's shot past Hornsby in the third, but couldn't arch it to Miller in time. That, the first hit off Doak, filled the bases. Jack Smith then made a smart capture of Stengel's drive, and the agony ended. Smith's catch came in a dire pinch.

Hornsby's walk in the third was the first pass issued by Dell. Snyder would have hit into a double play only Olson tripped and fell, tagging the bag while prone, for the effacement of Hornsby. Snyder's attempt to steal in this inning was the best giggle-getter of the day.

Doak's pitching for two innings was a poem. He began to get wild in the third, and was continually in the hole after that until the seventh, when he squared away like the master he was in 1914.

Rogers Hornsby's stop of Mowrey's grounder, in the fourth, was worthy of a painting. Rogers grabbed it behind the bag, and was facing left field when he came to. He shot a mile over Miller's head, and Mowrey went all the way to third. They scored it a hit, although a good throw would have nipped Mowrey. However, Hornsby was lucky to get the ball. Cutshaw's fly to Smith scored Mowrey.

Daubert is next to Chase as a fielding first sacker. He took a hit away from Bescher in the fourth. Bob's drive was only a foot inside, and traveling like De Palma when Jake speared it, and fell on the bag.

Olson should be charged with an error on Corhan's steal in the fifth. O. Miller divined Roy's intention, and called for a pitchout. His throw was perfect, but Olson used only one hand, and muffed the throw. Up to this inning only three Cards had faced Dell in each round.

Mowrey hit with one arm free in the sixth, and pushed a puny single to right. It was the hit-and-run, and Mowrey swung at a waste ball. Wheat, who had walked, moving to third. Cutshaw tapped to Doak, and Wheat was effaced in a run-up. Olson then walked, and for the second time, Doak faced a full house, with one out. Corhan saved him this time by a great stop in deep short, and throwing to Betzel for a force at second.

W. U. RUNNERS WIN TRIANGULAR MEET BY DECISIVE SCORE

Pikers Count 86 Points Against 25 for McKendree and Six for Normals.

McKENDREE ATHLETE TO REPRESENT C. A. C.

PADDY FITZGERALD, director of athletics of the Columbian Athletic Club, announced yesterday afternoon that he had secured the promise of Wyatt Rawlings of McKendree College to represent the C. A. C. in track and field athletics this summer. Rawlings performed splendidly in the triangular track and field meet with Washington University and the McKendree and Southern Illinois Normal colleges at Francis Field yesterday.

He ran the mile in 4m and 35s., winning first place with ease. Shortly afterwards he took second in the half-mile with a mark of 2:04. Fitzgerald immediately cornered the Illinois athlete and secured his pledge to run for the Tangled C. He will represent the South Side organization in the Western District A. A. U. championships which will be held here this summer.

Washington University track and field athletes had matters well to themselves in the triangular meet with the McKendree College team of Lebanon, Ill., and the Southern Illinois Normal College squad of Carbondale, at Francis Field, yesterday afternoon, scoring almost three times as many points as were totaled by the athletes of the two visiting teams. The Pikeway team rolled up a total of 86 points, while McKendree was a poor second with 25, and the Normals, a hopeless last with a mere half dozen.

In all but two of the 13 events on yesterday's program, the local performers scored firsts, besides nine seconds, and four thirds. In the two events that the Pikers failed to land the prime honors, McKendree athletes were forced to make unusually good marks, in both instances establishing new marks for the Illinois College Conference, of which the Lebanon institution is a member.

Runs Mile in 4:35.

Wyatt Rawlings of McKendree made the best mark of the day and in fact of the local track season by registering the mile run in 4:35. This is best time that has been done in the mile on a local track for several years. Rawlings won the event in a walk and according to many of the sharps who witnessed his race, he could have knocked off at least five seconds had he been pressed.

Another McKendree youth, George Collard did unusually well by throwing the javelin, 152 feet 3 inches. This breaks the I. C. C. mark by 8 feet 3 inches. Nourse of Princeton last week tossed the weapon 181 feet at Philadelphia, but outside of him there are probably not more than five men in the country who have made more than 150 feet in the event this season. Yesterday, was the first time that the javelin throw was held in this city since the Olympic Games of 1904. Berry of Washington surprised the spectators by hurling it 140 feet.

Pemberton Wins "100."

Two other fairly good marks of yesterday's games were made in the 100 and 220-yard dashes by Pemberton. "Pete" negotiated the century event in 10 1-5 seconds, time not to be sniffed at in these parts. He then stepped the 220 in 23 seconds, even time, another good mark. In both races, Bill McBorley, the former Soldan High athlete, finished second. McBorley has not been training for running events more than a week and his performances came as a pleasant surprise to Coach Edmunds.

Brady of Washington also comes in for his bit of praise by running the half mile in 2:02 2-5, the best mark in the 880 that has been made at Washington since Bill Edmunds has had charge of athletics at the Pikeway. Brady had to beat Rawlings, the lad who set the mile mark, and had the job of his brief career in doing it.

Marsh landed the point honors for Washington, taking first in the high hurdles and tied for first in the pole vault and high jump. Bubb took firsts in the shot and the discuss and a third in the javelin.

Summary:

100-yard dash—Pemberton, Washington, first; McSorley, Washington, second; Boswell, Normals, third. Time, 10 1-5s.

220-yard dash—Pemberton, Washington, first; McSorley, Washington, second; Miller, McKendree, third. Time, 23s.

If You Think Giants Are Not Out of Luck, Read This Sad Wail

Davey Robertson, left fielder of the Giants, declares that Tyler's home run of Thursday bounced off the inch gas pipe that divides fair and foul territory.

"That drive had one chance in a million to light fair," said Robertson. "The drive was curving fast out into foul territory and if it had missed that little line of steel it would have struck foul in the stands by several feet. Another quarter inch and it would have slid off foul. But no. On the rebound that pesky ball simply had to rebound fairly on the playing field. If you can beat that for hard luck I'd like to know how."

Hal Chase, Barred From American League, Lends a Real "Punch" to Reds

Tempermental Star Has Record of .389 in National, Having Hit Safely in 17 Out of Nineteen Games This Season — He's 33 Years Old.

HAL CHASE

ON "Friday, the thirteenth" of February, 1883, there was born at Los Gatos, California, the greatest first baseman baseball has ever owned. Mr. and Mrs. Chase christened their son Harold, which has never proved a handicap. Neither has the "Friday, the thirteenth," his natal day.

For Chase is scorching through the National League at a pace that has the alien pitchers dizzy. He has played in 19 games so far this season and punched out at least one hit in 17 of these. He went up in the pinch on April 29 and failed to solve the enigmatic curve of Al Mamaux of Pittsburg. He faced Kantlehner on April 16 and went hitless four times. In all his other games he has nicked at least one hit, often getting three.

Chase has no equal as a fielding first baseman in the game today, although he is 33 years old. He began playing in 1902 at Santa Clara College and after a brief experience on the campus, bobbed up in 1904 with the Los Angeles Club of the Coast League.

Went to Yanks in 1905.

THE Yankees purchased him in 1905. He played sensational ball until 1910 when his temperament proved too tempestuous for George Stallings, who resigned as manager. Chase was made manager in 1910, but his reign was a failure. He was traded to the White Sox in 1913 and jumped to the Federal League before the end of 1914. He played with Buffalo in the outlaw circuit and was purchased by Cincinnati this spring after Ban Johnson had refused to open the American League gates to him.

Chase is one of the few players in the big leagues who make a sucess of sliding head-first. He has now taught the Reds to use the head-first slide when trying to get back to a base. Chase's record of hitting this season is unequalled in the National League, except by Davy Robertson of the Giants who hasn't played in as many games as Hal.

SPORT SALAD

Poor Maud.

MAUD MULLER on a summer's day
Blossomed forth in glad array.

Her hat was designated "sport"
Her skirt was ala mode and short.

The Judge came riding down the road
And noted Maudie's le-limbs were bowed.

He wheeled around and homeward flew
Concluding Maudie wouldn't do.

Whereat M. M. was sadly hurt
And went and donned a longer skirt.

Which goes to prove the costume wins
That hides a multitude of shins.

THE members of the Citizens' Committee in charge of arrangements for the National Democratic Convention are arranging to put on Wagner at Robison Field on June 13. The opera selected is Siegfried. While Honus Wagner has been a familiar figure to the patrons of Robison Field for lo, these many years, the majority of the St. Louis fans are unacquainted with the batting record of his illustrious namesake, Richard. Might we suggest, therefore, as a sort of a double tribute to the two men who have done so much to surround the name of Wagner with a halo of glory, that instead of Siegfried the Flying Dutchman be sung? Richard wrote it and Honus is it.

Local Giants Capture First Clash of Title Series From Cuban Stars.

The St. Louis (negro) Giants yesterday won the first of a seven-game title series from the Cuban Giants at C. B. C. yesterday afternoon by a score of 4—1. William Gatewood, star flinger for the locals, set the Cubans down without a hit and fanned half a dozen. The winners hit Pedrose safely nine times.

For this afternoon's game, "Stringbean" Williams will be on the hill for the locals and Padrone, a southpaw, for the Cubans. The score:

BABE ADAMS IS CHASED

Right Hander Weakens in Seventh and Is Banished in Favor of Kantlehner.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 13.—Boston lost to Pittsburg today by a score of 5 to 3, a game in which five pitchers were used. Adams was forced to give way to Kantlehner in the seventh, and Reulbach was replaced by Hughes in the sixth. Heilman Has 12 Doubles.

Without a doubt Harry Heilman of the Tigers is the best player to come up to the majors this season. This youngster, who was up once before, but sent to the Pacific Coast League for more seasoning, is clouting .310. Among his hits are 12 doubles and three triples. His dozen doubles put him far ahead of his rivals.

Joe Judge, the first sacker for the Nationals, who is batting all of .158, is the leading base stealer in the Johnson body with a total of eight. A catcher, Ray Schalk, is next in line with seven. Milan and Morgan of the Nationals with six are tied for third honors.

Associating with Tris Speaker has made something of a slugger out of Jack Graney. To date the Indian left fielder has rapped out 10 doubles, two triples and a pair of homers. This all happened in 25 games. Last season in 116 contests he had 20 doubles, seven triples and one circuit smash. Both of his homers this year came in one game at Sportsman's Park.

The Tigers at present lead in team hitting with .260, 12 points ahead of the White Sox. The Browns are clouting .224, tied for sixth place with the Red Sox.

There are three hurlers in the A. L. clouting for better than .300. They are Cunningham and Dubuc of the Tigers and the veteran Eddie Plank of the Browns.

Reds Monopolize Honors.

Charley Herzog's Reds are trying to monopolize honors in the National. They are second in batting, first in fielding, show the way in double plays with 23, have scored the most runs, made the most hits, are tied for pilfering honors with Pittsburg and have one of the leading sluggers in Hal Chase. In the "if" table the Reds are succeeding only so-so.

While he is a great pitcher, Grover Alexander is somewhat of a clouter this season.

Alex has made seven hits in 19 trips to the plate for an average of .368. His only extra-base clout was a triple.

Catchers are having an inning in the National when it comes to hitting. Here are a few of them: McCarty, .437; Meyers, .412; Clarke, .315; Rariden, .313, and Miller, .300. Three of them, McCarty, Meyers and Miller, are members of the Superbas.

That hitting does not win ball games is shown in the case of the Giants. The team has five players batting over .275, but is last in the pennant race. The marks are: Robertson, .437; Burns, .375; Rariden, .313; Kauff, .297, and Fletcher, .282.

Max Carey, the Corsair outfielder, has regained the pilfering lead, with a total of nine. Bruno Betzel and Barney of the Pirates, with eight, come next.

Soldan Wins 5th Straight, Beating Central Nine, 5-2

West End Team Gets Tighter Hold on I. L. Pennant by Knocking Waite Out.

The Soldan High School baseball nine secured a firmer hold on first place in the Interscholastic League race and practically eliminated the Central High nine from the "prep" struggle, by defeating the Mid-City squad, 5 to 2, at High School Field yesterday morning.

The victory, which marked the opening of the second round of play in the high school circuit, was the fifth consecutive win for Jimmie Cook's charges, and as in the first four contests the West Enders showed a marked degree of superiority over their opponents. The defeat marked loss No. 3 for Coach Walker's team and unless Soldan loses its next three contests, while Central is winning, the red and black nine has no chance to land the bunting.

Waite Is Knocked Out.

Central in the early innings looked good, yesterday, and had a 2 to 1 lead until the sixth inning, when the gold and brown wrecking crew started a bombardment on Pitcher Waite. Three runs were scored in this inning, putting the contest on ice. An extra tally was registered in the next inning when Olin hit to center field for a home run.

Central hit Pitcher Harrison of Soldan safely six times, three of these being made by Jones and a pair by Larmore. Both of Larmore's swats were good for extra bases while Jones connected for one double.

Timely Swatting Gives Concordia Win Over Rolla

Grabar's Triple and Seltz' Homer Figure Greatly in 5—1 Victory.

Concordia Seminary added another victory to its string yesterday afternoon by trimming the Rolla School of Mines team at Brock's Park, 5—1. The good pitching of Engelbrecht, who allowed only four hits, and timely batting by Grabar and Seltz won for the embryo ministers.

The lone run off Engelbrecht came in the second, when Dawson crossed the plate following his single and errors by Seltz and Sohn. After scoring one in the first, Concordia put the game on ice in the second, when four runs were chased across the plate. Schmidt walked, Oetting was safe. Then Grabar pounded out his triple and Seltz lifted the ball over the wall.

After this Engelbrecht and Grotts pitched in great style, neither side having any great chance to put a runner across the plate. The score:

JARABEK TO MEET TORRANCE IN MAIN BOUT AT BARRACKS

Sailor's Opponent Claims the Championship of United States Army.

HAS HAD 72 FIGHTS

Soldier Says He Has Never Been Knocked Out Nor Has He Lost Decision.

By Harry S. Sharpe,
Referee for the Future City Athletic Club and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority.

Boxing entertainments at Jefferson Barracks are the most unique of any given in the State of Missouri. They are carried out with military precision, and every detail is looked after. The best of order prevails on the part of the soldiery, who view the bouts with dignified, but enthusiastic mein. Now and then a soldier may so far forget himself as to indulge in some audible criticism or personal coaching of some boxer, but a sign or a word from one of his superiors immediately recalls him to the necessity of observing order.

At an entertainment given a month ago the only rude, noisy, offensive conduct was noticed on the part of several fresh young civilians who made themselves disagreeably conspicuous by loud, and quite unnecessary, remarks to the boxers. They should have been made to subside, but the desire of officers at the Barracks not to offend their civilian guests gave the rowdies full range and they took advantage of it.

Some of the most striking features of the manner in which bouts are conducted at the Barracks, are as follows: The bouts are started promptly on time; boxers are not permitted to delay their entry to the ring; every person who has a ticket calling for a seat is given that particular seat, and without discrimination between civilian, commissioned officer or private; officers, including the Colonel, are in attendance, and a section is reserved for them at the southeast corner of the ring; ladies are invited, and their comfort and protection is carefully observed; tickets may be secured at the door by anyone who may apply, this being on Federal territory and not under jurisdiction of the civil authorities. The entertainments are given in Post Hall, which seats a few more than 1000 spectators within easy vision of the ring. In addition, the regimental band of 33 pieces begins a concert at 7:30 o'clock lasting for one hour, and then plays during intermissions between bouts.

Jarabek Meets Torrance.

The regular monthly entertainment will be given tomorrow night and a good program has been arranged, the principal feature of which will be an eight-round bout between Charles ("Sailor") Jerabek of this city and Jack Torrance, a Corporal in the Twenty-third United States Infantry. His regiment is now stationed at El Paso, Tex., where it is doing border patrol duty.

Torrance is 25 years old, has been fighting since he was 17 and claims the championship of the United States Army, in which he has served enlistments aggregating five years and eight months. He has had 72 ring battles and says he has never been knocked out or lost a decision. Part of his record is as follows, and these he considers as his most important bouts:

Jack McCormack, at Texas City, Tex., 1914, 10 rounds to a draw.

Jack Pace, at Texas City, Tex., 1914, won by knockout in sixth round.

Joe Mace, at Jacksonville, Fla., 1915, 15-round draw.

Louie ("Kid") Alberts, at Galveston, Tex., 1916, given decision in ninth round of 10-round bout.

"Sailor" (Spike) Kelly, at Galveston, Tex., 1916, won by knockout in second round.

Gus Tables, at Texas City, Tex., 1913, 10-round draw.

Torrance is here on a special furlough granted at the request of the commanding officers at the Barracks that he might take part in his bout with Jerabek. Should he be the winner, his furlough will be extended for another 20 days.

Meets Tough Customer.

Torrance will be meeting an experienced boxer in Jerabek, and one well thought of in St. Louis. During the past 18 months he has defeated "Cyclone" Tommy Daly three times in eight-round bouts, knocked out Andrew Minardi of St. Joseph, out-pointed Jack Harrington, given a draw with Harry Trendall and out-pointed Mickey Sheridan of Chicago. On the night of Jan. 29 he boxed Freddy Coyne, but the bout was stopped by Referee Eddie Randall and declared "no contest" because the boxers refused to observe the rules.

Torrance and Jerabek have agreed to box at 150 pounds.

The semi-final bout will be between Paddy Kelly and Joe McMullen, both of St. Louis, and will be for eight rounds at 130 pounds. This will be an important bout for both boys, considering that McMullen, who has had but four contests, defeated Pierce Mathews about five weeks ago in a very hard-fought bout at the Keokuk A. C., and Kelly, in turn, was knocked out by Mathews at the Future City A. C., 10 days ago. McMullen is a very clever boxer, and Kelly a most aggressive one.

The preliminary bouts will be between Joe Weber and Arthur Burke, six rounds at 126 pounds; and Jimmy Curtis and "Young" Jerry, six rounds at 116 pounds.

Ringside seats can be secured for $1, others (reserved) for 75 cents, and general admission, 50 cents.

Murphy Faces Young Benny.

At the Future City A. C., on Tuesday night, bouts are scheduled between bantamweights, and this should insure some fast, lively boxing.

"Young" Benny of New York and Jimmy Murphy, the popular South St. Louis boy, will appear in the feature event. This will mark Benny's first appearance in a bout of importance in St. Louis. He comes highly recommended.

Jimmy Taylor, who boxed Benny McNeill and Archie McLeod here, has been matched with "Kid" Leders of Cincinnati in the semi-final, and "Kid" Bennett and Pete White will provide the preliminary.

Ellis to Defend 3-Cushion Honors Against McCourt in Pittsburg on May 15, 16, 17

Charles Ellis, present holder of the world's three-cushion championship, will defend his honors this month against Charles McCourt, winner of the Interstate League championship, in Pittsburg. The dates announced by the champion are May 15, 16, 17. Both players make their home in Pittsburg, and it will be the first time in many years that two cueists from the same city will contest for a title.

Ellis since he annexed the championship from De Oro has defended it once against Pierre Maupome. McCourt is expected to give the title holder a hard run.

Johnny Layton, St. Louis and Sedalia, Mo., will not defend his pocket-billiard championship until next fall. His opponent will be Frank Taberski of Schenectady. The match will be played at Wood's Opera House, Sedalia, Sept. 13, 14 and 15. June, July and August are resting months for the cue wielders and Layton is going to take advantage of it.

Daveggia, Pitcher for Shaw Team, Has Fanned 76 Batters in 4 Games This Year

Yesterday He Beat Fanning, 12—8, Allowing Five Singles and Whiffing 19 of the Opposing Batters.

IN 1915, the Shaw team worked its way into the final game for the Public School League championship, mainly through the great hurling of Frank Daveggia, 15 years old, of 5029 Shaw avenue. This season, this same flinger bids fair to hurl his team into the elimination battles for the Post-Dispatch trophy. Daveggia was beaten by Benton in the final clash last year.

Shaw this season had played four games and with Daveggia on the hill in all of them was returned the winner each time. In the quartet of battles, Frank allowed nine hits an average of a little more than 2 per game and fanned 76 batters, or 19 per game.

Yesterday Daveggia opposed Fanning school and was returned the winner, 12-8. Fanning is ranked as the heaviest hitting team in Group B, but made only five safeties off Daveggie. This is the greatest total made off him in a single clash this season.

Nine Hits in 4 Games.

In the opening battle of the season, Garfield made one safety off him. Next Fremont was held to three. Then came a no-hit game against Mann, which Daveggia's mates almost threw away for him, and yesterday the five-hit clash against Fanning.

While this hurler, who lets fly with the right hand, has made a great impression as a pitcher, he is also a batter, as a record of 16 hits in 17 trips to the plate for an average of .941 will attest. Among his clouts were five doubles and three triples.

One twirler, Ed Schaberg, 15 years old living at 4340 Gano avenue, jumped into the hall of fame yesterday by twirling a no-hit contest. Schaberg hurls for the Bryan Hill team and yesterday set the Webster sluggers down without a single safety. It was the first no-hit game Schaberg has twirled this season and the second contest he has won for his team.

He has been attending the Bryan Hill school for three years and will graduate this June.

Girard Fans 20 Batters.

William Girard, 15 years old, 5810 Garfield avenue, set the record for strikeouts in the Public School circuit this season, when pitching for Laclede he retired 20 Clark batters on strikes. He passed seven batters. Clark made only two hits off him, both of them scratches. He was an easy winner by a count of 15-1. The work of Ravenscraft, his catcher, was one of the features. This worthy rapped out four hits in five times up, including a triple and home run.

A batting ralley in the eleventh, when Fath bounced a single over second counting two runners, gave Irving a well-earned victory over Ames. It was the first defeat sufered by the Ames team this season. Fox of the losers, who a few weeks ago twirled a not-hit game was pounded safely 16 times by Ames.

James O'Donnell of Madison was in great form, holding Penrose to a single bingle and winning, 17-1. Last year, Madison set the record for the campaign by walloping this same team, 47-1. But Penrose has strenghtened since that time.

Gallagher Gets Six Hits.

Jimmy Gallagher, pitcher for Harrison, continues his great batting. Yesterday in the game with Blair which his mates won, 30-23, he rapped out six hits in as many trips to the plate. Among his blows were two home runs, two triples and a double. He has made 19 hits in 20 times up for an average of .950 this season. All of which is not half bad.

Texas leaguers by Hastings, Cox and John Balducil in the ninth frame sent over four runs in the ninth frame and gave Marshall a 12-11 victory over the Divoll outfit.

George Uhl, star pitcher for Benton, the present holder of the Post-Dispatch trophy was given a rest yesterday, and Powers and McClurg went to the hill for the team. All they did was to hold Lowell to two bingles and win, 18-5, their mates pounding Sallee for 21 safeties.

Lowell set the season's record for errors, when they were charged with 16 bobbles in the clash with Benton. Helman at second turned four of them.

Third Round of Games Booked in Interstate Today

Alpen Braus Tackle Brockmeyers in What Should Prove Feature Contest.

The third round of games will be played today by the teams in the Interstate League, the lone remaining circuit among the local semi-professional tossers. According to Secretary Charley Bartley the contests this season have been well attended and more good crowds are expected out this afternoon.

What should prove the feature battle will be staged at Brock's Park, where the Alpen Braus and Brockmeyers are scheduled to fight it out. The latter team is managed by Billy Bascom and has been playing great ball. The Alpens have a clean slate for the season.

The Wabadas tackle the Manewals at C. B. C.; the Southerns go to East St. Louis for a clash with the Giants, while the Ben Millers play the Hustlers in Belleville.

Several new players have been signed by the managers during the past week to strengthen their outfits. Walter Devoy will be seen at first for the East St. Louis Giants.

De Palma Wants to Enter.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 13.—Ralph de Palma, winner of the annual automobile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway last year in record time, has wired the speedway officials for permission to enter his German car. The entries have closed and a vote of all the entrants will be taken to see if his request will be granted. Under the speedway rules all the other entrants must give their consent in writing before a post-entry car can be permitted to start. De Palma's reason for delaying to send in his entry until after the close of the entry list is not known.

Main Automobile News. Section 5, Pages 2, 3 and 4.

CARS MUST BE FAST FOR DECORATION DAY RACE

Rigid physical tests must be passed by all entrants, for "safety first" will be a practice as well as a slogan at Indianapolis this year. Following are but samples of a whole volume of rules that are necessary to regulate such an enormous undertaking as this race: Each car must show 80 miles an hour in an official speed trial of one lap of the track to be eligible. Speed trials will be held on May 26 and 27. Cars shall start in the order of the time they make in the official speed trials; the fastest car starting in first position, next the pole. The racing numbers will be assigned in the same manner, the fastest car receiving No. 1. In event of rain, the race will be postponed until Wednesday, May 31, or some subsequent date. Any driver, who in the opinion of the officials or Speedway management, does not show sufficient skill and judgment in the handling of his car to make him a safe factor in competition, shall be barred from the track. Any driver, who, on the day of the race gives evidence of exhaustion or other physical incapacity making him a potential danger to others on the course, may be barred from further competition. The status of his eyesight, heart action, blood pressure and general condition must have been approved by the Speedway surgeon at least five days before the contest. Steering wheel spiders other than steel or bronze will not be permitted. All chain driven cars must be equipped with chain guards. All parts of cars, with respect to safety, shall be subject to the approval of the Speedway Technical Committee.

CADILLAC AGAIN FIRST

For the second time in two years a Cadillac has won first prize in the annual tire mileage contest conducted by the Ajax Rubber Company, Inc. The result of the contest, which covers a year's use of its tires, has just been announced by the Ajax company.

This year the first prize of $500 goes to George C. Mathis, who secured the remarkable tire service represented in 27,220 miles. Mr. Mathis drives a Cadillac for Mrs. J. D. Jackson of New Haven, Conn. His record is 5,200 miles better than that of last year's head winner, Garth C. Jensen, who hung up a mark of 21,985 miles, also with a Cadillac, owned by John N. Welsby of Stevens Point, Wis. It is required that contesting mileages be sworn to by the owner of the car and also by the driver where one is employed. Mathis won a smaller prize with the same car in last year's contest, with a record of 14,400 miles.

NEW GRANT FACTORY.

All rumors as to where the Grant Motor Car Corporation will locate its new factory are set at rest by the announcement made today to the effect that it has closed a contract for the construction of a modern, up-to-date plant of 150,000 feet area at Cleveland.

This purchase of eight acres, located at the corner of Colt and Kirby avenues in Cleveland's East End manufacturing district, and on the main line of the New York Central Railroad, gives the corporation sufficient land to care for present and future manufacturing progress, and will permit almost immediate doubling of production.

Construction is already under way with the contractor's guarantee that the new plant will be ready for occupancy not later than July 15, and deliveries will be made from the Cleveland plant Aug. 1.

National Secures Patent.

Papers have just been issued by the United States Govenrment Patent Office at Washington to the National Motor Vehicle Co. of Indianapolis by which the Government recognizes as a registered trade mark the name "National" and the name "Highway" as used in connection with automobiles. By this patent office registration the National Co. is now guaranteed that the name National or the name Highway cannot be appropriated and used in connection with the name of any other automobile. "A long established name and registered trade mark," said Mr. North Moore, of Trenton Motor Car. Co., St. Louis distributor of National cars, "is now considered to be a vital asset by some of the most reliable manufacturers of the country."

That there is "something in a name" was best evidenced to the officials of the National factory. One year ago the public never heard of a 12-cylinder car, and immediately after the National company announced the Highway Twelve they received orders from practically every state of the country.

Haynes Enlarges Factory.

The Haynes Automobile Co. is completing the fifth addition to its plant within the present fiscal year. The new structure that is being completed at the present time will house the production of the "light 12" car. It is expected that the manufacture of the high-power light-weight car will be under way by June 10.

Exide Service Extended.

H. B. Marshall, local manager for the Exide Battery Depots, Inc., will spend the early part of next week at Kansas City visiting the branch Exide depot at that point. The increase in the sale of Exide batteries throughout the Southwest in the last few years has demanded that factory service be rendered, not only from St. Louis but also from Kansas City, and both of these Exide depots come under the jurisdiction of the St. Louis office of the Exide company.

Clean Out Radiators Now.

If the radiator of your automobile has been filled with some anti-freezing solution all winter, it should be thoroughly flushed out with clean water now. There are literally thousands of small cells in every radiator which gradually become filled with sediment, rust, etc. When this happens it seriously interferes with the efficiency of the cooling system and is often directly responsible for over-heating and pre-ignition, etc. By flushing out the cooling system thoroughly at this time, you will start the summer right, and perhaps avoid expensive repairs as well.

FLANDERS EXPLAINS ADVERTISING POLICY

Some striking comments on the fundamental value of honesty in advertising are contained in a statement by Walter E. Flanders, president of the Maxwell Motor Co. The statement is a concrete explanation of the aims behind the company's advertising policy.

In view of the national movement in the direction of sincerity and truth in advertising, Mr. Flanders' remarks have a timely interest.

Among other things, he says:

"The public has its introduction to a business house largely through the medium of advertising. In this, as in other instances, the first impressions exert great influence and the line of least resistance is to have those first impressions favorable. If our advertising contains exaggerated, sensational or untrue statements, the public will inevitably conceive a corresponding impression of the company behind that advertising. And we can't afford to put any such obstacles in our own path.

"An essential element of institutional advertising is truth. Unless you can accept as literally and wholly true the statements made in Maxwell advertising, you cannot do justice to the Maxwell car and the Maxwell Motor Co.—you cannot truly reflect the Maxwell organization and you cannot have the necessary confidence in the ideals and honesty of the Maxwell Motor Co."

FIRST TOURING PARTY

The first touring party to arrive in St. Louis is Charles E. Dagenett, United States Indian Commissioner, his young bride, and two Indian boys, from Washington, D. C., in a Hudson.

They started three weeks ago from Washington D. C., touring through Oklahoma, Texas, Illinois, Pennsylvania and Ohio. Mr. Dagenett, who is also Supervisor of Indian Employment, is making this his honeymoon trip as well as a business trip. He expects to travel through Kansas, Nebraska and to Rocky Ford, Colo., which is the destination he is bound for. Up to his arrival in St. Louis, he covered a total distance of 12,000 miles, and he claims that not a single repair was needed on the car during the trip.

Mr. Dagenett is half Pueblo Indian and French. One of the boys, who is a full-blooded Pueblo, is his nephew.

MISS ANGLIN FILLS SEVEN PLACES IN "AS YOU LIKE IT"

Players for Shakspearan Tercentenary Here Said to Be Well Adapted to Roles.

The engagement by Miss Margaret Anglin of Frederic Lewis, who for seven years has been the leading man for Sothern and Marlowe, to play the part of Orlando in the community production of "As You Like It," in Forest Park, June 5 to 11, in honor of the Shakspeare tercentenary, was announced yesterday by William W. LaBeaume, chairman of the Productions Committee of the St. Louis Pageant Drama Association.

LaBeaume also announced the filling by Miss Anglin of six other places in the cast, as follows: Audrey, Miss Margaret Hoffman; LeBeau, Lionel Pape; Oliver, Henry Hull; Duke Frederick, Richard Temple; Jaques de Boys, Brandon Peters; Adam, Harry Barfoot.

The engagement of Robert B. Mantell to play Jaques, of Sidney Greenstreet to play Touchstone, and of Max Montesole to play Corwin, was announced some days ago. Montesole probably also will play William.

Miss Hoffman has previously played with Miss Anglin, as has Barfoot. Miss Anglin, in a letter to John H. Gundlach, president of the Pageant Drama Association, remarks that "it has been said humorously of Mr. Barfoot, who plays Adam, the part of which Shakspeare himself was the original representative, that the author was thinking of Mr. Barfoot when he wrote the part and only played it himself because Mr. Barfoot was, unfortunately, born some 300 years later.

Miss Anglin writes that Pape "is an actor who has a greater reputation in London than in the United States," and that he "is curiously well suited to the role of LeBeau." Henry Hull, who is a brother of Howard Hull, the husband of Miss Anglin, made his first appearance with her about four years ago and is now appearing in a local theater. Brandon Peters, who before has played with Miss Anglin in "As You Like It," is now appearing in "King Lear" at the Neighborhood Playhouse, New York City.

THREE OUT OF SIX BONDSMEN ARE FOUND TO OWN PROPERTY

Circuit Attorney to Order Sheriff to Make Levy to Obtain $800 Which Was Forfeited.

An inquiry by a special title examiner, employed by the Circuit Attorney to find whether bondsmen against whom bond forfeitures have been declared and the amounts are still uncollected, have property which could be levied on by the Sheriff to satisfy the judgments, resulted yesterday in the finding that there is property owned by two of six bondsmen investigated, while the estate of a third owns property.

Circuit Attorney Harvey will order the Sheriff to proceed immediately against Harry Anastas, on a bond of $800, which was forfeited in June, 1915. Morris Gesser, who is surety on an $800 bond forfeited in December, 1914, and the estate of F. O. Lange, who signed a bond of $800 forfeited in April, 1913, are the others against whom it was found a levy could be made.

The cases in which Lange and Gesser are the bondsmen are now before the Governor and no action will be taken by the local authorities until he has disposed of them.

2000 POTTERS ARE LOCKED OUT

Five Plants at Sebrings, O., Closed, as Answer to Series of Strikes.

ALLIANCE, O., May 13.—Practically all of the Sebrings' industrial activities came to a standstill today when the town's five potteries were closed by the owners, throwing about 2000 workers out of employment.

This is held to be the employers' answer to a series of strikes and labor disturbances which began nine months ago. The latest move in this was a strike yesterday of 50 kiln drawers who, the manufacturers say, are under a union agrement which will not expire until October, 1917.

LAWYERS' 50—50 CLAIM ON JUDGMENT LEAVES CLIENT 0

Union Electric Will Pay $350 for Injuries to Man Who Gets Verdict in Name Only.

A new sort of 50-50 arrangement, by which a pair of lawyers claim 50 per cent of a judgment which they won for a client, and a third lawyer claims the other 50 per cent, leaving the client nothing, will be passed upon by John T. Fitzsimmons, attorney for Sheriff Dickmann. The Union Electric Co., which is ready to pay the amount of the judgment, $350, to somebody, has asked the Sheriff to name the proper recipient, and the Sheriff has called on his lawyer for an opinion.

Stephen Steinbrunn, a paper hanger, riding a motorcycle Sept. 24 last, was hurt by a collision with one of the Union Electric trucks, and filed suit for $5000, his attorneys being W. Paul Mobley and Charles A. Reeder. A verdict for $350 was obtained in Judge Jones' court.

In the meantime, the company had been formally notified by W. Neustadt, an attorney, that he had a lien on the judgment, to the extent of 50 per cent of its amount. Later, the company was notified by Mobley and Reeder that they had a lien on 50 per cent of the judgment. It appears that Steinbrunn first engaged Neustadt as his lawyer, but later turned the case over to Mobley and Reeder.

PROTEST AGAINST LOW WATER RATE TO MANUFACTURES FILED

Civic League and Other Organizations Oppose Schedule Before Public Service Commission.

A formal complaint against the water rate schedule adopted in St. Louis recently, under which manufacturers would get water for 4 1-2 cents per 100 cubic feet, while merchants, householders and other consumers would have to pay for it at practicaly double rates, even though consuming quantities in the same period of time, was filed with the State Public Service Commission yesterday on behalf of the Civic League, Central Trade and Labor Council and other organizations.

William F. Woerner, former member of the State Public Service Commission, filed the complaint as counsel for the Civic League and the other associations. He aleges the rate schedule discriminates grossly in favor of manufacturers. He charges that manufacturers would pay less for their water than it actually cost the city to deliver it, and that the public generally would be compelled to pay the deficit in higher water rates.

The new rate schedule was advocated by the Business Men's League on the ground that competition between rival cities made it necessary for St. Louis to offer special inducements to manufacturers, even at the expense of selling them water at less than cost.

The State Commission has decided in previous hearings that is has power under the law to fix rates contrary to those imposed by the Board of Aldermen.

WIFE DESERTED SHORTLY AFTER HONEYMOON ASKS FOR DIVORCE

Mrs. Elizabeth Wright Says She Called to See Husband, Ill, but Was Denied Admission.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wright, daughter of John H. Murphy of 5089 Raymond avenue, former clerk of the St. Louis Court of Appeals, filed suit yesterday to divorce Lloyd B. Wright, a dentist, of 5146 Raymond avenue.

The Wrights have been living apart since two weeks after their return to St. Louis from their honeymoon, Mrs. Wright says in her petition, at that time her husband went to the home of his parents after he became ill, and never returned. This was in April of last year. The couple were married March 31, 1915.

Mrs. Wright states that after her husband went to his home she called to see him, but was denied admission. She said she knew of no cause of his leaving her.

Wright, declined to discuss the suit or the causes which led up to the separation. The couple had been childhood sweethearts.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

WALL STREET MARKET IS CONTROLLED BY BUYERS; MOTOR STOCKS STRONG

Range of Values for the Week Shows Many Wide Gains.

FUTURE OUTLOOK GOOD

Sentiment Generally Is Cheerful as to Next Price Movement.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 13.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Glancing backward to the period of uncertainty preceding the acceptance by the American Government of Berlin's new proposals in regard to the regulation of submarine warfare, the failure of stocks to make substantial advances once that acceptance was assured, seems somewhat anomalous.

"If the settlement of the issue pending with Germany, it might be asked, did not result in stimulating the market, could it have been true that misgiving over the uncertainties of the foreign situation was at any time such a strong depressing force as it was supposed to be?

"To this question there are several possible answers. There have always been those who maintained that there would be no break with Germany, but in the most recent crisis these optimists were few and far from emphatic in their opinion. Inasmuch as they had no better sources of information or judgment than the rest of the community, the theory that the market never really believed that a break was imminent may be dismissed.

The Other Reasons.

Two other explanations are more plausible. One was that even such a rupture may have occurred, and even should war have followed, those events would have given no serious shock to American industry and security values, fortified as they are by the enormous resources of the country.

"Such a theory supposes that the market had not been under the necessity of discounting a break. Finally, there still exists a distinct feeling that, though the submarine controversy has been officially settled, the whole matter is still in a more or less precarious footing, because of the very nature of the submarine method of warfare and the difficulty the civil authorities may have in keeping it within prescrbed bounds.

Germany's acknowledgment, after positive denials, that the sinking of the Sussex was due to an unauthorized attack by an under-sea boat, naturally raised the question whether the Government will be more sucessful in the future than it has been in the past in preventing attacks of this kind.

"Of Germany's anxiety to maintain peace with the United States—certainly as long as she is convinced that it is to her advantage to do so—there is little question, in spite of the conditions attached to the latest concessions from Berlin; whether she will be able to do so remains in some doubt in the minds of the financial community.

"Curiously, in the midst of the rather defiant German communication, the Stock Exchange had pointed out to it what was interpreted as a sounding for peace.

"Along with the subsequent outburst of peace rumors originating in Rome, Washington, Rotterdam and elsewhere, these hints became a more or less positive market force. The railway shares made some advances and the munitions shares were erratic, as might have been expected under the circumstances; yet there was little evidence that the stock market was doing more than groping, very much in the dark, toward the inevitable ending of the war, and the changed conditions that will then result.

Many Peace Rumors.

"Each suggestion bearing on peace has originated, directly or indirectly, in Germany, and statements made by English Government officials, reiterating a determination to prosecute the war, received consideration as indicating that the prime essential of peace—the concurrence of the other party—was still lacking.

"In the case of almost any other considerable nation than Mexico, the summoning of the state militia would probably have precipitated the Stock Exchange into the midst of a 'war scare.' That it has not done so in this instance may not be attributed to absence of genuine concern over our relations with our Southern neighbor.

"There has been a disposition to exaggerate, rather than to minimize the outlook for extensive trouble with Mexico, and the situation there was probably outranked, in its threatening possibilities, any other which the market has had to confront. With tortuous diplomacy, complicated by frequent outbursts of bandit lawlessness—either one or both of which may have serious results—our relations with Mexico have been recognized, in financial quarters, as being in unstable equilibrium.

"No new evidence was needed, in the shape of gold imports from Canada, to establish the commanding position this country occupies in world trade by reason of the war; yet those imports brought forcibly to mind the fact that the allied powers are once more looking after their exchanges in other ways than by the sales of securities in this market.

"Inasmuch as the gold movement seems to have originated indirectly with France, where 'mobilization' of securities is yet to be put into effect, it is difficult to draw conclusions as to how far Great Britain has liquidated her holdings here, and how much of such holdings yet remains to be sold.

"Stocks showed gains in the week, with violent advances recorded on some of the motor securities. Yesterday's market was firm, with motor stocks the feature."

LONDON REVIEW.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York Evening Post.

LONDON, May 13.—Whatever may be the opinion of your financial markets concerning the ending of the war—whether that opinion be correctly expressed in the rumors current this week or not—the conviction is held in responsible circles here that prospects of an early peace depend entirely on whether Germany is able to foresee and realize that there is ahead of her an ultimate and inevitable defeat, and whether, with this realization, she prefers an early surrender for economic reasons.

Should the ending of the war be made to depend, instead, on decisive military developments, this will obviously be a slow process. The economic situation in Germany, from advices reaching here, is very oppressive, though distress in its most acute forms is probably confined to the lower and poorer classes.

Germany's Position.

Germany's policy of "frightfulness" and disregard of established usages according to "city" opinion, has created a curious deadlock for herself, leaving open to her only two courses to insure economic recovery, unless her attitude is definitely changed. One of these courses is to obtain a decisive military triumph, which we feel is impossible; the other is for the German people themselves to disown the military clique and offer frank acknowledgment of their changed attitude, together with reparation for actual wrongs inflicted and security of some sort for the maintenance of peace in the future. Such reparation need not, necessarily, take the form of indemnity in the ordinary sense.

President Wilson's latest note was considered masterly—one of the cleverest documents of its kind in history. Having regard to your enormous wealth and moral power—to say nothing of the German ships in your possession—the concensus of opinion is that Germany would think many times before provoking a final rupture.

The Outbreak in Ireland.

The sequel of the outbreak in Ireland is distressing, because it tends to revive past controversies and weakens the Government's power and prestige. However, the nation is now so fully awake to the situation confronting it as to insure a tolerably prompt and correct Government policy in all pending matters. An example of this may be found in the prompt passing of the compulsory service bill.

The chief trouble to be faced by the Government authorities is the position of exchange, which has been aggravated by the placing of excessive and extravagant orders abroad, especially the placing of such orders in Scandinavia, which reacted on American exchange. Nevertheless, this can only emphasize the strength of our hidden resources, which may be counted on to deal successfully with your exchange for months to come.

France also is now about to manage her exchange problem better. That country is exporting gold more freely, and has conceived the excellent and hopeful scheme of mobilizing foreign securities held in France.

The minimum prices of the "prior charge" stocks of English railroads will probably be removed on Monday—an action which will affect many millions of capital. The first effect will probably be a fall in prices, but ultimately the removal of restrictions should result in greater liquidity for these shares.

CATTLE RECEIPTS ARE LIGHT AND PRICES STEADY

Small Changes Are Shown on the Week's Trading; Sheep Are Higher.

	This Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	11,100	12,000
Hogs	50,100	43,500
Sheep	9,200	10,500
Horses and mules	4,500	5,800

Cattle receipts were light last week, the total amounting to around 11,000 head. This is the season of the year, however, when small runs are to be expected. A liberal proportion of the week's offering consisted of steers, including some good droves. The best heavy steers cleared at $9.25 to $9.55, while yearlings ranged $9.50 to $9.65 for the better grades. A large string of Kansas cattle brought $9. Heavy steers generally sold strong all week, but there was some weakness on yearlings. Salesmen considered yearlings 10c to 15c lower, but buyers claimed that the large runs the cattle took on offset the apparent decline.

There was a strong market for beef cows. Supplies were light and buyers needed more than were available. The best cows brought $8 to $8.50, while the bulk of the offerings cleared in a range from $6 to $7.25.

The demand for bulls was good. Market generally was strong. Top on bulls was $8.25, while the bulk of the better offerings easily commanded $7.25 to $7.75. Veal calf market was irregular. Top veals sold up to $10.50. Most of the desirable vealers brought $9 to $10. Heavy yearlings sold at $4.75@5.25 and light yearlings $5.75 to $6.50.

Stockers Are Quiet.

Trade was quiet in the stocker and feeder division, owing to small receipts. Dealers claim that they have had some losses on stockers that they laid in at high figures and have been unable to negotiate at a profit. Some cattle have been sold out of second hands at 15c to 20c declines. Best feeders brought up to $8.50. Country demand at the present time is slack as the farmers are busy planting corn and have little time to devote to buying stock cattle. Feeder prices right now are abnormally high.

The market advanced the greater portion of the week and closed at the top. Pigs and lights were poor sellers the first three days, but advanced sharply the last three, and closed on a 50c higher basis than the close of the previous week. Good hogs made a gain during the week of around 25c. Hogs with weight were in best demand.

Good hogs that shippers and city butchers could use were best sellers and they brought $9.85@10.10, while the mixed and plain grades went at $9.60@9.90, rough throwout packers $9.25@9.50. Best grade of lights sold at $9.35@9.85, fair grades $8.75@9.25, best quality pigs under 125 lbs. $8.35@8.75, fair to medium $7.75@8.25, and the poor kinds $7@7.65.

Sheep Receipts Are Light.

The best wool lambs went at $11.70, and clipped lambs sold as high as $10. Medium clipped lambs sold at $9.50@9.75. Fat spring lambs were good sale and the best brought $12@14, while the medium grades went at $10@11.75. These are certainly high figures, but the demand is good and the number coming to market rather small. Poor grade springs were not wanted at any price.

Not many sheep were offered. The best clipped sheep were all ewes and they went at $8.45, which is the highest price ever paid on this market for clipped sheep. Others sold at $8.25@8.35, while the choppers went at $6@6.75 and clipped bucks at $7.

The horse supply was light, but better than previous weeks. The movement was stronger and prices firmer. Stock with weight and class for Easterners brought exceptionally high prices, some good big work horses bringing from $225 to $275 per head. Best 4-year-olds went at from $160 to $187.50. The Southern trade was not so active, but there was plenty of demand to move the available supply.

QUOTATIONS IN COTTON MARKET SHARPLY HIGHER

Bulls Have the Edge on Week's Trading; Spot Values Also Strong.

The cotton market showed considerable activity last week and reached the high figure of 13.53c for July contracts in New York. This advance was a step higher for a market that had already shown remarkable strength.

Quotations in spot markets advanced with those in the future markets, and shorts were nervous. Spot cotton of a good character sold at a premium over quotations, and the advance had the earmarks of a real upturn.

Quotations in the principal spot markets of this country were as follows: Galveston, market steady, middling at 13.15c; New Orleans, steady, 12.75c; Mobile, quiet, 12.63c; Savannah, steady, 12⅝c; Charleston, steady, 12½c; Norfolk, steady, 12.75c; Wilmington, steady, 12¼c; New York, quiet, 13.05c; Boston, quiet, 13.05c; Philadelphia, quiet, 13.30c; Houston, steady, 13c; Augusta, steady, 12.75c; Memphis, steady, 13c; St. Louis, steady, 13c; Little Rock, steady, 12.88c.

The Future Markets.

In the future markets there was a range for the week of 50 to 60 points from high to low. The close on Saturday, May 6, and the close on Saturday, May 13, with the intervening high and low figures, follow:

NEW YORK.	Close May 6.	High For Wk.	Low For Wk.	Close May 13.
May	12.69	13.04	12.64	12.80
July	12.75	13.19	12.72	12.90
Oct.	12.90	13.39	12.89	13.06
Dec.	13.07	13.53	13.04	13.22

The Census Bureau's report of the consumption of cotton during April, was somewhat smaller than expected; the total was 531,716 bales, compared with 613,625 in March, and 513,610 in April, 1915. The consumption, therefore, is small only when compared with last month, which was the greatest on record.

The consumption for nine months ending April 30, was 4,760,726 bales compared with 4,091,825 in 1915, and 4,264,896 in 1914.

Stocks of cotton in manufacturing establishments increased. The total in stock, on April 30, was 2,006,512 bales, compared with 1,831,035 at the same time in 1915, and 1,572,058 in 1914. This may be compared interestingly with the stock on hand at the beginning of this season, 1,401,481 bales.

Consumption for the balance of the season, running in proportion with that of the nine months ending April 30 would be, in round figures, 6,350,000 bales.

Weather and crop conditions in the cotton region for the week ending May 9, are given by the Weather Bureau as follows: "Much cotton seed failed to germinate well and a poor stand is generally reported because of cold, dry weather, although warmer weather the latter part of the week has improved conditions somewhat. Replanting is delayed in the Southeast because of dry weather. Chopping is going on in most of the Southern sections. Damage by cut worms continued in parts of the lower Mississippi Valley."

Anxiety in regard to Hessian fly damage, especially in Kansas, had a decidedly bullish effect on wheat in the local market yesterday. As a result, the market closed firm at ⅞c to 1c net advance. Corn finished ¼@⅜c up. Oats were quiet.

According to a well-known authority, the apparent sudden breaking down of the Kansas wheat crop promise was almost entirely due to Hessian fly rather than to drouth. This opinion seemed to have much greater influence on speculators than did showers in parts of Kansas and Nebraska, or did predictions of further moisture in sections where dry weather has been the subject of serious complaint.

A moderate early decline in prices was accordingly of short duration, the market for the rest of the day showing unmistakable signs of strength. The fact that the rains had not fallen in the chief producing sections of Kansas acted as a palpable hindrance to the bears.

Evidence of liberal sales here for export, the first instance in a long while that such sales have been consummated, gave increased firmness to the wheat market late in the session. It was said in this connection that two foreign governments were after wheat at the seaboard, and that heavy clearances were expected next week. Seaboard demand included corn as well as wheat.

The corn market was bullishly affected also by lightness of receipts and by rains that caused delay to planting.

"Crop Killers" Active.

"Crop killers' furnished the market will all kinds of news last week. In the early speculation quotations advanced on lack of moisture in Kansas and Nebraska. When it looked like rain in those States the market enthusiasts discovered it was blowing so hard in the Northwest that seed was being lifted out of the ground on thousands of acres. This was a new line of ammunition to many very aged traders in the wheat game.

On Thursday the market developed weakness on rain where needed in Kansas and Nebraska; but when prices started down, Chicago traders said the moisture was insufficient to relieve the drouth, and values were advanced again, while reports of heat damage were circulated, although the official temperature readings showed the highest the mercury reached in the Southwest was about 80 degrees. The same day reports of sandstorms in Kansas, and high winds in Oklahoma were made to do service as price makers.

On Friday the "crop killers" were forced to "shift the cut," for Kansas and Nebraska and the entire Southwest got a good soaking rain, and values ran down in a rather threatening manner in the early dealings. A rally was quickly started, however, on reports that the rains were insufficient and that the Hessian Fly was developing very rapidly in Kansas.

Saturday further rains fell where needed and values reacted sharply, only to rise as quickly and close firm when B. W. Snow issued a report that Hessian flies were devouring the Kansas wheat and indications were that a very short crop would be raised, despite perfect weather and a Government report on May 1, indicating about 100,000,000 bushels of wheat for the State.

Hessian Flies Small Eaters.

While Hessian fly may develop to considerable numbers in the next two weeks, especially if temperatures are high without moisture, there has only been one year in which they proved a violent price factor, and then after the advance on fly damage the market went to pieces. Every year Hessian fly destroy more or less wheat, but ordinarily the loss is small, and possibly will be this year, but the "crop killers" must earn their salaries, so exaggerated reports of crop conditions may be expected until the wheat nears harvest.

In the Northwest the weather for spring wheat seeding has been ideal, and indications are that the area seeded will show less abandoned acreage than recently thought likely, when rain was falling and temperatures around the freezing point. Later on, the "crop killers" no doubt will start a black rust scare in spring wheat; but there was only one year when black rust advanced prices 30c in 30 days, and the market declined 30c afterwards.

From official advices the June Government report gives promise of indicating around 510,000,000 bushels of winter wheat, compared with 499,000,000 bushels on May 1, and 496,000,000 on April 1. This compares with a harvest last year of 655,000,000 bushels. With the carryover from last year's crop the largest on record, even should spring wheat be reduced materially below the record yield of last year of 356,000,000 bushels, indications are that the fall will see supplies in the country fairly close to the record crop of 1,000,000,000 bushels raised last year.

CITIES SERVICE COMPANY

We have no hesitation in recommending the PREFERRED and COMMON Stocks for investment at their present price.

A careful analysis shows that this company enjoys a strong financial position. Provision has been made for the retirement of the $7,000,000, five-year 7% notes, together with all other current indebtedness, leaving the PREFERRED STOCK a first lien on all of the assets of the company.

President Doherty in the 1915 Annual Report says: "It must be borne in mind, however, that no matter what these oil earnings may amount to in the future, Cities Service Company is essentially a public utility company, with all the stability of investment that these words imply, and that the expectations of earnings from these public utility properties have been fully realized and have now reached a point which assures for the Company a splendid future aside from the earnings from the production oil."

The company operates 70 Public Utility properties, selling gas and electric current to over 200 communities in the United States. About 95% of the earnings of this company for the year of 1915 were derived from strictly Public Utility business.

However, the gross earnings are being materially increased through the company's OIL-PRODUCING PROPERTIES. We quote from the Wall Street Journal of May 2, 1916:

"For the week ended April 29 the average daily amount of oil marketed by Empire Gas and Fuel Co., the oil subsidiary of Cities Service Co., from the new Kansas oil field was 6100 barrels. The largest average amount per day in any previous week was 5500 barrels.

"At the Big Heart gasoline extraction station an average of 4000 gallons per day of gasoline is being extracted from natural gas, but additions to the extraction plant are being made which will bring the output up to 12,000 gallons a day inside of 90 days."

Dividends are being earned approximately three times over, leaving a surplus of more than 30% on the outstanding Common Capitalization. Preferred stock at the current quotations yields over 7% net.

We believe that both the Preferred and Common stocks will sell materially higher.

Dividends payable monthly.

3 TROOP TRAINS GO THROUGH HERE ON WAY TO BORDER

25 Officers and 630 Men of Third Infantry Are From Madison Barracks, N. Y.

GET RIGHT OF WAY

Schedules on Which They Travel Are Faster Than Those of Passenger Trains.

Three special trains carrying 25 officers and 630 men of the Third United States Infantry, Col. J. H. Penn in command, passed through St. Louis yesterday on the way from Madison Barracks, New York, to the Mexican border. Friday two trains carrying the Third Filed Artillery and the 112th Coast Artillery passed through.

The first of yesterday's trains reached St. Louis at 7:17 a. m., the second at 4:40 p. m. and the third at 5:30. Altogether there were 40 cars, sleepers for the men, box cars for their equipment and horses and flat cars for their guns.

There were 107 horses, 12 wagons, two ambulances, 70,000 pounds of baggage, 29,750 pounds of forage and 19,750 pounds of rations. The trains left Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., Thursday night and came here by way of Chicago, a fourth train being routed by way of Kansas City. They had right of way over everything and the conductor of the third train said it made the trip here from Chicago in five minutes under the schedule of the fastest train on his road, the Chicago & Alton.

The soldiers go from here to Eagle Pass, Tex., where they will be assigned to border duty.

The Third Field Artillery was dispatched from Reading, Pa. They were up to the full complement of 117 men, seven carloads of horses and four three-inch guns with 18 caissons. They came away in such a hurry, however, that their revolvers and the greater part of the ammunition had to be sent on a later train.

The men of the 112th weer under the command of Capt. H. D. Matthews, who was met at Union Station by his sister, Mrs. J. T. Rider of Marissa, Ill., and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Peyton of 4234 Page boulevard.

The 112th is assigned to infantry duty. The men carried "full packs," consisting of rifle, cartridge belt, shelter tent half, bayonet and blanket. They came from Fort Dupont, Delaware City, Del. There were 85 men and two officers in three sleeping cars.

DAM TO SUPPLY 185,000 ACRES IS COMPLETED

Elephant Butte Work in Southwest Greatest Storage Reservoir in World.

By Associated Press.

ELEPHANT BUTTE, N. M., May 13.—Work was completed here today on the Elephant Butte Dam, a United States reclamation project, which, by damming the Rio Grande River, forms the greatest storage reserve in the world. Construction began five years ago. The reservoir will feed an irrigation system that will water 185,000 acres of land in New Mexico, Texas and Mexico. The dam blocks a canyon of the Rio Grande, 120 miles north of El Paso.

It is the fifth of the Government's big irrigation projects and will store the entire flow and flood of the river. The reservoir will hold 115,000,000,000 cubic feet of water, which, reclamation service experts say, would cover the State of Delaware to a depth of two feet.

The dam stands 318 feet high and is 1574 feet long. It provides a roadway across the canyon 16 feet wide and at its base is 235 feet thick.

Territory to be irrigated by the reservoir lies in four valleys. For each of these a diversion dam and main canals are being constructed. Twenty-five thousand acres of the land is on the Mexico side of the river, near Juarez. More than half of it is virgin, with a small acreage owned by the Government.

The Government before beginning construction of the dam laid out a town equipped with modern conveniences, electric lights, water and sewerage; stores, schools, hospitals, hotels and a theater. At times as many as 4000 persons lived in the town, whose government was entirely under the jurisdiction of the engineers. A railway was constructed through 13 miles of rough country to connect the town with a main line railroad.

SUNDAY MAY COME TO ST. LOUIS IN OCTOBER, MINISTERS SUGGEST

Possibility of Meeting Here This Fall Arises From Reported Opposition to Him in Boston

The possibility that Billy Sunday, the evangelist, now in Kansas City, may come to St. Louis in October, has been suggested by ministers and others interested in bringing him here, in view of the reported opposition to the Sunday campaign in Boston, scheduled to begin in that month. The suggestion has been made that St. Louis may get the time which has been allotted to Boston.

A dispatch from Boston to the Post-Dispatch last night quoted Allen C. Emery, chairman of the Billy Sunday committee there, as saying there was no likelihood of a change in the Boston plans. He denied that the evangelist had sent a representative to that city to look into the opposition to him, and he said that this opposition was negligible.

There has been difficulty with the Boston authorities over the plans for Sunday's proposed building, and there has also been objection by some Boston ministers to his language and methods. Sunday is used to overcoming obstacles of the former sort, but he usually insists that the churches and clergy be practically a unit in support of his work.

Sunday told the St. Louis committee which visited him in Kansas City Friday that he would come to St. Louis if they continued to desire that he should, but he would not fix a date.

PLAN TO AROUSE INTEREST IN ARMS IN SCHOOLS HERE

Details for Military Training Being Worked out by Branch of Security League.

Plans to create interest in military training in the public schools of St. Louis equal to the interest taken in other cities and states, as shown by a statement of the National Security League, issued today, are being worked out by the St. Louis branch of the National Security League. Horace D. Johns, secretary of the local branch, said yesterday that meetings would be arranged and prominent speakers engaged. The details will be announced later.

George M. Brown is chairman of the St. Louis branch, Edward Love is chairman of the Executive Committee and John B. Denvir is treasurer. A summary issued from the New York headquarters of the National Security League, shows what has been accomplished in introducing military training into the schools and colleges.

MEXICO INVITING INTERVENTION, SAYS SENATOR LEWIS

Unless Harassing of U. S. Ceases, President Must Interfere, He Declares.

NEW YORK, May 13.—"Intervention in Mexico is certain to come if that country continues to yield to influences outside of Mexico that are exciting opposition to the United States in whatever it undertakes," declared United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, in an address before the Society of Patriots and Founders here tonight. "Unless the harrassing of the United States and itis citizens in Mexico ceases, it will be the duty of this country to overcome the opponents of peace and order and aid in establishing a stable government in Mexico, leaving to the people of that country, through the expedition of the ballot, the selection of their officials.

"The President of the United States has no desire to take this course," he continued. "If Mexico will give him a chance to accomplish this in Mexico by any other method than that of intervention the President will gladly avail himself of such opportunity. But if every effort taken by him is obstrutcted by those whose purpose it is to continue lawlessness, and to repeat, wherever possible the assaults upon the lives of Americans, President Wilson in response to the demand of his own country will have nothing left to do but that which President McKinley did in Cuba."

TELEGRAPHERS GET WAGE RAISE OF ABOUT $80,000 PER ANNUM

Missouri Pacific-Iron Mountain Also Grants Shorter Hours and Extends Vacation System.

W. T. Brown, first vice president of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, in a statement issued last night from union headquarters in the Star building said that the 1300 station agents and telegraphers employed by the Missouri Pacifit-Iron Mountain Railway system had received an increase in pay averaging about six per cent. The increase, he said, will date from April 1.

The men who will receive the increase are employed all along the 8000 miles of line. About 800 men were given shorter hours of work, and the 15 days' vacation was extended to the telegraphers in relay service, in addition to the increase in pay.

Brown said that the telegraphers, by the raise, will earn about $80,000 more annually. The increase averages about $4 a month per man.

The negotiations were conducted between officials of the company and a St. Louis committee representing the telegraphers. It was reported a week ago that a strike was planned if the wage increase asked for was not granted.

COSTS CONTRACTOR $100 AND 2 DAYS' WORK TO BE GALLANT

But How Could He Help It When It Was a Woman Who Complained About Noise.

Robert Curdie, a paving contractor at Wood River, spent two days and more than $100 last week to remove an annoyance of which a woman complained.

Curdie was in charge of paving on Whitelaw avenue in Wood River and had set up a concrete mixer in front of the home of Mrs. Gus Eaton, wife of the superintendent of the labor department of the Standard Oil refinery in that village.

Mrs. Eaton told him the grinding of the mixer and the black smoke from a tar melter were very unpleasant to her. Curdie ordered his men to remove the machines to a more remote spot and they quit work on the paving job for two days until it had been done.

ORPET'S FORMER FIANCE TO BE WITNESS AGAINST HIM

Trial of University Student for Murder of High School Girl Will Open Tomorrow.

CHICAGO, May 13.—On the eve of the trial at Waukegan of William H. Orpet, Wisconsin University student, charged with the murder of Marian Lambert, a high school girl, whose body was found Feb. 10 in a lonely wood near Lake Forest, the State today announced only jurors who believe in the infliction of the death penalty will be qualified and that Celestria Youker, the normal schoolteacher of DeKalb, Ill., to whom young Orpet was engaged at the time he is alleged to have met the Lambert girl in a death tryst, will be one of the most important witnesses for the prosecution.

Until today State's Attorney Ralph J. Dady of Lake County kept the fact that Miss Youker is to be a willing witness against Orpet a closely guarded secret. William H. Orpet, father of the prisoner, has also been subpenaed by the State.

Orpet's basic line of defense will be that the Lambert girl killed herself, while the State will attempt to prove that he induced her to swallow cyanide of potassium.

"SHOLOM ALEICHEM," JEWISH MARK TWAIN, DIES AT 56

One of His Best Stories Appeared Serially in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Solomon Rabinowitz, Yiddish humorist and writer, who, under the pen name of "Sholom Aleichem,' amused two generations of Jews by his witty portrayal of Russian-Jewish life, died today at his home in the Bronx.

He was trained early for the Rabbinate, but his plans were altered when he fell in love and was married. He went into business, but after the financial crash of 1890 he forsook it for literature. A short while afterwards Rabinowitz came here and at once became popular. One of his best stories, which tells of the coming of a Yiddish family to America to seek their fortune, has appeared in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.

CENTRALLY PLACED APARTMENTS ARE IN GREAT DEMAND

Principal Sale of Past Week Was That of the Hearthstone Structure by Lort Realty Company to O. T. Langan for $90,000.

KIPLIN GETS BIG LIMIT AV. BUILDING

High Cost of Material Make Completed Buildings Subject of Active Inquiry—Bungalows Erection Goes on Apace.

There is an increased demand for centrally located apartments and flats, sales of the former augmenting the volume of the week's transactions.

The principal sale was that of the Hearthstone Apartments, at 4205 to 4217 Westminster place, by the Lort Realty and Investment Company, of which Harry Troll is president, to Oliver T. Langan, for $90,000.

There are 15 apartments in this block of six and seven rooms each, all of which are finished in hardwood, and equipped with all the modern appliances known to construction of this class.

As agent for the Dozier estate, the Mercantile Trust Company only recently sold the apartments to Troll, who is taking in part payment several pieces of property.

A week ago, Langan purchased two 15-family buildings at Kingsbury and Clara avenues for $170,000, giving in part payment 220 acres on the Clayton road, one-fourth mile west of Denny road, at a valuation of $100,000.

Buys Six-Family Apartment.

William Kiplin purchased through Eugent J. Altheimer a six-family apartment building recently completed at 715 Limit avenue in North Parkview, built by Victor E. Rhodes. This building comprises suites of five rooms with sun parlor and sleeping porch together with a vestibule, finished in marble, with tile landings and marble treads.

The building occupies one of the most attractive sites in Parkview, with a frontage of 80 feet.

This is the second apartment building sold by Altheimer in Parkview during the last month, while he reports negotiations pending for others in process of construction there.

With the increase in the cost of building material and labor, the situation in the flat and apartment building field is greatly improved. Buildings of this character are in stronger demand, owing to the fact that they can be purchased at much lower figures than they can be built.

Thus flats and apartments, according to agents, are being purchased for speculative as well as investment purposes, and if the curtailment in building is continued, they will command even better prices in the near future.

Notwithstanding this, the building permits of 105 cities in April, according to the American Contractor, aggregated $89,812,962, as compared with $77,058,473 for that period in 1915, thus showing an increase of 16 per cent.

Increase in Permits.

Permits for April in St. Louis aggregated $1,033,146, an increase of 3 per cent, as in the entire 105 cities there is a decrease in the number of buildings being erected this year, indicating an increase in the size of the buildings.

The Leisner Realty & Building Co. has begun construction of three 6-room houses at 4014-18-20 Wyoming street. Each house will occupy a lot 30 feet frontage, and will have tile bath, hardwood floors, steam heat and all modern conveniences.

With the completion of these houses, the Leisner company will have erected 29 buildings in Tower Grove Heights during the last three years. It has also built extensively in Washington Heights and other parts of the West End.

The Leisner company reports the sale of house at 5924 Waterman avenue, to Herman H. Osthoff, and one at [illegible] Berlin to Henry Salzman, the one bing a 9-room and the other a 7-room house.

To Erect Bungalows.

Albert Wentlick has taken out permits for the erection of two bungalows on Carten avenue, known as Carten place, in Maplewood, and will take out others as soon as plans are available.

Many attractive bungalows have been erected in Carten place, including the home of D. S. Wenzlick, the junior member of the Wenzlick Real Estate office.

Carten avenue, which has been practically dedicated to bungalows, is situated between Big Bend road and Laclede road. The subdivision comprises [illegible] lots and has all municipal improvements, including streets and sewer mains of the highets type.

William Loesche is the contractor for the bungalows, which are being offered on special terms.

WHITE ROCKS LEAD EGG-LAYING TEST FOR SIX MONTHS

Record for April at Missouri Experiment Station Goes to Leghorns—Highest for Half Year.

By C. T. PATTERSON,
Director Missouri Poultry Experiment Station, Mountain Grove.

The first six months of the fifth national egg laying contest closed April 30. The weather remaining cool, not so large a number of hens went broody as was expected, therefore the egg record for April was higher than for the same month in either of the previous contests.

The high water mark in egg production has been reached during either March or April in all contests held at this station, and during both March and April this year the records have surpassed all previous records. Those for the first six months of each contest are as follows, each hen's average for the six months beginning Nov. 1 each year: First contest, 63 eggs, second, 68; third, 76; fourth, 76; fifth, 81 eggs.

The following cycles were made by the highest producers in each of the contests: First contest, 82 eggs; second, 30; third, 32; fourth, 28; and in the present contest one hen has laid 55 eggs without missing a day, while the hen which is in the lead lays from six to 14 eggs to the cycle.

"All-Purpose" Class Record.

The pens making the 10 highest records for six months are distributed among the many breeds and varieties. One point worthy of note is that seven of the 10 highest pens belong to what is commonly termed the "all purpose class," there being two rocks, two reds, two wyandottes and one orpington, the other three being Leghorns. This is a fine showing for the medium-weight birds, as the six months covers the winter season when eggs are high, and also the principal part of the breeding season. The pens making the highest records for six months are:

	Eggs.
75 white Rocks, Washington	624
59 R. C. Reds, Missouri	615
69 barred Rocks, Missouri	591
82 black Orpingtons, Indiana	585
25 S. C. white Leghorns, Washington	576
49, white Wyandottes, Michigan	556
56, S. C. Reds, Iowa	556
50, white Wyandottes, Missouri	540
11, S. C. white Leghorns, Kansas	530
13, S. C. white Leghorns, Texas	530

Five of the six pens making the highest record for April are Leghorns.

Pens making the highest records for April follow:

	Eggs.
33, S. C. white Leghorns, Missouri	132
18, S. C. white Leghorns, Kentucky	131
25, S. C. white Leghorns, Washington	130
27, S. C. white Leghorns, Missouri	127
16, S. C. white Leghorns, Louisiana	125
71, barred Plymouth Rocks, Missouri	125

The hens making the highest records to date are:

	Eggs.
4, pen 75, white Rock, Washington	145
8, pen 25, S. C. white Leghorn, Washington	139
1, pen 75, white Rock, Washington	137
5, pen 59, R. C. Red, Missouri	135
5, pen 6, S. C. white Leghorn, New Jersey	132
2, pen 82, black Orpington, Indiana	132

Pen 33, S. C. W. Leghorns, Missouri, won the cup for April, laying 132 eggs. The total number of eggs laid was 10,439.

Experiment Station's Work.

"What is the work of a poultry experiment station?" This question is often asked by people who visit this station. This would lead one to believe that because of a lack of knowledge concerning the work done, the people do not get the full benefit of the experiment station.

To give it in as few words as possible, we might say the work of a poultry experiment station is to find out the things we don't know about poultry, then give this information to the public through the press, in bulletins, in lectures, correspondence, etc.

Is there any question concerning poultry you want to know? Is there any experiment you would like to see tried? If so, you should write it out and send it to an experiment station, where the officials in charge will be glad to conduct the experiment or secure the information of whatever nature it may be, and report the same to you.

Where people make use of experiment stations properly, they are of immense value as well as a point of economy to the entire state. To illustrate, if 5000 people wanted to know the results of some one experiment, it is more economical to support an experiment station to conduct the experiment than for each of the 5000 people to conduct the experiments separately, for that would mean 5000 experiments tried. Then, too, the men in charge of these experiments at experiment stations devote their entire time to the work, while others have other duties to perform which often make a difference in the results observed. The cost of the many experiments with poultry is, therefore, much less if conducted by an experiment station than by the people.

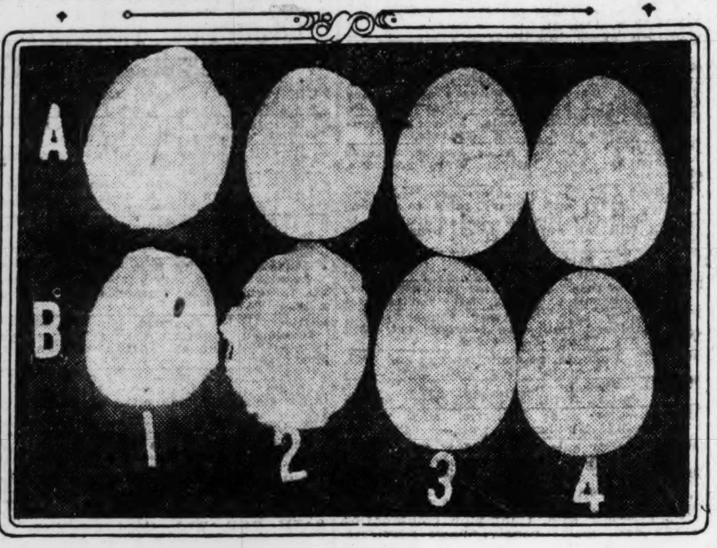
Sample Simple Problem.

Missouri is perhaps as generous as any State in the support of its poultry experiment station, yet one egg per year at market price for each person in Missouri will more than support the institution, and every one is cordially invited to send his problems to be worked out, whether he is a producer or consumer. It is not necessary that it be a deep problem with a big name, for some little problems are just as interesting and instructive.

High Food Prices at Vienna.

VIENNA, May 13.—Here are some of the quotations on articles of food in this city: Cooking butter, 83 cents a pound; imported butter, 85 cents; margarine, 77 cents; beans, 16 cents; peas, 20 cents; onions, 10 cents; meat, 93 cents; geese, 79 cents.

Age of Egg and Cooling After Boiling, Factors in "Peeling"



ONE of the problems recently submitted for solution to the Missouri Poultry Experiment Station at Mountain Grove was, "how do you boil an egg so that it will peel off smoothly?"

In experimenting to find the answer it was found that the age of the egg is the principal factor which determines whether the white adheres to the shell. If the egg is less than 2 days old the shell does not come off satisfactorily, while from one to three more days old the shell comes off easily. Cooling the eggs in cold water perhaps helps some.

In the foregoing picture are eight eggs which were boiled for 20 minutes. The four in the upper row were cooled in cold water and those in the bottom row were cooled in the air. The figures at the bottom represent the age of the eggs, in days. The "white" of the egg is loosened from the shell by evaporation, which makes the difference as shown in the illustrations.

Prof. Quisenberry's Answers to Poultry Problems

Early Crowing Is Good Indication.

I have a single-comb White Leghorn, hatched March 17, and he began crowing yesterday, April 24, being just 38 days old. Is this not rather unusual?—Mrs. E. S. E., 2815 Osceola street, St. Louis.

This is a rather young age to begin to crow. Leghorns, however, mature very rapidly. The youngest cockerel to crow that we have had any experience with was a White Leghorn, which was hatched at the experiment station, that began to crow when he was just 28 days old. This is an indication of vitality and also an indication of a good egg-producing strain. In some of the foreign countries the poultrymen do not do much trap-nesting, but they select the cockerels which crow first and the pullets which lay first from which to breed when trying to produce egg-laying strains.

Several Practical Questions.

1. How many chickens will a lot 80x150 feet accommodate?

2. What is the average cost of poultry from incubation to maturity?

3. What is the average cost per hen a year?

4. If you have any catalogues of plans for poultry houses and costs, would like to have you send me some.—J. G., Newton, Kan.

1. I do not know whether you refer to grown fowls or young chickens, but I infer that you have reference to grown stock. A lot this size would accommodate about 100 hens if they were kept for breeding purposes. By using two yards for each pen and keeping the chickens in one yard while the other is being cultivated and green food being grown therein, you could keep that number of hens and also keep your soil in reasonably good condition. About 500 laying hens can be kept on that much ground, providing your house is properly constructed and sanitary measures are taken, and also providing the pullets are raised on some other ground, where they can have free range and favorable conditions. We prefer more range than this, however, for this number of either breeding stock or laying hens.

2. The average cost of poultry from the time it is hatched until maturity varies greatly. Purdue University proved that, under farm conditions, single-comb White Leghorn pullets could be produced at 10c each, providing the cockerels were marketed and that amount deducted from the cost of rearing the pullets. Under farm conditions the cost is very small, but where the average poultryman has to buy everything which enters into the production of his young stock, we do not believe that they can be brought to a laying age for less than 60c to $1.20 each. The cost really should not exceed 75c each in the Central West.

3. The average cost of keeping a hen per year also varies with the different methods and in different localities. The average cost of feed per hen per year, where it all has to be purchased, will range from $1 to $1.75 each. Feeds vary in price in different localities, but we consider the above as a fair estimate.

4. We have no catalogues of plans for poultry houses, but would advise you to write to the College of Agriculture, Manhattan, Kan.; to the Poultry Experiment Station, Mountain Grove, Mo., and the College of Agriculture, Columbia, Mo. You will find that one of the best poultry houses that can be built is what is known as the "fool-proof poultry house." The cost should not exceed $1.25 per bird.

Hygrometers.

Will you give us some information as to the use of the hygrometer in an incubator? State the good and bad points. Hygrometers made by reliable companies cost me 75c here.—XXX, Labadie, Mo.

There is no objection to the use of hygrometers. It is an instrument invented for measuring the degrees of moisture in the atmosphere of the egg chamber during the period of incubation. They are not practical for general use. We consider the air space test as the easiest and best for the average operator. Most hygrometers are untrustworthy when used under the conditions prevailing in the average incubator, and average incubator room. If you are inexperienced it is well to set a hen at the same time you set your incubator, and practice by comparing the air space of the hen's eggs with those in the machine. By constant observation you will soon learn when to add moisture. Heat is one of the great factors in incubation and it controls the rate of the deevlopment of the embryo, and this largely controls the size of the air cell. I would much rather study and learn to properly balance the heat treatment of the eggs during incubation than to depend upon the hygrometer for successful hatches.

Swollen or Puffed Up Face.

I have a s. c. black Minorca hen that has a good appetite, carries good flesh and seems to be in very good health generally excepting that her face around the eyes is swollen or puffy. There is no discharge or odor from eyes or nostrils and mouth and nose are clean. I have tried different remedies, but nothing seems to help her. Some days she can see good and other days she can scarcely see anything. She does not lay. Has been in this condition about two months. Can you tell me what ails her and whether she can be cured?—J. M. D., Tri-Cities, Ill.

The bird may have a tumor on the face which is caused by a form of roup. The bird may be in apparently good health; may have a bright red comb and continue to lay for weeks when thus affected. The nostrils nad mouth may show no indication of roup and there may be no odor about the bird's head, yet there may be inflamation in the cavity of the head where this swelling or tumor appears. The swelling or tumor is caused by the filling of this cavity with cheesy pus. In such cases we usually open the tumor with a sharp knife and by gentle pressure, force out as much of the contents as possible. Cleanse it thoroughly by washing it out with a disinfectant solution and then fill the cavity with an equal part of powdered alum and sulphur. It is also a good idea to place a small piece of absorbent cotton in the wound for a few days after the incision has been made. If the bird is in good health they usually recover from such cases in a short time. We have known of cases where the birds were not operated on or treated and this swelling was in evidence for months. You state that the hen does not lay, and if the above instructions are not applicable in this case I would advise you to market the hen. Adopt the general sanitary precautions.

SCRUBWOMEN FORM A UNION

MARSHFIELD, Wis., May 13.—The day of the humble, benagged scrubwoman is passing, as shown by the announcement that the Scrubwomen's Union of Marshfield is now a reality. No longer will the wielder of that brush ply her trade at the rate of 10 or 15 cents an hour. The rate in the future is to be 20 cents, and no exceptions.

The women of the city threaten to boycott the union, but the threat is not taken seriously by the members.

Avoid Dampness, Quisenberry Says

Dampness is fatal to poultry, old and young. It is the predisposing cause of more poultry ills than all other conditions combined. It should be avoided as a deadly pestilence.

Before the spring rains come on, see to it that the roofs of the houses and coops are water-tight. Prepared roofing is cheap and is the best for poultry houses, because, when properly laid, it is airtight as well as watertight.

The floor of the house also should receive careful consideration, especially if it be an earth floor, which if damp is a "disease incubator." If there is a tendency to dampness the floor should be dug out until the surface is a little below the surface of the outside ground. Then put in a layer of cinders two inches thick and fill in above with fresh earth until the surface of the floor is at least six inches above that of the outside ground. The cinders will stop the capillary attraction from below, and water cannot run in from the outside.

Poultry give off a great deal of moisture while at roost at night. Unless the house is well ventilated, this moisture will gather on the walls and fixtures. The houses should therefore be so arranged that the south side can be thrown entirely open in sunny weather, in order that the sunshine may dry out the entire interior.

The yards and runs should be kept well drained. If necessary, ditches should be dug so that the water will run off quickly after each rain. By carefully avoiding dampness and filth in the poultry plant, you will at the same time avoid most of the troubles to which the modern chicken is heir.

TO OIL PRODUCERS WISHING NEW CAPITAL.

We are in the market for thoroughly good, legitimate oil leases or properties either lying close to a proven field or preferably having a small settled production and will consider either buying outright or will undertake the financing of new companies with a view of securing additional capital for development purposes. Danforth, Reaves & Co., 1 Wall st., New York.

WILL YOU GO TO OKLAHOMA?

The Ardmoreite, a daily newspaper printed in Carter County, Ok., states that during the month of April, 107 oil wells were completed in the county with only one dry hole, and that almost the last well brought in during the month had a production of 4000 barrels or more per day. The same paper in a later issue states that one company has just paid out $600,000 in dividends, or nearly 4000 per cent.

A few months ago the same paper stated that 12 men put $175 each in oil and gas leases, and sold out for $1,000,000.

We have a gentlemen in our office, who has lived in this county for many years, who states that Carter County, has hardly been scratched, as far as oil is concerned. "I am convinced," he says, "that there are greater opportunities in Carter County today than there are anywhere else on earth."

It is admitted hat oil is the mother of asphalt, or that asphalt is an oil residuum. Any person who will take the pains to go upon the United States Government's segregation of asphalt located in this county, and the surrounding deposits and see for themselves, where over 500,000,000 barrels of oil has burst out of the ground by some unknown force, leaving its residuum there to be seen, and who will then visit Healdton, 12 or 15 miles away—Wheeler, about seven miles away, and see for themselves many of the wells gushing out from 1000 to 4000 barrels of oil per day each, and who will then examine the territory between these two points, will immediately realize that the great oil field in Carter County is yet o come.

It is predicted that the great scramble now going on for oil and gas leases in this county will reach the largest proportions ever known, and it is a known fact that the millionaire oil operators of today were those who bought leases yesterday, so to speak.

A crowd is now being made up, consisting of both ladies and gentlemen, who will go on the oil fields of Carter County and take advantage of the unparalleled opportunities offered. We would be pleased to have you join us.

SUFFRAGISTS BUSY ON PLANS TO WIN DEMOCRATS' FAVOR

Women Who Vote to Be Flanked by "Jealousy Symbol" Army Near Coliseum.

DECORATING BY EXPERT

Hospitality to Be Extended to Touring Congressional Unionists Tomorrow.

The special train carrying women representing the Congressional Union, a division of the woman suffragists, touring the country, will arrive in St. Louis at 7:19 a. m. tomorrow, on their return from the Western coast. Local suffragists will meet the delegation, extend a welcome and breakfast and entertain them at the Terminal Hotel until the train departs at 8:40 a. m.

The Congressional Union enrolls the names of many women prominent and influential in the suffrage movement, and the delegation has been received by the suffragists of some cities with marked cordiality, but in others with demonstrations of protest.

The St. Louis Equal Suffrage League is not in sympathy with the Congressional Union program, which favors a woman's political party, frankly opposed to all other political parties, and limits itself to working at Washington for a Federal amendment, ignoring state campaigns.

"However," said Miss Charlotte Rumbold, speaking for the local women, "we shall extend hospitality, recognizing that we are all trying to get to heaven, though not by the same route."

Plans for "Walkless" Parade.

Plans and organization of the "Yellow Lane" or "walkless" parade, which is to be the demonstration through which suffragists from all over the country hope to impress the Democratic Convention, on June 14, are materializing out of almost hourly committee meetings at suffrage headquarters, nineteenth floor, Railway Exchange Building.

Miss Mary E. Bulkley, chairman of the plans committee, with Hans Tonnsfeldt, Dr. Masseck, David N. O'Neil and Tom Barnett, assisting, has decided that the posts of honor shall be positions nearest the Coliseum and that representatives of states where women vote shall occupy these places. Also, these favored ones shall wear the national colors and the legend, "I Am a Voter," their unenfranchised sisters still wearing the suffrage yellow, which color also is the symbol of jealousy.

Mrs. J. Alex. Goodwin, equipment chairman, whose business it is to buy the yellow parasols, camp stools, rosettes, badges, regalia and paraphernalia, is busy attending to bids.

Mrs. David N. O'Neil is head of the Decoration Committee, and although selected for her artistic fame, is finding her chief work thus far commandeering automobiles. Mrs. George Gellhorn, head of the Parade Committee, has the awarding of official commissions.

Miss Julia Rumsey is the first to receive and accept a commissio nas Marshal for the day.

Eastern Expert on Recruiting.

Recruiting is under the direction of Mrs. Alan Updegraff of New York, imported as an expert with experience in four metropolitan parades. She will have as an assistant, Miss Alma Sasse of Brunswick, N. J., who made a hit at the Springfield convention with a speech no less piquant in spirit than is her name, as correctly pronounced, "sassy." Recruiting headquarters will be at the suffrage shop, lately opened by Mrs. Goodwin on Locust street near Tenth. But no place where women are congregated will be safe from the invasion of recruiting officers with enlistment blanks.

Chairman of the speakers' bureau is Dr. Harriet L. Stevens, with Mrs. Philo Stevenson and Mrs. Tuckerman presiding at their respective telephones assisting. Mrs. John L. Lowes and Mrs. B. F. Burch are special organizers, directing the work of speakers to churches, clubs, groups and secret societies of women. Mrs. Genevieve Wyatt, Mrs. W. O. Bartholomew, Mrs. J. W. Lewis, Mrs. Frank McFarland, Miss Genevieve Tierney, Mrs. Frank O'Hare, Dr. Frances Bishop, Miss Helen Bridges, Miss Fannie D. Robb, Mrs. J. P. Higgins, Mrs. Spraggins, Miss Nellie Quick, Mrs. John Craig, Mrs. L. M. Ottofy, Mrs. M. E. Beggs and Mrs. J. M. Durdy are assigned to the organization of particular groups of women to which they belong.

Warwick Hotel Headquarters.

Hospitality is in charge of Mrs. Charles L. Passmore, who has engaged the Warwick Hotel as national headquarters and is listing boarding places and answering inquiries about accommodations.

Mrs. Dwight Dana, who is sister-in-law to a National Committeeman, has been assigned the Coliseum Committee, and no doubt will have charge of arrangements for the women yet to be selected to interview the Platform Committee.

Mrs. Leslie Thompson is in charge of the evening demonstration when, following the parade, a flying squadron of 12 automobiles containing eminent national speakers, will be sent to all parts of the city to address street audiences.

Mrs. George Gellhorn, head of the Finance Committee, reports contributions amounting to $1650 up to date and still going strong. An appeal went out from headquarters saying that time and labor will be as welcome contribution as money.

Miss Charlotte Rumbold, who is given credit for the original idea and much of the execution of St. Louis' great civic pageant of two years ago, is active director in charge of the "walkless" parade with the official title, "Demonstration Manager."

4-YEAR-OLD BOY ENTRAPPED IN WATER PIPE FOR HALF HOUR

Harry Spencer, 4 years old, son of Charles Spencer, of 4422 Delmar boulevard, was entrapped in a water pipe for half an hour yesterday afternoon while two policeman and several neighbors tried to extricate him.

The boy was playing in front of his home. He lifted the top of a water-stop box near the curb and stuck his foot in the upright pipe. When he tried to withdraw his foot he found it was stuck fact. His cries attracted neighbors who tried in vain to release him.

Two policemen responded to an emergency telephone call. They dug away the soil surrounding the stop box and broke the pipe. Through the hole thus made they cut the shoe from the boy's foot and set him free. His ankle was slightly wrenched.

"SUMMER JUDGES" SELECTED

The Circuit Judges yesterday, in general session, selected the "summer Judges." Judge Withrow is to hold court in July, Judges Kinsey and Anderson in August and Judge Jones in September.

Judge Shields was appointed to serve in the Municipal Courts branch of the Circuit Court for one year, beginning July 1, in place of Judge Fisher, who will return to the civil division.

TWIN CITIES HIGHWAY.

Twin Cities and St. Louis have just been connected by a new and complete road log prepared by the Goodrich National Touring Bureau. The recommended highways have been surveyed and a route book covering the trip both ways has been printed for free distribution. There has been such a large demand for touring routes connecting Twin Cities and St. Louis that there is no question but what the new publication will prove of great service. In addition to the road log description preparations have been made for the erection of the new Goodrich indestructible guide post signs at a later date showing all of the proper turns to take and warning motorists of dangerous locations, railroad crossings, etc.

The Goodrich pathfinding cars are now preparing connections south and southeast from St. Louis, connecting with this highway for the purpose of stimulating through travel via Memphis to New Orleans and via Nashville and Chattanooga connecting with the Dixie Highway to Florida points.

USED CAR TRADES RESPONSIBLE FOR DEALER FAILURES

Co-operation and Acquaintanceship Necessary Before Problem Can Be Solved.

The first open meeting of the St. Louis Automobile Dealer's and Manufacturers' Association, since the election of the Progressive ticket was held at the American Annex last night. The meeting was the first of regular monthly meetings which will be held the coming year and there were over 75 present. W. J. Brace, president, and E. E. Peake, secretary of the Kansas City Automobile Dealers' and Manufactures' Association were the guests of honor and both were present to outline to the St. Louis organization the plan of operation of the Kansas City association.

F. W. A. Vesper, the newly elected president, presided and in opening briefly told what had been accomplished by the five meetings of the new board of directors.

Declaring that there would be no more fall shows, he announced that shows in the future would be held during the early spring and that arrangements had already been made to either precede or follow the Kansas City automobile show.

An all-round introduction of each one present, by his right hand neighbor to the meeting was an original way of making everybody acquainted, after which Vesper introduced the speakers of the evening. Brace, president of the Kansas City Dealers' Association, and Kansas City, distributer of the Hudson Supersix, briefly expressed his pleasure at the prospect of closer co-operation between the St. Louis and Kansas City organizations.

Declaring that President Vesper had struck the most important keynote of a successful organization, in proposing that everybody get acquainted, Edward E. Peak, the secretary of the Kansas City Dealers' Association, continued that real acquaintanceship and the knowing intimately of one's competitor meant the ultimate solving of all problems, and especially emphasized the used-car problem. He said the day was gone when dealers bought a used car and gave the owner in exchange a brand new one. All the failures in the business can be attributed to lack of cooperation among the dealers to the second-hand-car proposition and he declared the only remedy was a frank consultation between dealers.

H. G. Cupples, a St. Louis engineer, was introduced as the father of the Arcadian highway, a Lake to the Gulf highway, proposed to connect Detroit, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, St. Louis and New Orleans. He proposes to build this great roadway by unemployed and to plant useful trees of the fruit and nut variety along the way.

The following committees for the coming year were announced by President Vesper:

Automobile Shows and Exhibitions—Joseph A. Schlecht, Ralph R. Doak, W. S. Roberts, William L. Johnson and Russell E. Gardner.

Legislative—I. F. McNiece, John H. Phillips, W. J. Parrish, E. W. Arbogast and Philip H. Brockman.

Detail and Advisory—H. F. Fahrenkrog, George Weber, Frank E. Stevens, H. B. Krenning and Samuel Breadon.

Entertainment—Frank R. Tate, H. G. Hurd, George C. Brinkman, F. W. Wolffe and Hugh F. Cartwright.

Membership—J. D. Perry Lewis, Herman L. Schnure, F. G. Schubert, B. J. Hummel and Stewart McDonald.

WILLYS IS RE-ELECTED OVERLAND PRESIDENT

The formal annual meeting of the stockholders of the Willys-Overland Co. was held at the big automobile factory the other day, in conformation with the new by-laws adopted last fall which changed the fiscal year from June 30 to Dec. 1. Hereafter the annual meeting will be held the second Tuesday in May.

At this meeting the old officers were re-elected, John N. Willys being re-elected president; H. T. Dunn, vice president; H. L. Shepler vice president; Isaac Kinsey, vice president; C. A. Earl, vice president; Walter Stewart, treasurer; Royal R. Scott, secretary. The board of directors will consist of Messrs. John N. Willys, H. T. Dunn, Isaac Kinsey, C. A. Earl, H. L. Shepler, Walter Stewart, Royal R. Scott, James Kepperly and Rathbun Fuller.

Overland shipments for the 12 months ending April 30, 1916, were 137,665 automobiles as against 50,258 cars for the preceding 12 months—an increase of 174 per cent.

The foreign business, in spite of the war, also has shown a great increase over a year ago. Total exports, all models, for the 1915 season, was 2331, whereas up to May 1 export sales totaled 9867 cars, with unfilled orders on hand for 977 more.

OCEAN-TO-OCEAN RACE.

The Yellowstone Trail Association, an organization promoting a public highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts, with the slogan "A Good Road From Plymouth Rock to Puget Sound," has issued a challenge to the Lincoln Highway, a transcontinental road from New York to San Francisco, for a night and day race offering to deliver a message from the east to the west coast in less lapsed time over their route than it can be done over the Lincoln Highway, the runs to be made simultaneously. The official challenge to do this was written by General Agent H. O. Cooley of the Yellowstone Trail Association from its headquarters at Aberdeen, South Dakota, to A. R. Pardington, vice president and secretary of the Lincoln Highway at Detroit, Mich.

NAME YOUR TEST.

"We, who sell the model 860 Cole eight, have the advantage of being able to say to our prospective purchasers: 'Pick out your own test; the harder it is, the better it suits us,' " said E. W. Arbogast, manager of the Cole St. Louis Auto Co. "To many the invitation to select the hardest possible test would appear impractical, but it seems that the Cole manufacturers are willing to take chances under all conditions.

"Nearly two years of service for our model 860 Cole eight convinces us that the labor of those engineers was not in vain. It has undergone all manner of tests in all sorts of weather and on roads of all conditions.

"The model 860 Cole eight is a V-type multiple cylinder car with the combination of counterbalanced crank shaft with aluminum pistons and light reciprocating parts. The car is roomy and luxurious in every detail. Its builders claim it gives its owner 12 to 15 miles on a gallon of gasoline and 1000 to 1200 miles on a gallon of oil. It has a speed range of from two to 60 miles an hour, and its hill-climbing ability is established by its acceleration—from 10 to 50 miles an hour in less than 20 seconds.

BIG BATTLE RAGES.

"In the motor world, the battle between demand and production still rages and peace is not in sight," says Roy E. Frye, distributer of Paige Cars for St. Louis territory. "As spring arrives the intensity of the attack is redoubled and prospective owners who expect to capture cars must step lively."

At the Paige factory production activity has reached its height, and the shipments of cars made every day are rapidly making big dents in the accumulation of orders that for a while threatened to swamp the company. In spite of the forethought that prompted industrial preparedness, the demand for cars this season has been so great that even the Paige's preparation for business may not be sufficient. With the spring selling season opening, there is more than a possibility that there will not be enough of the Paige Fairfield sixes to go around. How the Paige business has developed and what the filling of the orders for these cars means is indicated by the fact that the factory is working full time and unable to catch up with orders.

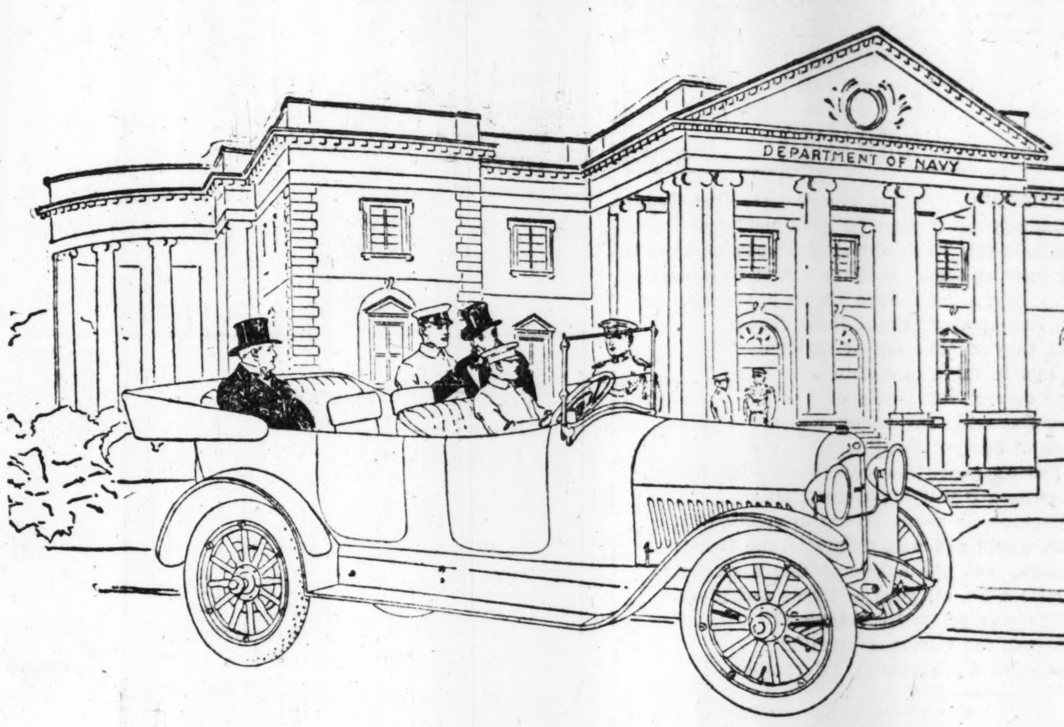
The Standard of Value and Quality



"The Standard of Value and Quality"

When you see this familiar phrase, remember that it is much more than a mere advertising expedient. Paige cars are actually and literally standard of the moderate price field—and they have achieved this distinction through the basic value and quality of the product.

There is no secret about quality manufacturing. Good materials, good workmanship and good facilities are essential to the production of any good car. It is only necessary to remember that there can be no compromise so far as any of these elements are concerned.

A brief inspection of the Paige Fairfield "Six-46" will make this point clear. You, then, will also understand why this car has been so universally adopted by people of good taste and refinement.

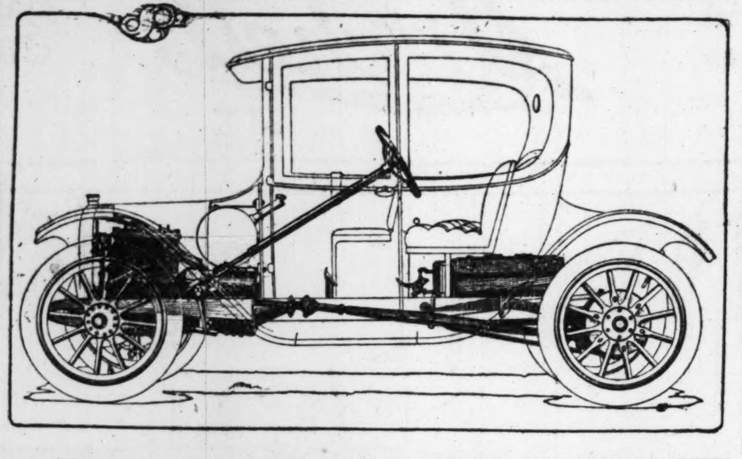
DUAL POWER CAR NEWEST DEVELOPMENT

Great interest has been shown in the new dual power automobile which is being built by the Woods Motor Vehicle Co. of Chicago. The car is constructed to be operated by either or both gasoline and electricity. The designer, Mr. Fend, thus combined two powers to get maximum results. Under the hood the gasoline motor and the electric generator connected by magnetic clutch, two iron disks, are shown. One of these disks is in the engine shaft and acts as a flywheel. The other is in the motor shaft and carries magnetizing coil, a slight current through which locks the two disks together, coupling engine and motor to the transmission shaft of the car. There are no gears. The power is transmitted direct to the wheels. The control is two finger levers on the steering wheel and one foot pedal. Dynamic breaking eliminates skidding and stalling is impossible.

The dual power car starts as an electric. At five miles an hour the gasoline motor can be started, so that both motors drive the car. The battery may be charged at any speed between five and 25 miles an hour. The storage battery is half the usual size and its life much longer.

R. R. Doak, manager of the Woods Electric Vehicle Co. branch in St. Louis, expects demonstrating cars within two or three weeks. He says that interest in the new car is intense. He describes the car as having the luxury of an electric, plus unlimited mileage, 40 per cent greater speed, instantaneous acceleration, finger control of starting and stopping, unlimited number of speeds, lessened maintenance, greater efficiency in utility and economy of charging plant.

Dual Power Woods Electric



High Tire Mileage.

Motor trucks with the U. S. Army in Mexico are showing excellent tire economy, considering the conditions encountered. On the rear-drive trucks, tires guaranteed for 7000 miles of service under average American conditions, are averaging 1500 to 2500 miles running into Mexico. The sharp, flinty sand simply cuts the tires at every revolution. The builders of the four-wheel drive and steer Jeffery Quads claim these trucks are running on their original tires after 3000 to 4000 miles of service.

CHALMERS SIX "30" IS PATHFINDER FOR TOUR

President W. W. Smith of the National Parks Highway Association, has announced the selection of a Chalmers six-30 as the pathfinder for the sociability tour from Minneapolis to Yellowstone National Park. The car will leave the Twin Cities next week for the nine days' hike across the Northwest, five passengers being carried.

The tour will not be run until July, the A. A. A. sanction calling for the start on July 20. The Chalmers will go over the route twice and mark it so that a schedule of about 20 miles per hour will be possible in July.

The tour will traverse part of the wonderful mountain region of the Northwest in addition to crossing the prairie wheat lands of Dakota.

This tour is being called the "4-6-8-Yellowstone Park tour," the numerals referring to the fact that cars of all size engines will be in it. The route will be along the National Park highway going over the right of way of the Northern Pacific Railroad. The company will run a special train to carry the baggage of the entrants. Four days will be spent in the park, while celebrations of various kinds will mark each stop.

The tentative plan of the tour calls for the first night stop at Staples, Minn., second at Fargo, N. D.; third at Bismarck, N. D.; fourth at Dickinson, N. D.; fifth at Medora, N. D.; sixth at Miles City, Mont.; seventh at Forsythe, Mont.; eighth at Billings, Mont., and ninth at Livingston, Mont. Entrance to the park will be made at Gradiner on the tenth day.

AUTOMOBILE SHORTAGE IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES

The fact that the English, German, French and all other European automobile factories have been taken over by their respective Governments for the manufacture of war munitions, has caused a shortage of cars in all countries heretofore dependent upon the European source of supply. As a result American manufacturers are experiencing an enlarged demand from all quarters of the globe.

The faraway buyer in Australasia, China, Egypt, or wherever he may be, depends upon the past reputation of the manufacturer and his known integrity as much as any other thing in buying his car. In the light of the world-wide disturbances, confidence in the product is an absolute necessity along with quality methods of building.

The Velie Motor Vehicle Co., manufacturers of the Velie six, have recently inaugurated a special export department to handle the ever-increasing correspondence and detail pertaining to foreign business. Velie literature is also being printed in several languages to eliminate the necessity of translation on the part of both foreign dealer and owner.

Moon Is Standardized.

The known value of the present day automobile has taken all the guesswork out of the purchase of a car, according to Stewart McDonald, vice president of the Moon Motor Car Co.

"The automobile of today is a known value because every standard part has a reputation of its own," McDonald says. "That reputation is a matter of common knowledge to the average man interested in automobiles, either as an owner or a prospective owner.

"He knows what axles, what gears, what bearings he wants. He is familiar with the best carburetors, motors, electric starter and lighting systems, ignition and so on. He is informed as to whether a rear or cowl gasoline tank is the more desirable.

"The prospective purchaser gauges an automobile today by the parts that are in it. He realizes that if his car has standard parts he is protected by the guarantee of both the part maker and the manufacturer.

"Hence the measuring of the value of a automobile has come to the selection of the standard parts desired, and a manufacturer who has had the experience of combining these parts into a perfectly balanced car."

How Autos Are Shipped.

"My attention was attracted recently by an article appearing in a well known automobile trade journal entitled, 'Securing Shipping Security,'" said Frank E. Stevens of the Stevens Motor Car Co, .local Lexington distributors today.

"In this repect the Lexington company is particularly painstaking. During a recent visit to the factory, I spent some time on the loading dock and was interested in learning how the Lexington company insures safety during shipment. I found that they used a specially made block, which is fashioned out of hardwood in such a way that the tires of the cars fit into them snugly, thus reducing the possibility of their jumping out of the block to the minimum.

By taking such pains, the Lexington has mimimized damage to cars en route due to inefficient loading.

Wash your car immediately after it has made a trip through muddy going. Do not let mud cake and dry on it. To do so will destroy the luster of the finish more rapidly and neglect in this way also will count against you in money when you have the car repainted, for it will make a repainting cost you more.

DE PALMA'S CAR MAY BE IN INDIANAPOLIS RACE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 13.—Ralph de Palma, winner of the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway last year, has wired the Speedway officials for permission to enter his Mercedes car. Ralph says he has sold this made-in-Germany race car to Frank P. Book, a young Detroit millionaire, who has had some racing experience and wants to drive at Indianapolis in the sixth annual international speed battle. Book will drive a Cadillac in the Chicago amateur race and de Palma says: "I can recommend him as a capable driver." Right away speculation is rampant. De Palma did not get his entry in before the opportunity closed at midnight May 1. There were various rumors why not. Now with the sale of the car, some who believe Ralph cannot resist the lure of the race, are wondering if Ralph does not expect to let Book start and then Ralph be the relief driver.

General Manager Myers of the Speedway says in order to let the Mercedes enter as a post entry, consent in writing must be first obtained from all the other entries. Myers is mailing letters to all these drivers, but it may be several days before he gets the replies.

School for Employes.

A large number of former factory employes of the Packard Motor Car Co. have been promoted to positions in the engineering department, as the result of their study in the factory night school. A class of 80 has just completed the prescribed course in mathematics and mechanical drawing, and has been presented certificates. The entire enrollment is more than 150.

The school is open to any Packard employe. Lack of former training does not hinder him in becoming a student, and the work can be taken up at any time. Individual instruction is given, largely. Five teachers, experts in various engineering branches and holders of responsible positions in the factory, have charge of the classes.

Students whose previous training or aptitude are sufficient may obtain a thorough, practical training in the college branches of mathematics. The teachers are L. C. Hill, assistant body engineer, W. E. Blaine, chief truck draughtsman, H. F. Dumbleton, an assistant foreman, H. V. Loveland and R. C. Fielding, members of the engineering department.

These classes have no connection with the school for apprentices.

In front of one of New York's exclusive clubs, an actual count of the cars shows two cars costing over $4000, three costing over $2500, two costing more than $1500, and five Overlands.

Henry Rottersman delivered a Jeffery Six last Thursday evening to a prominent St. Louisan, and within one-half hour the new owner had been arrested for speeding. Rottersman cautioned the new owner about speed, owing to the fact that the car previously owned by the new purchaser had been of a smaller type and a much harder riding car. Rottersman told him that 30 miles per hour in the Jeffery would seem no more than 15 in the smaller car owing to the wheel base and different construction of the Jeffery.

The Wagner Motor Co., Reo dealers in Belleville, exceeded their May allotment of cars by two, and have closed a contract for an allotment of an equal number of cars for next season.

—but here it is
—the ideal car
—at the ideal price

Things that were impossible yesterday are today's accomplished facts.

Somewhere in the world someone with special knowledge, special experience, special equipment, gets ready and then startles the world by accomplishing the seemingly impossible.

Almost everyone said that a complete automobile of beautiful design, fine finish, the ideal small, light, economical car, built with quality materials and absolutely completely equipped, could not be built to sell for $615.

And but for Overland special knowledge, special experience and special equipment, it probably would still be one of the impossibilities instead of an accomplished fact.

Probably no other organization in the world can produce the quality and efficiency equal of this car to sell at anywhere near so low a price.

Certain it is that no other organization is doing so.

And no other car ever produced seems so exactly to suit the requirements of so varied a lot of people.

People of wealth, people of modest means—

People of long automobile experience—

People who never before owned a car—

All find in the small, light $615 Overland their ideal car.

It has the beauty, comforts, conveniences, power and complete equipment which everyone wants.

Yet it is inexpensive to buy and economical to operate.

See the Overland dealer and get acquainted with this car.

But act now, as this car stands alone and the rush to own them is amazing—delayed action is almost sure to mean a long wait for delivery.

The Car that sold Itself

Jeffery Six

LESS than two months after the appearance of the Jeffery Six, the Thomas B. Jeffery Company had to double its planned output of this car. So immediate was the success of its wonderful roll-edge body, its riding-comfort and driving-comfort, its spectacular performance—that almost without a line of advertising the car sold in unprecedented quantities.

In every way the finest handling car you can imagine. The price is $1450 and every dollar of it represents more value—good, common-sense, usable value—than you ever saw before.

Come in and look it over now. Go over it from head-lights to tail-light—compare it with every car in its class point by point—ask us to demonstrate by actual test every claim we make. And do it now. The demand is tremendous. Our allotment is limited, and the factory cannot increase its present production.

The Hidden Things

THE G & J 'G' Tread Tire is good to look at. It is also a thoroughly efficient anti-skid tire. These qualities are apparent. But the hidden things, the amalgamation of fabric and rubber tread and the quality of interior construction may be judged only by service rendered.

The fact that more G & J 'G' Treads are giving better service than most is an indisputable proof that they are quality tires. The fact that they cost but little more than ordinary plain tread casings, makes their value remarkably high.

Therefore, we recommend that your next tire be a G & J.

NEW BATTERY PLANT.

The large addition to the main factory of the Prest-O-Lite Co., Inc., Indianapolis, to accommodate the increased productioon of Prest-O-Lite storage batteries, is practically completed. The new building, 400 feet long, by 100 feet wide, and adding 40,000 square feet of floor space, is the second largest building of the present factory group. It has excellent facilities for a large output, and when ready for operation a production of 1200 batteries a day will be possible.

HAND - SHAKING MANUAL

The Allen Motor Co. has issued a booklet, the title of which is "Shaking Hands With the Makers," and the Mound City Buggy and Auto Co. of St. Louis is distributing these. The booklet gives the details of the organization and brief biographies of E. W. Allen, president; W. O. Allen, treasurer and general manager; J. E. Wright, sales manager; L. A. Sommer, chief engineer; H. H. Baker, first vice president; G. F. Schroth, secretary and legal adviser; and of Directors M. A. Thomas, G. W. Campbell, W. H. Reedy, and F. F. Prentiss. It also pictures the several models of the Allen and describes them in an interesting way. The purpose of the book is to show the prospective buyer the strength and equipment of the company with which he is about to do business.

NEW MOTOR ROAD OILER.

Wallace C. Capen. St. Louis manager of the White Motor Co., has delivered to the St. Louis Street Department a combination road oiler and street-flushing machine, and two police patrol wagons to the Police Department. This makes six White patrol wagons now in use here, and brings the total number of White vehicles up to nine cars.

The new road oiler and flusher is so built that during the season the road oiling is suspended the vehicle may be used for street flushing. The patrol wagons are built on the three-quarter ton chassis.

MOTORISTS ARE OFTEN MISTAKEN IN CAR SPEED

"The most annoying offenders in connection with automobile speeding are those who persist in driving their cars without speedometers," said a motor cycle policeman recently. If we catch him going 35 miles an hour, he often has the nerve to say that because he is accustomed to driving a car, he can estimate the time he is making without using any mechanical device. There is nothing more deceptive, from the standpoint of speed, than automobile riding.

"A friend of mine, whose car is equipped with a Stewart magnetic speedometer, argued that, through his thorough acquaintance with his machine, he could tell the speed he was making without reference to the speedometer. He said the speedometer was more valuable for information concerning the distance traveled. I asked him to take me for a ride and I would prove to him that he was wrong.

"We got out on a country road and I asked him to let her out. At the same time, I covered up the speedometer with my hand. 'How fast are we going?' I asked. 'About 27 or 28 miles an hour,' he replied. Then I took my hand of the speedometer and showed him that he had been making more than 32 miles an hour. I covered up the speedometer again and told him to cut her down to 12. He slowed up and said: 'We're not making more than 12 now.' He was going between 14 and 15 miles an hour. If an automobile owner wants to enjoy city driving without worrying about arrest for violating the speed laws he must have an accurate speedometer on his car.

GARFORD TRUCK CO. OPENS ST. LOUIS BRANCH

An announcement of more than usual interest in local automobile trade circles is the opening of a branch of the Garford Motor Truck Co. of Lima, O., in this city at 4739 McPherson avenue, under the management of W. E. Conway Jr. The announcement is given added significance because of the importance of this territory, and the increasing business which made it necessary to establish a large distributing station here.

S. M. Williams, sales manager of the Garford Motor Truck Co., is especially interested in the company's new project because of his thorough acquaintance with local business conditions. He lived in St. Louis several years and has an extensive knowledge of motor truck possibilities and requirements here.

"The equipment of the new St. Louis branch is complete and it includes everything which goes to make up a thoroughly modern and up-to-date motor truck establishment. Facilities are furnished for giving Garford owners the very highest type of technical service. This gives the company the ability to meet any demands of its customers.

Care of Body Surfaces.

"The beautiful body finish of your car is an important part of the value you have received," says G. R. Shaeffer, vice president of the Tobey Distributing Co., distributors of Tobey polish.

The care of these surfaces requires: First, frequent and proper cleaning; and second, the application of correct conditioning oils, to keep the varnish and enamel from drying out, cracking and blistering.

All coarse dirt and grit should be removed before applying the polish, to avoid scratching the finish. If such dirt will come off by dusting, it is unnecessary to wash the car. If not, wash the surface with clear, cold water, from sponge or hose. Pure auto soap will hasten this process, although it is better not to use soap unless stubborn deposits make it necessary, as the tendency of alkali is to destroy the oil in the finish and turn the surface white. If soap is used, rinse off suds carefully before drying.

After washing, chamois off. It is not necessary to wipe the surface thoroughly dry, as slight dampness will not interfere with the action of the polish in any way.

DETROIT FACTORIES BUSY.

W. L. Johnsoon of the Johnson Automobile Co. spent a few days the past week at the King Motor Car Co's plant in Detroit. He returns to St. Louis vividly impressed with the hugh amount of business that the automobile manufacturers in Detroit are enjoying.

"It is wonderful," Mr. Johnson declares, "Detroit automobile factories think nothing of shipping in one day from their factory what would be a big year's business for a number of St. Louis automobile dealers. All the reports current about big business in the automobile industry are soon verified when one gets the same opportunity of investigation accorded me while there.

"At the King plant they are working as hard as they can. Material is coming in better for some of the factories and while one cannot promise too much for deliveries I feel confident that we will be taken care of here in St. Louis in so far as the eight-cylinder King is concerned.

LEASED ENTIRE BUILDING.

Maxwell Bros., dealers in used cars and automobile salvage, have enlarged their present quarters, taking in the second floor and basement of the building at 3931-33 Olive street, which they recently occupied. The Salvage Co., which sells the parts of wrecked and older cars which are undamaged, as well as the used cars they have rebuilt, has pulled down over 200 cars since the beginning of their business of this year.

"Many motorists now realize," says Maxwell, "that many perfect parts are available in wrecked and used cars, that possess advantage over new parts, as the used part in such condition has proven that it is flawless."

NEW SERVICE STATION.

The Battery Service Co., recently authorized as the official Willard service station for St. Louis, are preparing to move from their present building, which will be torn down and replaced by a five-story building for the Overland Co., to Twenty-third and Olive streets.

In their new location the Battery Service Co. will have increased facilities and be prepared to render service for all makes of batteries.

Fine Cars Are Costing
$25,000,000 Too Much

John W. Bate—the efficiency engineer—says, "If all fine cars were built as the New Mitchell is built, the makers would save—on this year's output—at least $25,000,000."

That means high-priced cars only.

It means the loss through buying parts which the Mitchell factory makes. And the fearful loss through wasteful factory methods.

It tells how efficiency can give a car like this, equipped like this, at the Mitchell price. And no other feature talked today is so significant.

Pays for 26 Extras

The Mitchell factory savings pay for 26 extras found in this Mid-Year Mitchell.

That is, things you want and need. But things you can't get in other cars without an extra price. The costliest car doesn't have more than four of them.

Things like a power tire pump, Bate cantilever springs, reversible headlights, ball-bearing steering gear, dashboard engine primer. The Mitchell has everything invented to add attractions to a car.

And no extra price for them. We pay for them all through efficiency.

The Model Motor Plant

John W. Bate has built for us a 45-acre plant. He has equipped it with 2092 up-to-date machines.

He has trained our men—worked out thousands of minute-saving methods. In the past five years he has reduced Mitchell factory costs 50 per cent.

He has simplified the car. He has fought down weight. Castings have been almost entirely eliminated—supplanted by tough, strong steel.

The Mitchell today is the only car in the world with 440 drop forgings and steel stampings.

Ask Any Authority

Ask any authority. If he knows this car he will pronounce it an engineering marvel.

We have a list of 37 engineers—men in the first rank of the engineering profession. All of these men have selected the Mitchell for use as their personal car. Our dealers have the list.

We also have a record of six Mitchell cars which have averaged, in the hands of owners, 164,372 miles each. Over 30 years of ordinary service.

Those are other results of these Bate efficiency methods.

Mid-Year Model—73 New Ideas

The new model on show now embodies 73 new ideas. It contains in one car all the best new features found in 257 New York Show models.

The body is the handsomest design found on any touring car. The details include every popular touch found in 1916 models. It has, in addition, our 26 extras. So this New Mitchell is the most complete car you have ever seen.

We ask you to see these extras, and judge their value to you.

We ask you to ride in it, to know the comfort of Bate cantilever springs.

You can't know this car—can't even look at it—without saying, "That's the car I want."

The Doctor's Advice

By Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Elwood sts., Dayton, O., inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Old Soldier" writes: "I would like to know what to do for rheumatism, as I am so crippled that I cannot walk. Please answer at once."

Answer: Here is the best remedy for rheumatism that is known, and if taken according to directions you will soon be out again and be strong and well. Get 2 drams of iodide of potassium; 4 drams sodium salicylate, ½ oz. wine of colchicum, 1 oz. comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz. comp. fluid balmwort and 5 ozs. of syrup sarsaparilla comp. Mix and take a teaspoonful at meal time and again before going to bed

C. O. C. asks: "I am constipated, tongue coated, have headache, dizzy spells and indigestion cometimes. Please advise."

Answer: I advise that you begin using three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur). These tablets are laxative, act on the liver, kidneys and bowels and tend to keep the blood pure, by arousing the eliminative functions. Relief should follow quickly.

"Secretary" writes: "I have pains in my spine and frightful headache in back of head, fainting spells, twitching and trembling, nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and strength, and in fact am a 'has been,' when it comes to performing accustomed work and duties. Please advise."

Answer: In all such cases the assimilative functions have not kept pace with waste functions and a powerful, harmless tonic treatment is needed. I find three-grain cadomene tablets unexcelled and astonishingly beneficial in such cases and advise them for you.

Mrs. C. W. B. asks: "I suffer greatly owing to too much fat. Can you advise me of a good reduction remedy?"

Answer: Any well-stocked pharmacy can supply you with 5-grain arbolone tablets, packed in sealed tubes with full directions for use. These tablets have proven wonderfully effective in reducing abnormal fat. —Advertisement.

Miss "Constance" asks: "I am very thin and bloodless and want to increase my weight about 30 pounds. Please tell me what method to pursue?"

Answer: A regular and persistent use of three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets will usually produce an increase of weight by aiding nutrition and building up the flesh tissues. Scores of patients have reported increases of from 10 to 40 pounds from the use of these tablets. Full directions come with each sealed package.

Mrs. X. asks: "My scalp itches terribly, is feverish and a great amount of oily dandruff is present. What is good for this?"

Answer: First shampoo the hair and then apply plain yellow minyol about once a week as per directions. This delieves the itching, overcomes the dandruff and makes the hair beautifully glossy and vigorous. Obtain in 4-oz. jars of druggists.

Mrs. "Annie R." writes: "My husband is surely afflicted with some kidney disease. He has become weak and suffers with headache and pains in his back and groins. Pains are like rheumatism. His ankles swell and his feet seem to be tired all the time. Some days he has chills and no appetite. Please prescribe."

Answer: The symptoms indicate derangement of kidneys and should not be neglected. I would advise balmwort tablets, a compound well suited to such cases. Obtain in sealed tubes with directions for home use.

MORE POPULAR ORCHESTRA, NEW MANAGER'S AIM

Vigorous Campaign Planned to Increase Symphony Organization's Efficiency.

The new Board of Management of the St. Louis Symphony Society, with President John Fowler, has outlined a vigorous campaign for popularizing the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra and increasing its efficiency and service to St. Louis and the St. Louis trade territory.

The $50,000 guarantee fund is not complete, but the new board of management is confident that the full sum will be realized at the close of the campaign. With this guarantee fund the society will be able to increase the size of the orchestra, adding 14 instruments to the string section, which will give Director Max Zach a better opportunity of developing the orchestra to its fullest capacity. It will also enable the orchestra to carry its tonal message to communities that have no orchestra.

Many Trees Also in Bloom, Adding to General Panorama—Rare Collection in English Garden.

The outdoor gardens of the Missouri Botanical Gardens are now offering a floral panorama full of surprises and delight to the general public. In the main garden the lilacs and snowballs, Japanese honeysuckle and other shrubs are flaunting fragrant blossoms. The Spanish iris, bordering the lakes and brooks among the knolls, are showing their royal purple blossoms. Among the trees which are dressed in their gala spring garments are the horse chestnuts, both red and white.

The English garden, which has a rare collection of the old perennial plants of our grandmother's day, is now ablaze with the perennial purple phlox, white and lavender German iris, snowy white iberis, or evergreen candy tuft—and the yellow leopard bane.

A superb collection of fuchsias have been added to the Shakspearean Garden to lend a touch of color to the decorative scheme. This garden is still the main attraction to visitors who are studying their Shakspeare preparing for the Shakspearean Pageant, which will be held at Forest Park next month.

18 INDIAN SCHOOL CHILDREN HAVE "SWATTED" 6736 FLIES

One Pupil in Contest Encouraged by Merchants Credited With Extermination of 651.

COLUMBUS, Ind., May 13.—In spite of weather that has been too chilly to be comfortable for flies, several thousand of them have been killed by Columbus school children who are taking part in a fly swatting contest.

Melvin Houk, a principal in one of the schools, has charge of the contest. He has announced the scores of the three leading swatters in each of the six schools. Paul Huffman of the Central building leads with 651 killed. The 18 leaders have killed 6736. Six hundred and thirty-two children are entered.

More than 50 prizes have been donated by Columbus merchants.

ANTI-"DUMPING" LAW TO PROTECT TRADE ADVOCATED BY COMMISSIONER DAVIES

Chairman of Federal Body Declares Act Is Necessary to Prevent Unfair Competition From Abroad After War

By Henry N. Hall.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—"Democracy is the grand adventure in the growth of civilization. Whenever men have struggled to be free the world has progressed, but after all, popular government—the government of the people, by the people and for the people—is still an experiment measured in terms of world history. Above all, the struggle is not a political one. You and I and all men live lives that are more industrial and commercial and economic than political. And so industrial freedom is only a part of democracy. Political freedom has long since been won. What the people want is not politcal freedom—it is industrial freedom and the equality of opportunity. Industrial monopoly is simply industrial monarchy."

Joseph E. Davies, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, which has replaced the Bureau of Corporations, was giving me his views on the duty of the Government to prevent unfair methods of competition which lead to monopoly, whether from within or from without. He continued:

"The Federal Trade Commission is a body of business experts and economists. Its procedure is simple, its methods are direct. It is bending its every effort to the solution of problems arising out of the world war and which affect the industrial and governmental evolution. The whole problem, after all, is for a democracy to become equally efficient in an industrial way as an autocracy. I believe it can be done and that the big economic problems which we as a nation must face can be worked out in a manner compatible with the spirit of democracy.

Must Look Out for "Dumping."

"Take 'dumping,' for instance. It is inextricably woven in with the problem of international competition and the conditions which we shall have to face after the war is over. The war has demonstrated—as nothing could have done—the complete interdependence between military power—and through it the possible domination of the world—and industrial efficiency. The question we are all asking ourselves is whether a constitutional democracy, such as England, can reach the same degree of material efficiency as a monarchial socialized state, such as Germany has attained. The efficiency of the Prussian military organization is only the counterpart of an equally efficient industrial organization.

"Now we must look forward into the future. We must see what the world conditions are going to be after the war, what changes will be wrought and what effect they will have upon American industry and commerce when, after peace is restored, the nations of the earth will resume their race for commercial and industrial supremacy.

"Now, one of the things we have to look out for is 'dumping.' Many good business men are afraid that, when the war is over, the big foreign trusts will begin to 'dump' goods into the United States and to undercut and undersell our national industries in a way that will ruin them. This has been done in the past and they say it will be done again.

"There is very little authentic information available about 'dumping' and, of course, no one can foretell exactly what will happen in the future, so speculation about it is of little use. Likewise, there is nothing much to be gained by a discussion of the merits or demerits of 'dumping,' but we have gathered here some facts about 'dumping' and they are of very real interest.

Definition of "Dumping."

"First of all: What is 'dumping?' 'Dumping' is the practice of exporting and selling commodities abroad at prices cheaper than they are sold for at home in order to market a surplus or to drive out competition. It is a process of cheap foreign sales. It is a new name given to a very old thing.

"Now, ever since the end of the eighteenth century, governments wishing to promote foreign trade have given bounties to stimulate production and exportation, sometimes paying premiums on articles sent to foreign markets. This practice has grown and now Germany has provided bounties on cocoa, tobacco, salt, spirits and beer, and her railways give rebates on export shipments; Austria provides export premiums and gives drawbacks on numerous articles; Chile has an export bounty on alcoholic beverages; France provides bounties on silk, oil, hemp, flax and other things; Italy gives railroad rebates for certain export goods; the Argentine Republic pays bounties on sugar, and Russia on manufactured goods, spirits, etc. Nearly all protective countries provide for drawbacks. These are all instances of government premiums designed to promote their foreign trade by cheap foreign sales. That is one form of 'dumping.'

"Then we have cheap foreign sales without Government aid. That is the system to which the name of 'dumping' was first given and it differs from the foregoing in that it is a kind of cheap foreign sale to which governmental support is not essential. The whole basis of the German syndicates and cartels of manufacturers and producers was to pool their output and fix prices so as to permit the sale abroad at a low figure of their surplus production.

"In the Reichstag debates on the subject it was stated that the coal syndicate had assessed its members as much as 17,000,000 marks (more than $4,250,000), which it had paid out again to members as premiums for export. In 1913 the pigiron syndicate paid export premiums ranging as high as 20 marks per ton on all finished goods exported. The Rhenish-Westphalian coal cartel sold coke for export at 8 marks, when the price for home consumption was 17 marks. The wire cartel had three prices—one for German consumption, one for the German exporters and one for foreign trade. The nail syndicate sold nails at home for $250 a ton, abroad the price was $140; rails sold in Germany for 118 marks, the same in Portugal could be bought for 85 marks. There can be no doubt that the German Government encouraged these practices in every possible way.

Practiced by Big Corporations.

"'Dumping,' however, has developed even where there was no Government encouragement to back it. It has been practiced by great corporations, who have held that, after a certain point in output has been reached, the remainder up to the potential capacity is produced much cheaper. This simply means that in a going concern the last unit of output costs less to produce than the first. Now, on the grounds that it is good policy to keep the plant working to capacity in the interests of the laborers and to produce a surplus which has to be 'dumped' abroad at a less price than it is sold at home, many of our most powerful American corporations have indulged in this practice.

"Mr. Farrell of the United States Steel Corporation recently advocated the policy of cheaper sales abroad than in the United States and plainly said that 'dumping' was both expedient and desirable. Now, however, much 'dumping' may be in the interest of the corporation which practices it, it always has and must have a disastrous effect upon the industries of the receiving

Take Hair Out Not Off the Skin

It is useless to remove hair from the surface of the skin. This result is all that can be accomplished with pastes, rub-on preparations and imitations of De Miracle. 3 Grain Cadomene Tablets

Men Supplied With Lots of "Ginger"

Tells How To Do It.

"Ginger" has become a synonym for a warm, fervent, energetic, enthusiastic, cheerful frame of mind. When one is in such spirit, obstacles have no terrors, and success, with fame and fortune, presents opportunities which the gloomy, despondent, unhappy man fails to see or grasp.

To have "lots of ginger," your system must supply your nerves with all the elements of nutrition to make them strong and vital, so that the mind or spirit also can be sustained by nervous force.

No one can be happy with a toothache, yet a toothache is just a suffering nerve. Doesn't that prove that the nerves control the pleasures and happiness of your existence? Starved nerves result in many illnesses, much gloom and little pleasure for the possessor.

When there are starved nerves, there is no "ginger," no "pep," no fire, no warmth, no vitality or magnetism. If you lack in "ginger," if you lack in "pep," there's a reason, and the reason is your nerves are being deprived of nutritive elements. What will correct this deplorable condition, you ask.

Cadomene Tablets is the answer, because they are designed for that particular purpose—a powerful, vitalizing tonic of purest kind known to medical experts—containing no narcotics or drug that can weaken—but only such as will strengthen and vitalize the natural, normal nervous forces. It may surprise you to know that in the past few years hundreds of thousands of tubes of Cadomene Tablets have been sold and every tube contains a printed guarantee of satisfaction or money back—and yet, to this date not one single patron has ever requested a return of purchase price on one tube or a dozen. Thousands have been benefited by this wonderful tonic for the nervous system, and you too can derive permanent benefit, if you are not brimming over with "ginger," warmth and personal magnetism. Every well stocked pharmacy can supply Cadomene Tablets in original sealed tubes at $1.00 per tube or six tubes for $5.00.

Weak, Nervous Women

FIND THAT CADOMENE TABLETS ARE NOT ALONE FOR MEN.

Surprising Strength, Vivacity and Endurance Comes to the User.

Primarily one might suppose that Cadomene Tablets were alone for the use of men, but this is not altogether true.

When a woman becomes weak, nervous, hysterical, always tired or irritable, she too is a victim of "starved nerves," and three-grain Cadomene Tablets, taken at such periods is an invaluable aid to the nervous system, creating by their tonic properties better digestion, better nutrition and consequently strength, vivacity, endurance and cheerfulness results, much to the happiness of the entire household—for an "irritable woman" causes dissension and much unhappiness for the whole household. Irritability is usually bad nerves. Cadomene Tablets helps to mend the nerves and make them "good." Get them from your druggist in original sealed tubes.

The Treatment for "Starved Nerves"

Is Equally Good for Man or Woman Who May Be Thus Afflicted.

Three-Grain Cadomene Tablets is a combination of ingredients—a physician's discovery in compounding—not a common so-called "patent medicine," because the formula of ingredients is printed on the label and you know before taking that there is no dangerous stimulants or narcotics to further lessen your vitality.

A powerful vitalizing tonic effect is what you receive in benefits when you take Cadomene Tablets. They work to aid the forces of nature, surely and with ever-increasing efficiency.

The starved nerves are supplied with nutritive elements which results in bodily health and strength and a corresponding improvement in the mental and moral stamina. You may doubt the benefits you will receive, before you take Cadomene Tablets, but you will feel and recognize these great benefits, even from the use of one package, or they will cost you nothing. Even this "doubt" is a symptom unless it is based on reason. Search your mind for a "reason to doubt" and you will fail to find such a reason. Cadomene Tablets are designed to help you and they will do so. They will enable your system to supply plenty of pep, and energy to fulfill your every ambition and hope. Take them and feel the "ginger" of normal strength coursing through your blood, and realize the power of strong, well-nourished nerves.

A Worthy Physician Says:

"After an examination of the formula of your Cadomene Tablets, I feel that nowhere could I obtain a tonic superior to this. Consequently I prescribe them whenever indicated, and with a degree of satisfaction to my patients that amazes me. The uniformity of the benefits to all cases of "nerves" has indeed given me cause to speak a generous word for this unequalled product."

Spring Time is Tonic Time

Why Do We Need a Vitalizing Tonic in the Spring?

The Right Tonic at the Right Time Puts You in Fine Fettle.

Increase Your Pep With Cadomene Tablets.

Why a tonic in the Spring? Nature never intended that man should pass his time in over-heated dwellings and office buildings, nor take his exercise in poorly ventilated street cars and swift moving automobiles. But mankind does just such things all through the winter season, the consequences being that the flesh, the nerves and the spirit are in a poisoned lethargy, giving rise to a sluggish feeling, with rheumatic or neuralgic pains, faintness, loss of energy and appetite, and a feeling of being tired all the time. This is the reason for a tonic in many cases. Others need a tonic because they have dissipated and depleted the nervous system, by over indulgence in eating, drinking and other pastimes.

In either case, serious illness may be prevented, by taking a harmless, vitalizing tonic such as three-grain Cadomene Tablets. Mankind never before had opportunity to recuperate through the amazing benefits of such a miracle working tonic, as Cadomene Tablets. Try them and see how much brighter and stronger you will quickly become. Instead of being sluggish and full of pain, you will have "ginger and pep" in abundane. Your work will not be a horror, and your play will be pleasure. Vim and magnetism will permeate your every movement. Strengthen your body and your nerves and in consequence your mind will likewise be strengthened. Get Cadomene Tablets in sealed tubes with full directions and guarantee.

A Plain Case of Starved Nerves

Thousands Thus Afflicted. Are You One?

Have you ever observed the "man with the starved nerves"? You probably have, but failed to recognize the symptoms. When you see such a man, you will note first timidity or hesitation in his step, in his words, in his attitude. His eye shifts when you talk to him, he becomes fidgety and nervous under the glance of a strong man, or a beautiful woman.

When he arises from a chair and walks, he is not firm and solid in his tread. You see evidence of "starved nerves" in his sunken eyes, with dark circles, giving his cheek bones unusual prominence and often lines of suffering slant obliquely across his cheek. The head is not carried erect, the shoulders are stooped more or less, the eye is dull and expressionless.

Is such a man attractive in his personality? No! He is not. And he knows he is not, but not knowing the cause—which is "starved nerves"—nerves depleted of their spirit strengthening vitality. Not knowing the cause, not knowing how to find relief, he becomes often a victim of despondency and gloom, resulting in melancholy and insanity.

"Starved nerves" are due sometimes to dissipation, to over-indulgence in tobacco and liquor, to overwwork, to worry and to mal-nutrition. Whatever the cause, the symptoms do not vary greatly. Timidity, fear without cause, sleep that brings no rest, or insomnia, trembling of the limbs, heart palpitation, numbness in the extremities, cold hands and feet, severe headaches, especiall y in the back of the head, backache, both when standing or in bed, nervousness, irritability and a general "worn-out" feeling soon after rising in the morning. A fickle appetite, restlessness, and a certain inability to fulfill the desires and hopes of a strong, robust being.

country, although the actual consumer my reap a temporary benefit.

"A British royal commission appointed in 1900 to inquire into the conditions of trade and industry in South Africa described 'dumping' as the 'off-loading of the surplus products of manufacture of one country into the markets of another country.' It stated that 'dumping' is a distinctively unfair form of competition, for one of the essentials of fair trade is lacking—namely, the surplus thus "dumped" is often sold at a positive loss or at a price that can leave no profit to the manufacturer.'

"I might multiply these instances indefinitely, but it must be clear that the first duty of a country seeking to protect its own industries is to prevent 'dumping.' It is only in communities where climatic or other conditions make industrial development impossible that a self-respectable people can tolerate 'dumping' at all. This accounts for the anti-'dumping' legislation which has been passed within the last few years.

Lead Taken by Canada.

"Canada took the lead in anti-"dumping' legislation in 1904, and two years later Australia passed similar laws and other countries followed, till in 1914 'dumping' was absolutely prohibited in South America. There was no effort made to hide the fact that this legislation was directed against the unfair tactics of American trusts, the Standard Oil Co., the United States Steel Corporation and the Tobacco Trust being frequently mentioned by name in the debates which preceded the passage of the various acts.

" 'Dumping' has come to be looked upon—and very justly so, in my opinion—as a condition frequenstly incident to high tariffs, cartels and trusts. 'Dumping' is hardly possible unless there is a protected trust or very strong combination in the branch of industry that produces the 'dumped' articles. Indeed, Dr. Heringa, the noted Dutch economist, believes that protection leads trusts to raising prices at home and 'dumping' abroad.

"It is quite clear that, if dumping is allowed, the manufacturers of a great country can well afford to enter into a combination and to go on exporting their goods at a loss until they have crushed out of existence the local manufacturers of the country in which they are 'dumping' their goods and that, when competition has been stifled, they can put up their prices to monopoly rates and recoup themselves for all their former losses and continue exacting what is virtually tribute from the country whose manufacturers they have crushed.

Australian Industries Act.

"Now, of all the nations that have enacted laws to prevent 'dumping,' Australia seems to have the clearest vision. The evils of 'dumping' cannot be prevented by a tariff only, and so Australia passed what is known as the Australian industries preservation act. It consists of three parts. The first has to do with definitions, the second is entitled the "repression of monopoly" and is similar to our Sherman law, and the third, entitled 'prevention of dumping,' places unfair competition under the ban of the law in order to prevent monopoly, and 'dumping' in any form is defined as unfair competition and is forbidden under heavy penalties.

"Now the United States is not at the present moment threatened with 'dumping,' except, perhaps, in the dyestuff industry, but it is not inconceivable that, after the war, some of the nations now at war, with their industrial forces mobilized and brought to a point of efficiency never even dreamed of in peace, may continue their organization in order to glut the markets of the world and stifle the manufactures which the war has inflated here beyond the point of normal growth. That is a very serious question which time alone can answer.

"But we may take the concrete illustration of the dyestuff industry in the United States. The German supply having been cut off, it became necessary for American manufacturers using dyestuffs to build up a dye industry here. The German dyestuff combination includes a number of companies with an estimated capital of $36,000,000 and assets of more than $400,000,000.

"Now, Americans seeking to establish a dyestuff industry here have been seeking assurances from the Government that they will be protected from unfair foreign competition. What is being urged is that American manufacturers should get as much protection from foreign combinations as they are now entitled to from American trusts. No American combination would be allowed to enter a locality and destroy local competiton and simliiar protection ought to be afforded to American manufacturers when foreign competition threatens to do the same thing. And that is just what the agents of the foreign combination—monopoly is a better word—have threatened to do if ever an American dyestuff industry got to the point where it would be a serious competitor for the domination of the world markets.

Legislation Necessary.

"The United States will have to protect itself by proper legislation against 'dumping,' and I have tried to give you the facts and place the whole question out in the open. It is not a new question. 'Dumping' found its origin in the promotion of foreign trade by Government bounty and premium. A logical development led to cartel organization, formed among other things to provide export premiums which enable its members to sell cheaper abroad than at hime.

"Dumping developed also as an incident to large scale production and trust activities where such production was locally protected by tariffs from foreign competition. The practice of 'dumping,' which we now fear and seek to protect ourselves from, is merely a case of 'chickens come home to roost.' The nations of the earth who have preceded us by enacting protective laws against 'dumping,' did it openly to protect themselves from American trusts.

" 'Dumping' seems to me to be a characteristic feature of monopolistic combinations. It is an unfair method of competition specially resorted to by would-be monopolists and by those who have achieved monopoly. The tariff, in some instances at least, has failed to afford any protection against the onsets of a trade war and has even at times been absorbed by the monopoly doing the 'dumping.'

"Australia appears to have struck at last the root of the evil by prohibiting 'dumping' absolutely and placing it under the ban of its laws. The prohibition of 'dumping' is a fatal blow to monopoly; it is the only sure protection of our own industries from unfair competition from abroad, and nothing less than the absolute prohibition of 'dumping' ought, in my opinion, to be considered in new legislation by the United States."

GLASS HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST A SPLENDID HABIT

Open sluices of system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink before breakfast a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity, and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast, and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.—ADV.

Kidneys Need Attention

Neglect Leads to Ill Health.

Between the ages of forty and sixty, the human system undergoes a great change in which the kidneys are more or less affected. Inability of the kidneys to throw off uric acid poisons makes the blood incapable to tone and vitalize the body. Pain in the back, tired feeling, dizziness, and many other symptoms are warnings that the kidneys are failing to eliminate the waste products from the system. If taken in time, Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy will help restore the kidneys to a normal condition. It aids to strengthen and stimulate the kidneys, gently subdues inflammation and quite rapidly corrects a torpid and bilious condition of the liver.

Mrs. W. P. Brabham of Govern, S. C., says: "About twenty-five years ago I was very sick; nine doctors gave up my case as hopeless. I was advised to try Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, and it put me on my feet again. I have advised numerous people to take it and they say they get splendid results and always keep it on hand."

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy contains no harmful ingredients and should be used when the kidneys need attention. At all druggists in 50c and $1.00 bottles. Free samples if you write Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Dept. 245, Rochester, N. Y.

MAN RISKS HIS LIFE TO SAVE THAT OF AN ENTANGLED ROBIN

Bird Unable to Release Itself From Long String Intended for Use in Building Nest.

LAWRENCEBURG, Ind., May 13.—Henry J. Harper, 46 years old, risked his life by climbing a large elm tree to save a robin.

The bird was building a nest among the top limbs, and had a long cord in its bill when in some way one end of the string was caught on a stout twig. The bird in trying to get it loose became entangled by the other end and was unable to release itself. After trying for nearly an hour it became exhausted and gave up.

The attention of Harper was called to the plight of the bird by neighbors who had been watching it. He climbed the tree, and, by cutting the limb off, was able to rescue the robin.

HOLES BLASTED FOR TREES

Great Holes Made in Rock Foundation of School Yard.

ANDERSON, Ind., May 13.—To provide space for soil for trees, dynamite is being used in blasting solid stone from the ground at a school building at Pendleton. The school is near Fall Creek, where the stone rises to within two or 10 feet of the surface, and because the thin soil does not afford room for roots of trees the school grounds have been bare.

By blasting holes and filling them with good soil it is believed the trees will grow.

Measuring the Thames River.

LONDON, May 13.—Lord Desborough, chairman of the Thames Conservation Board, stated to the board that more water passed down the river last year than ever before in a like period. The flow, he said, amounted to 842,000,000,000,000 gallons, as compared with 484,000,000,000,000 in 1914.

Tents and Booths Assigned to Turnvereins for Celebration at Bellevue Park.

The biggest popular German festival in recent years will be the Volksfest of the St. Louis Turner District, to be held at Bellevue Park, May 20 and 21. Every gymnastic society belonging to the St. Louis District has appointed committees to help make the Volksfest a success.

The activities of committees are directed at the two big features of the festivals, the gymnastic exhibition and athletic competition of the combined turnvereins and the individual turners, and the outdoor bazar. PARK PLAYERS IN "WOLF;" FILMS THE RULE ELSEWHERE

Columbia a Photoplay House for Summer, but Two Vaudeville Shows Remain.

The Park Theater Players will present "The Wolf," a Eugene Walter drama, tomorrow night and through the week, while the Park Opera singers, in "The Wizard of the Nile," will go to the Shenandoah. The latter engagement marks Frank Moulan's final week with the local organization. In "The Wolf," Marie Prather will have the single feminine role, which was taken in the original production by Charlotte Walker, and Mitchell Harris, Henry Hull, Stanley James, Louis Calhern and Louis Bartels will have the other parts. The scene is in a Canadian lumber camp, and a real waterfall is promised in the last act.

Gertrude Hoffmann's extended engagement in "Sumurun" at the Columbia Theater ends tonight, and the house will be used this summer for motion pictures. The bill for the week beginning tomorrow will be the first and second chapters of "Gloria's Romance," with Billie Burke in the chief role and Charlie Chaplin in "The Floorwalker." At the King's Theater the second chapter of "Gloria's Romance" will be shown, as an added attraction to a bill of four films, including William Collier in "The No-Good Guy" and Douglas Fairbanks in "The Good Bad Man."

The American Theater's photoplay bill this week will include Dorothy Gish in "Susan Rocks the Boat" and Bessie Barriscale in "Not My Sister." The Grand Opera House vaudeville bill will be headed by a song revue, "This Way, Ladies." At Forest Park Highlands the vaudeville bill will be headed by Charles Olcott's travesty on grand opera. The New Grand Central's film bill will be "The Cinderella Girl," with Ella Hall.

SUMMER HERE; GARDENS OPEN

Delmar Garden opened its seventeenth season yesterday, under the managemen of J. C. Jannoupoulo. The attractions are a cabaret, orchestra concerts, Triangle photoplays, the dance pavilion, the "Pike" shows, and, after about June 1, the bathing beach.

Mannion's Park, at the end of the South Broadway line, will open its amusement season next Sunday. Three changes of show will be made each week, the bill for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday being dramas; Wednesday and Thursday musical reviews, and Friday and Saturday vaudeville and moving pictures. The balroom and cabaret are other attractions in the park, and the swimming pool will be opened ere long.

Entertainment by Dancing Pupils.

A feature of the program for the closing entertainment by pupils of Flora Trimp Grahl, to be given Friday evening in Trimp's Hall, is the number by Florence Fitzgibbon and Neal Lambur, two young dancers of St. Louis, who frequently have appeared at entertainments for the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund.

FATHER, MOTHER, SISTER AND THOSE WHO LOVED HER.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of my dear mother, Mrs. Frank B. Warner, who departed this life one year ago, May 14, 1915. Sadly missed, but not forgotten, by her

DAUGHTER AND SON-IN-LAW. (c)

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dearest Bessie Williams, who departed this life May 9, 1915.

In silence you suffered, with patience
you bore,
Till God called you to suffer no more.

Sadly missed by her MOTHER, FATHER AND FRIENDS.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear husband, Otto H. Leisler, who passed away May 9, 1914.

Two years have passed
Since we laid you to rest,
And placed your cold hand
Upon your dear breast.
In silence you suffered,
With patience you bore,
Till God called you home
To suffer no more.

Sadly missed by his wife.
CARRIE LEISLER.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear mother and grandmother, Margeretha Frank, who died one year ago, May 11, 1915.

We stood beside her bed of death,
Bowed down were we in sorrow,
We knew she would be lost to us
Upon the coming morrow.
From her lips the cheerful smile
Could not by death be driven,
And with a hope of future bliss
She passed from earth to heaven.

Sadly missed by her daughters and grandchildren, Bauer, Kormann and Armbruster Families. (c)

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear husband, Frank H. Walker, who died May 11, 1913.

Three years have passed
Since I laid you to rest,
And placed your cold hand
Upon your breast.
In silence you suffered,
With patience you bore,
Till God called you home
To suffer no more.

Sadly mourned by his wife.
MARTHA WALKER.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dearly beloved daughter, Maggie Mueller (nee Goldenbogen), who passed away two years ago, May 11, 1914.

All the world is gray with shadows,
Clouds have dimmed the sunset glow;
Just two years, dear, since you have left us,
Yet it seems so long ago.
Sadly missed by father, mother, sister and brother, and two little boys, Eddie and Arthur.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our beloved father and husband, Henry Siemers, who departed this life two years ago, May 10, 1914.

The month of May is here again,
The saddest in the year;
You are gone, but not forgotten,
Never shall your memory fade;
Lonely hearts shall always linger
Where our dear good father is laid.

Sadly missed by
WIFE, SONS AND DAUGHTERS.

Have You Learned, as Many Others Have, How to Use This, the Most Tireless Force That Man Has Harnessed?

Most persons have a pride in being "modern" in dress, in information, in home-surroundings, and in their mode of living, nor are they slow to make use, in their daily lives, of the most "modern" things in the world—the most "up-to-date" convenience of nowadays' life—the most tireless force that man has yet harnessed and impressed into his service—"want advertising."

For instance, last month the Post-Dispatch printed 68,000 want ads, 12,000 relating to employment, 16,000 to homes, rooms and real estate, 14,000 to buying and selling, 3000 to business opportunities and financial, leaving nearly 23,000 for miscellaneous business notices, lost, found and personal.

Phone your want. Call 6600—Olive or Central. Or leave the ad with your nearest druggist.

Don't Buy A Lot
Because the present high price of building materials and unsettled labor conditions and strikes will make your house cost 50 per cent more than a year ago. Hence it would not pay you to build now, even if you received the lot as a gift.

We can sell you a fine bungalow that was built when materials and labor were low, on a choice lot, at much less than the house alone would now cost, $3500. Must be seen to be appreciated. Seven rooms, glazed brick, steam heat, slate roof, tile bath, sleeping porch and every modern improvement; only one left. 5304 Neosho st. BEAUTIFUL
SOUTHMOOR
—BRENTMOOR DISTRICT
Offers Ideal Home Sites at Moderate Prices

SOUTHMOOR has every advantage anyone could wish for in the way of location; exclusiveness and improvements.

Southmoor is on Pennsylvania Avenue—300 yards south of Wydown Avenue—immediately south of Brentmoor and Forest Ridge. It overlooks Forest Park, Washington University and Hillcrest on the east and the broad valleys of Webster Groves and Kirkwood on the west. It is from 60 to 80 feet higher than Lindell Boulevard at Skinker Road. Southmoor is convenient to schools and churches.

Southmoor's restrictions and improvements are practically the same as Brentmoor's. The owners either live in Southmoor or Brentmoor or expect to build homes there. Naturally they are interested in securing the best conditions, and not being forced to sell, purchasers are assured of protection, and that lots will be disposed of only to desirable home-builders. Under no circumstances will Southmoor lots be auctioned. Streets, sidewalks, gutters, sewers and gas are all in and paid for, and are of the best—the lasting kind.

Lots are of generous width, with an average depth of about 200 feet, but not large enough to be burdensome. As a special inducement to early buyers, we are authorized to make very low prices.

Go out to Southmoor and see for yourself what an attractive homesite it is. Take the Clayton car to Pennsylvania Avenue and walk 300 yards south to the entrance, or drive out Lindell Boulevard and Wydown Avenue.

BEAUTIFUL

—BRENTMOOR DISTRICT

Offers Ideal Home Sites at Moderate Prices

SOUTHMOOR has every advantage anyone could wish for in the way of location; exclusiveness and improvements.

Southmoor is on Pennsylvania Avenue—300 yards south of Wydown Avenue—immediately south of Brentmoor and Forest Ridge. It overlooks Forest Park, Washington University and Hillcrest on the east and the broad valleys of Webster Groves and Kirkwood on the west. It is from 60 to 80 feet higher than Lindell Boulevard at Skinker Road. Southmoor is convenient to schools and churches.

Southmoor's restrictions and improvements are practically the same as Brentmoor's. The owners either live in Southmoor or Brentmoor or expect to build homes there. Naturally they are interested in securing the best conditions, and not being forced to sell, purchasers are assured of protection, and that lots will be disposed of only to desirable home-builders. Under no circumstances will Southmoor lots be auctioned. Streets, sidewalks, gutters, sewers and gas are all in and paid for, and are of the best—the lasting kind.

Lots are of generous width, with an average depth of about 200 feet, but not large enough to be burdensome. As a special inducement to early buyers, we are authorized to make very low prices.

Go out to Southmoor and see for yourself what an attractive homesite it is. Take the Clayton car to Pennsylvania Avenue and walk 300 yards south to the entrance, or drive out Lindell Boulevard and Wydown Avenue.

Opportunity Knocks at Every Man's Door but Once

This Is Your Opportunity Acre tracts in beautiful Kathmar Acres are being sold at a price within the reach of the smallest pocketbook, and on very easy terms.

An acre contains 43,560 square feet; divided up into ordinary city lots of 25 feet frontage by 110 feet deep, it contains sixteen city building lots. This would make the cost to you, figuring it on the ordinary city lot basis, about $2.00 a front foot. The cost to you now of an entire acre in Kathmar Acres will be but little more than that of an ordinary 25-foot city lot.

Kathmar Acres is most beautiful of all the beautiful spots in St. Louis County, and there is none with richer or more productive soil.

An acre in Kathmar Acres will produce all the fruit and vegetables that your family can use and thus materially reduce the high cost of living.

How to Get There To reach Kathmar Acres take the Ferguson-Kirkwood line at Wellston and transfer to the Florissant division at the transfer point west of Ramona Park. The fare is five cents from Wellston. Leave the car at Genevieve avenue. For full information and beautiful folder of Kathmar Acres see

FARMS FOR SALE

MISSOURI

SUCCESSFUL
HIGHLY PRODUCTIVE
1000-ACRE ORCHARD AND FARM
20-ACRE FARMS FOR ONLY
$300.
ON TERMS OF
$10.00 CASH AND $5.00 MONTHLY.
WITHOUT INTEREST OR TAXES.

I am having splendid success with my 1000-acre orchard and farm in Southeast Missouri. Have 100 more acres in peaches, 133 in apples, 6 in grapes, 8 in strawberries, 4 in blackberries and raspberries, and 150 in vegetables, grains and grasses. The balance will be planted to grapes and fruit trees next spring. The peaches have been running over $100 per acre, berries and grapes $300, tomatoes $100 ($10 per ton at the canning factory), etc. Apples just coming into bearing.

I have a large amount of land surrounding my 100-acre orchard and farm, much more than I will ever be able to get under cultivation myself, and will sell 10 or 20 acre tracts at $300, on terms of $10.00 cash and $5.00 monthly, without interest or taxes.

FARMS FREE TO LIMITED NUMBER.

For a limited number of persons I have an arrangements whereby they can obtain a farm tract free.

My location is in Southeast Missouri, midway between the Ozarks and the lowlands, elevation above the sea level about 550 feet.

Before offering any of the land for sale, I went to the authorities of the seven nearby states having the so-called "Blue Sky" laws and asked them to pass on the printed matter I had prepared and to send their expert land men to inspect my orchard, farm and land offered. After doing this, and also investigating my financial responsibility and past business record, they quickly granted permission to sell my land in their states.

A few acres here, properly looked after, will bring you a splendid income, besides providing the best of everything for your own use. $100 to $800 clear profit per acre can be made. Fruits, berries, vegetables, grains and grasses will produce these results. A single cow can be made to pay $12 clear profit every month, $100 will build you a cozy, comfortable home in our mild climate that will seem like a little palace compared with the ordinary, crowded brick-bound city flat.

With a few chickens, pigs and a cow, fruits, berries, vegetables and a little meadow to start with, your health, wealth and happiness come into your own hands. Photograph Which Won First International Prize

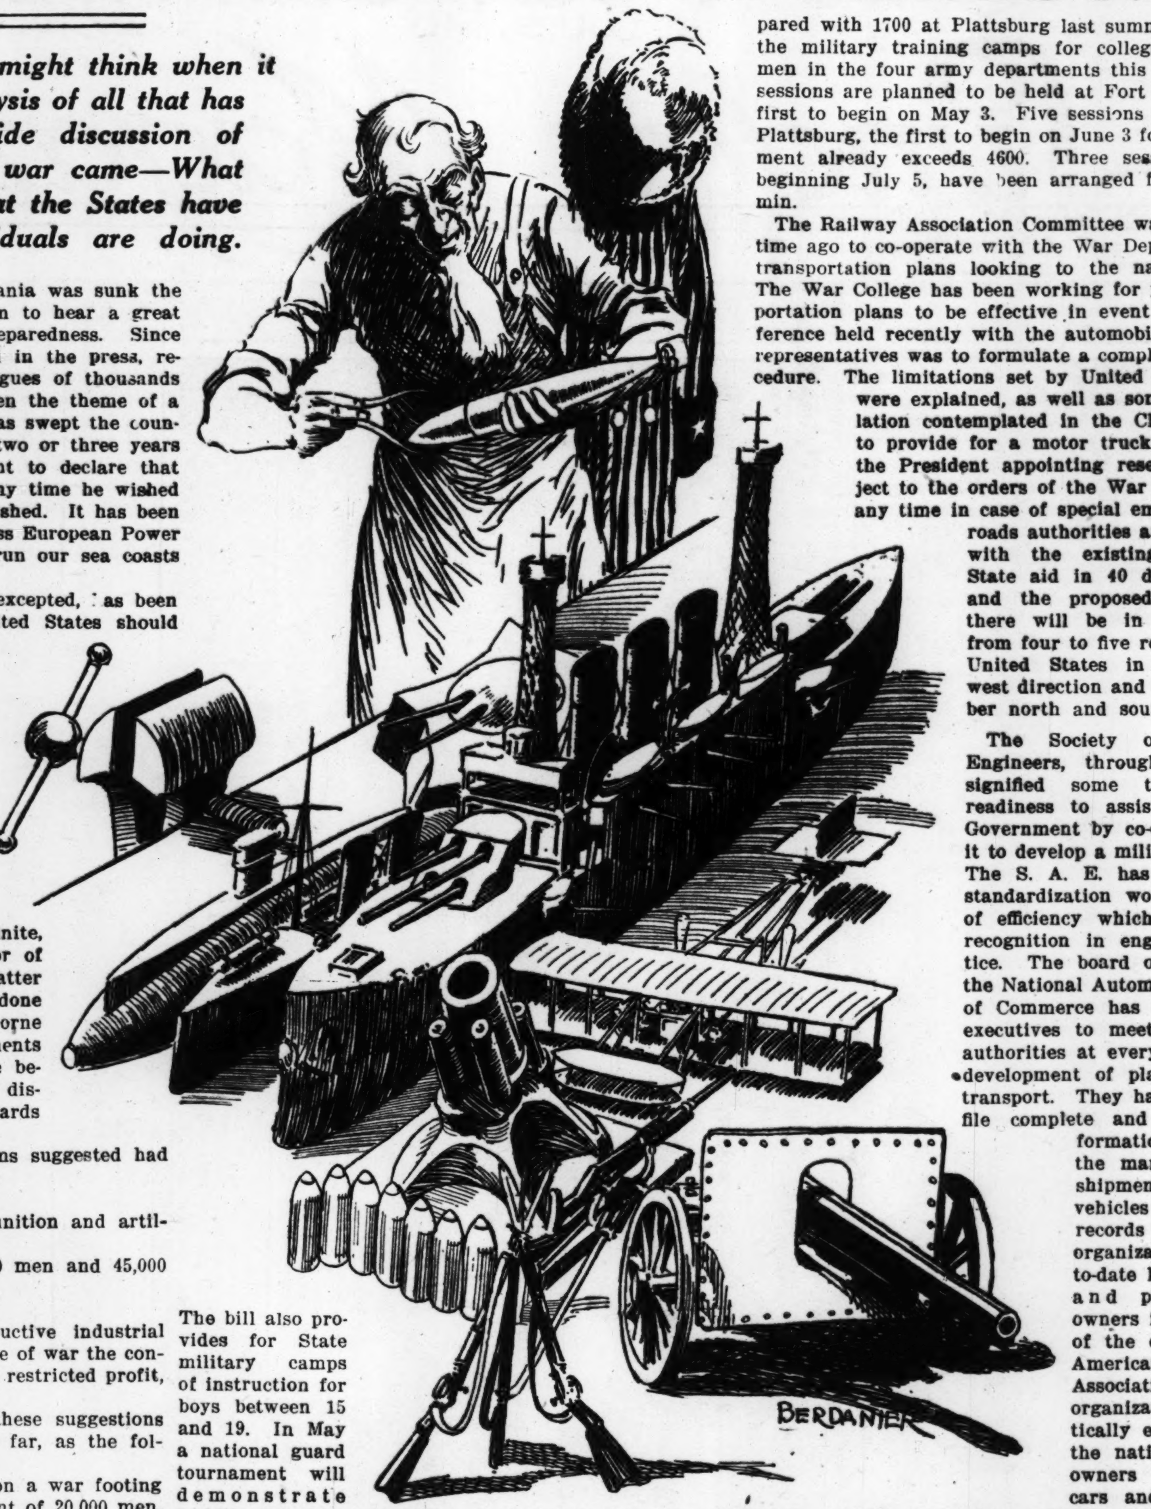
FOR the second time in consecutive years the photograph of which this is a reproduction has won first prize in the professional class at the annual contest of the International Photographic Arts Association. The picture was made by R. C. Nelson of Hastings, Neb., and is called "Doris and the Soap Bubbles." For beauty and simplicity of composition, for clearness of detail and for the general artistic conception the experts consider it unequaled by anything in the exhibition. This year's contest was at Cleveland, O., and innumerable pictures were shown, submitted from all parts of the country.

RESULTS OF ONE YEAR'S AGITATION FOR PREPAREDNESS

They are more than you might think when it comes to a careful analysis of all that has followed the nation-wide discussion of what would happen if war came—What Congress has done, what the States have done and what individuals are doing.



ABOUT the time the Lusitania was sunk the American people began to hear a great deal of the word preparedness. Since then it has thundered in the press, resounded from the tongues of thousands of orators. It has been the theme of a sort of crusade that has swept the country. The cocksureness with which, two or three years ago, the average American was wont to declare that Uncle Sam could peel off his coat any time he wished and thrash the whole world has vanished. It has been succeeded by a fear that any first-class European Power could catch us unprepared and overrun our sea coasts before we could get started.

Almost everybody, a few pacifists excepted, has been telling everybody else that the United States should put itself into some reasonable condition of military and naval preparedness. At least four separate organizations, the National Security Conference, the American Defense Society, the National Defense Conference of Mayors and a special committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, have set up definite programs.

How much of this twelvemonth agitation has been froth and how much has had substance? A year ought to produce something definite, whether of actual accomplishments or of failure. An examination into the matter reveals that more has really been done than might be supposed. It must be borne in mind, of course, that great movements such as this take time and that the beginnings are usually separate and disunited, yet tending at the last towards unity and symmetry.

The four principal national programs suggested had at least these four things in common:

Universal obligatory training.

A regular army reserve with ammunition and artillery.

A standing army of at least 200,000 men and 45,000 officers.

A General Staff for the navy.

Intensive mobilization of the productive industrial and commercial forces, to insure in time of war the contribution of their fullest resources at a restricted profit, to be regulated by the Government.

Congress is still trying to reduce these suggestions into legislation. Already it has gone far, as the following record shows:

A joint resolution places the army on a war footing and authorizes the immediate enlistment of 20,000 men.

The Senate has passed an army reorganization bill providing an increase in the enlisted strength, outside medical and quartermasters' corps, to 25,000 men. This would mean a total increase of the army from 110,000 men to 275,000.

The Senate bill provides for a Federal volunteer army reserve of 261,000, federalization of the national guard, representing a force of about 280,000 and a reserve of school and college youths to be trained for regular officers, which would number around 400,000. After five years, under this measure, the United States would have more than 1,000,000 men trained for military service.

The Senate bill provides also for an increase of 5000 men in the coast artillery; military instruction in schools; vocational training in the army; a term of enlistment of five years, two with the colors and three in the reserves; militia representation on the General Staff.

Congress has passed a bill providing $600,000 for the improvement of navy yards, principally that at Mare Island, San Francisco.

Congress has passed a deficiency bill appropriating $8,611,502, including $600,000 for the improvement of the aeroplane service.

A fortifications bill involving some $34,000,000 has been reported to the House. It includes provisions for upwards of 400 guns of all calibers and improved types, reserve supplies of ammunition and authorizes $1,000,000 for purchasing the Hammond radio control.

Congress has passed a bill virtually doubling the number of cadets at West Point. The number of midshipmen at Annapolis also is increased.

The House Committee on Naval Affairs has framed a bill providing for four new capital ships, two battle cruisers and two dreadnoughts. An effort is being made to provide for four battle cruisers and two dreadnoughts.

Congress has authorized the enlargement of the torpedo plant to five times its present capacity.

While all this has been under way in Congress, many states, notably Maryland, New York and Massachusetts, have been taking preparedness steps of their own.

The Maryland Legislature has passed a bill making every ablebodied citizen of the State, between the ages of 18 and 45, liable for military service. The militia is divided into two sections, active and unorganized. Active is composed of ablebodied men. Others are included in unorganized and may be called upon by the Government at any time.

New York has passed a law requiring that at least 20 minutes a day of elementary and secondary schools shall be devoted to physical training, while military training for periods not aggregating more than three hours in each week is prescribed for male pupils between the ages of 15 and 19 in State military colleges and receiving secondary education in the public schools.

The bill also provides for State military camps of instruction for boys between 15 and 19. In May a national guard tournament will demonstrate mobilization by automobile. An obstacle to national guard recruiting has been removed by establishing a State constabulary for riot duty and strike disorder.

New Jersey has created a commission to report on the advisability of compulsory military training in the public schools under national guard officers.

Massachusetts has passed a law committing the State to the transfer of its militia to Federal control whenever a national volunteer force shall have been provided.

In Ohio the city of Cleveland has been asked to give $8000 to send 600 guardsmen to an eight-day training camp and the high school students of Cleveland of 16 years and over are permitted to enlist in the State naval militia. Military drill has been established in the schools at Quincy and Elgin, Ill., and several Missouri schools have provided for similar instruction. Louisville, Ky., and Bangor, Me., have provided for military instruction in the schools, while Providence, R. I., has made it compulsory in the high school.

Five universities—Harvard, Princeton, University of Minnesota, Bowdoin and Williams—declared for military instruction among their courses, either required or voluntary. Harvard will offer instruction in military art beginning next academic year to train candidates for appointment as reserve officers in the United States army. At Princeton, beginning next academic year, there will be an elective one-year course in military instruction. Yale has made no decision, but President Hadley is in favor of military camps for students. Twenty-one Columbia students will go to Plattsburg camp. New York University students are forming a company to be an integral part of the Eighth Co[illegible] Artillery. Harvard leads all, the undergraduate st[illegible]s having already commenced actual training for service as officers.

An actual beginning has been made in the work of mobilizing the national industries. A general board, affiliated with the Naval Consulting Board of Inventors and Engineers, of which Thomas A. Edison is president, has been appointed to take a survey of the industries of each state. This survey is expected to furnish reliable figures on just what can be expected from the manufacturers of the United States in the event of war.

When this has been done, steps will be taken to organize these industries in such a way that their resources can easily be available to the Government in case of war. An organization of skilled labor will be formed so that, when war comes, competent men will be kept in the mills where they can do the most good, their places in the battle lines filled by men who can better be spared.

A tentative arrangement contemplates giving a few small orders for munitions in peace times, at various plants, so that the men there may have practical experience in making them and be ready to do the work on a large scale when the crisis comes.

Army officers expect that at least 15,000 men, as compared with 1700 at Plattsburg last summer, will attend the military training camps for college and business men in the four army departments this summer. Three sessions are planned to be held at Fort Oglethorpe, the first to begin on May 3. Five sessions will be held at Plattsburg, the first to begin on June 3 for which enrollment already exceeds 4600. Three sessions, the first beginning July 5, have been arranged for Fort Benjamin.

The Railway Association Committee was formed some time ago to co-operate with the War Department in the transportation plans looking to the national defense. The War College has been working for years on transportation plans to be effective in event of war. Conference held recently with the automobile and railroad representatives was to formulate a complete line of procedure. The limitations set by United States statutes were explained, as well as some of the legislation contemplated in the Chamberlain bill to provide for a motor truck reserve corps, the President appointing reserve corps subject to the orders of the War Department at any time in case of special emergency. Good roads authorities are hopeful that with the existing methods of State aid in 40 different states, and the proposed Federal aid, there will be in a short time from four to five roads across the United States in an east and west direction and the same number north and south.

The Society of Automobile Engineers, through its council, signified some time ago its readiness to assist the Federal Government by co-operating with it to develop a military transport. The S. A. E. has developed its standardization work to a point of efficiency which has received recognition in engineering practice. The board of directors of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce has authorized its executives to meet the military authorities at every point in the development of plans for motor transport. They have already on file complete and accurate information concerning the manufacture and shipment of motor vehicles together with records of dealers' organizations and up-to-date lists of trucks and pleasure car owners in all sections of the country. The American Automobile Association, with organizations in practically every state, is the national body of owners of pleasure cars and through it will be co-ordinated various volunteer movements.

Grosvenor Clarkson, a secretary of the Naval Consulting Board, has reported the following on preparation to retain aviating engineers: "Arrangements have been completed with the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, whereby at any one time as many as 200 naval aviators, or aviation mechanics, may receive a complete course of instruction on the international combustion engine in several of the great automobile works, the course consisting of practical training extending through six weeks. These privileges have been extended to the army, and they have already availed themselves of them and have sent five or more men to Detroit for instruction. One thousand men could be given instruction in case of national emergency.

"On engine tests, the committee has secured the co-operation of the Automobile Club of America, with their quite unexcelled engine testing facilities, for official tests of all aeroplane engines. These tests are comparable in every way with those of the Royal Automobile Institution of Great Britain. The latest review of engines under test, built in this country, shows a remarkable advance, and the fact that England has placed renewed orders running into many millions of dollars, after numerous tests of extraordinary severity, leads us to believe that at last this perplexing problem of power for aircraft has arrived at a commercial state, especially in point of reliability on long extended trials.

"Aids for detection of the presence of aeroplanes and dirigibles have been investigated, and substantial progress in this line is reported. As to bomb sights—many observations under absolute service conditions abroad are just to hand from the most direct sources, giving us quite a complete survey of the methods at present employed in bomb dropping. As a result of experiment it has been determined that the gyroscope may perform a very important function in connection with bomb dropping.

"The committee, acting through the American Society of Aeronautical Engineers, has inaugurated an important work in standardization of the whole American aeronautic industry, especially from the military standpoint, providing for quick changes in engines, propellers, carburetors, tanks, fitting, etc. The immense amount of detail involved is indicated by the fact that about 160 experts have been mobilized and are working on some 17 different committees in co-operation also with both branches of the Government aerial service.

"It was early found that the magnetic compass is subject to grave error when employed on an aeroplane, especially in heavy 'bank.' The ordinary compass is undependable. Through the efforts of the chairman of the Industrial Preparedness Committee, an extended research has been made, and the data we have obtained are looked upon as very valuable, especially with regard to night flying and flying in hazy or foggy weather, as well as over large bodies of water where no landmarks are visible."

See That Rim on Your Automobile Tire?
It s Inventor Collects $3,000,000 for His Idea

United States Court decides that basic patent is property of Louis H. Perlman, who in 1906 got the idea that tires should be mounted in garage instead of on road, and from this thought developed device employed by 80 per cent. of motor cars—Recently refused bonus of $1,000,000 and $750,000 a year for use of his patent :: ::

A FEW days ago a short, stoutish man with a rather bald head and a round sort of face that had within its lines a queer admixture of care and smiles, walked up to the receiving teller's window at the Chatham and Phenix National Bank, New York, and handed in a slip of paper. It was a check. On its back it bore the indorsement, "Perlman Rim Corporation, L. H. Perlman, Pres."

In return the teller handed out a fresh, new bank book, and in it was only one entry, for the stoutish man was starting a new account: "April 17, $3,000,000." The depositor was Louis Henry Perlman, who was passing on this particular April 17 from comparative poverty to millions. He had won his 10-year fight against some of the most powerful interests in the United States, single-handed and alone.

The United States courts have declared his letters patent No. 1,052,270 as valid and elementary—that L. H. Perlman of New York, of all the people in this country, has the right to manufacture demountable rims for automobiles. And this was his way of beginning business.

It may well be called the "Romance of the Rim,' this story of one man's fight for his rights against what have been termed in open court "forbidden and abhorrent forces." And it is only one of the romances of the automobile industry—the absorbing story of the winning of millions by the simplest patents. Look at the fight that Henry Ford made—and won—to upset the Selden engine patent; and the fights over the patents for spark plug and tire chain: the horn, shock absorber, ball bearing and electric starter—and now the demountable rim case has been fought out to a finish and the inventor has won.

THE CHECK WHICH PERLMAN DEPOSITED.

Louis H. Perlman had long been known in the automobile business and along Automobile Row, which is upper Broadway, and had been especially interested in pneumatic tires that wouldn't go "pop!" just as you were speeding along so nicely or when you were farthest from home—and a new tire.

For years he had been tinkering with tires, always with a view to repairing them readily on the road, or with tools, that the work might be the more quickly done. But the best of his ideas proved to be the pettiest of time savers—he wasn't getting anywhere at all. And punctures were just as frequent and just as slow to repair as ever. And just as much of a nuisance; even more so, for as the motor car improved it got heavier and harder on the tires.

Now, the principle of the screw is as old as the hills. The wedge was known to the ancients, along with the lever and the other great mechanical principles. And the air space to prevent rust between two metal surfaces is nothing novel—how could anyone patent them?

Simply enough—just put all three together. That is what Perlman did and thereby achieved what many men had been searching for in vain—a rim to which a tire might be affixed in a garage, to be taken along swung on the side or stern of the car, and put to work whenever a tire blew up, thus saving time on the road for repairs, and having the work done when the car wasn't needed outside.

You might taken him for a country M. D., or perhaps a college professor. He has a pleasant twinkle in his eye and the look of one who has studied much. Also are there traces of sadness in the deep-set eyes; more than once has the man been tempted to abandon his fight against odds that seemed overwhelming—even in the Patent Office of the United States there were mysterious "forces" at work that compelled him to maneuver mightily to best them.

The office where he sits today is as new as his bank account. On the glass door of a big suite at 1790 Broadway you may read the legend, "Perlman Rim Corporation," and within you may find the inventor and maker thereof—he has just been able to manufacture them himself, where others have been making his very own patents—and selling them. But not any more. A little thing like an injunction has stopped all that.

We are now going to hear about the thought that resulted in the $3,000,000 deposit on April 17.

"I had a friend," began Mr. Perlman, "John H. Duffy, and he owned an automobile. He used to take me out with him on occasions, and whenever I went along it seemed as if he had to make three or four tire changes, because roads were bad and cars were heavy. During these rides I had to help out always, whenever there was a tire to be repaired on the road, and my mind unconsciously turned to the thought of reducing time and labor to applying the tire to the wheel. I studied the tools that were in use, and after I had given up, the idea came that the tires could be made nonpuncturable. But I gradually came to realize that this was not the solution.

"Now, one Saturday we were making a trip to Cornwall; the roads were in very bad shape and we had to make four changes of tires. The very last change I was inflating the tire with a hand pump when of a sudden I had a thought. I stopped pumping.

LOUIS HENRY PERLMAN.

"'Hey, what are you stopping for?' cried Duffy.

"'I'm thinking of something,' I answered.

"'Cut out the thinking,' he roared at me, 'and go ahead with the pumping, if we want to get there at all.'

"So I began pumping away mechanically, but the thought was working itself out in my brain—the whole procedure of doing the work was all wrong; the pumping should be done in the garage and an inflated tire on a rim carried along; the process of having the rim shrunk on the wheel was wrong; the rim should be removable and the tire applied to it at a convenient time and place, and applied to the wheel bodily. My mind was filled with the idea and I was still deep in it when I got home that night.

"I went to a friend, W. T. Eames, who kept a garage, and I told him of my idea. He liked it, but he asked suddenly, 'How are you going to lock your tire and rim to your wheel?' And I had to say, 'I have not thought of that, it will have to be figured out in my mind.'

"And it was. After long and laborious work I planned it out—the wedge and screw, with the air space between the two rims, and so the demountable rim came into being as we know it today."

On May 21, 1906, there was filed at the United States Patent Office an application for patent, the idea being, "A wheel whose demountable rim is bodily detachable from its fixed rim and felly, means being provided for firmly and rigidly retaining the demountable rim on the fixed rim and felly while in use, such means at the same time being adapted to be manipulated for enabling ready, rapid and easy removal of the demountable rim when desired."

The would-be patentee had never been there before. Immediately he found what it means to go up against the Patent Office. His application passed from official to official, through boards of review and every tribunal known to the red-taped Patent Office; it was heard and reheard by each one several times, all of which meant long delay and great cost.

Of course, all the elements of the claim were public property, as far as taking advantage of Perlman's invention were concerned. His fight was largely within the Patent Office. Two different commissioners passed on the claims and they were once reviewed by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. Finally, on Feb. 4, 1913, the well-nigh despairing inventor got his patent.

But too late—almost. During his fight other applications for similar devices kept appearing for patent—a half-hundred of them. And certain concerns started to make demountable rims while Perlman's application was pending. The device seemed of a sudden to become common property and today, fully 80 per cent of all automobiles manufactured in this country use the basic idea.

Of the big manufacturers only Henry Ford has left them out. Ford exhibited what has been called "a masterly inactivity," and confined his output to cars equipped with plain clincher rims. But about a third of the Ford cars are annually equipped, by agents and others, with demountable rims.

But the demountable rim business kept growing by leaps and bounds—everybody interested was making money except the man who had conceived the idea, and he was growing poorer every day. "It cost me hundreds of thousands of dollars to make the fight," said Perlman, as he told his story, "and I never was a millionaire"—this with the sort of smile which meant exactly the reverse.

Perlman was the first man who invented means for tensioning a demountable rim on a wheel, and at the same time preventing the wheel and rim from rusting together, though enabling rapid removal of the rim for the replacement of tires. Many is the motor car enthusiast who remembers how, after some early type of rims had been driven home, and had remained at home for several days, even the inventor couldn't make it leave home—rust had done its work. Every demountable rim in use today is supported in some way with the major portion of the rim out of contact with the wheel felly band, and that's Perlman's idea in a nutshell; that, and the means for holding it tight as a drum there.

The big rim and tire makers turned up their noses at Perlman and his patents. He at once tackled the biggest of them all—the Standard Welding Co. of Cleveland. "I knew," says Perlman today, "that the big companies would resist me with every means in their power—other patents, skillful attorneys, money and the history of the art of tire making."

The Automobile Chamber of Commerce helped fight Perlman. Contributions were asked for from all members. Millions in capital went in against the lone inventor. As a circular to the trade ad-

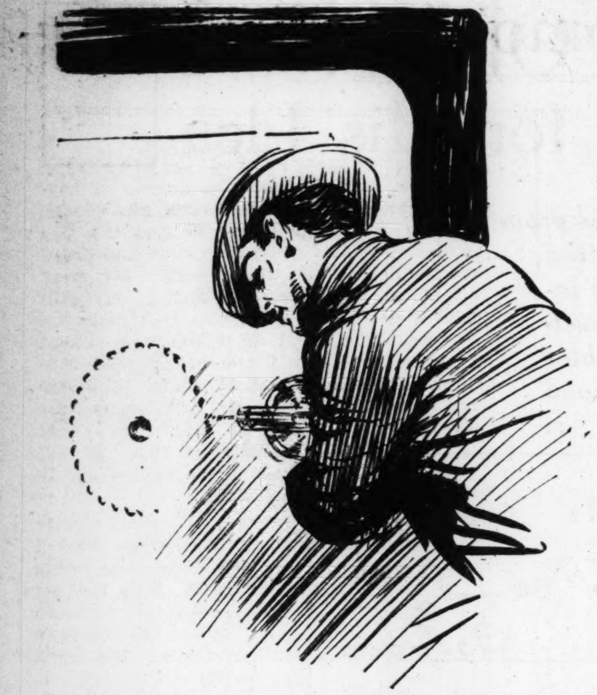
Thousands of men have struggled like this with an injured tire, but Perlman was the only one who coined his tire troubles into millions.



The thief first set a screw-bolt in the steel door and then drilled 32 holes in a circle around it.

How a Child's Prattle Solved the Mystery of $575,000 of Stolen Revenue Stamps

Her name was Evelyn and her age was five, so the ice cream soda, the candy, the picture show, the automobile ride and the companionableness of the jolly big detective led her to tell her correct name and lead the officers to where the booty had been concealed—A new story of the United States Secret Service :: :: ::

"IT is an old saying I learned in my youth," runs an ancient jingle, "that fools and children speak the truth." It is a far cry from the old jingle to little Evelyn Zeck, aged 5, of Chicago, and yet it was because Evelyn bore out the truth of the last part of the observation that United States Secret Service officers were able to solve the great St. Paul stamp mystery and recover more than half a million dollars' worth of stolen revenue stamps.

The robbery of the big safe in the Internal Revenue office in St. Paul on the night of Jan. 5 last, was a neat, workmanlike job. All the police and detectives agreed that it had been done by an expert. The vault was closed by inner and outer steel doors, the latter fastened by an excellent lock. It was necessary to break through a barrier of steel before the lock could even be attacked.

The thief had first drilled a hole through the steel outer door and "threaded" it for the insertion of a screw-bolt. In the head of the screw-bolt was an eye. In a circle around it 32 other holes were bored. Then a "come-along" was inserted in the eye, the proper pressure exerted and the section of steel within the ring of holes was neatly lifted out. All that was then necessary was to put a slight charge of nitroglycerin into the lock of the inner door, touch it off and the vault was open.

The thief then helped himself to $575,000 worth of stamps of face values ranging from 1 cent to $5000 and took along some $3000 in cash for good measure.

Clearly, thought the Secret Service men, it was the work of an old-timer. They canvassed the possibilities and finally came to the conclusion that it "looked like Eddie Leonard."

Edward Leonard or Lutowsky is known to the police as a "big-job" man. His operations several times had brought him into trouble with the authorities, and there had been abundant opportunity to study his methods. It is a singular thing, often declared by detectives, that different criminals have different ways of doing their work and an experienced hand often leaves his sign manual on a job simply by the way he goes about it.

Stephen Connell of the St. Louis Secret Service office and Charles W. Sommers drew the assignment to unravel this case and they lost no time getting to work. In a short time they learned from a reliable source that Leonard had recently been in St. Paul. They learned also that a woman, the wife of a man who had been suspected frequently but never convicted of being a "fence" for stolen stamps, was in the city.

This woman's movements were carefully observed. When she ostentatiously departed for her home in Chicago several days later, a secret service man unostentatiously followed her. She was under surveillance until finally she was seen talking to Leonard. The officers left her trail and gave their attention the next few days to Leonard.

Although they watched his house on Kedzie avenue for some time, they found nothing tangible to confirm their suspicions. As a last resort, they determined upon an arrest, although as yet they had little more to go on than surmise and deduction.

Leonard was at home with his wife when the officers appeared. He took the news of the arrest calmly, denied that he knew anything about the St. Paul job and invited the officers to look around and see if they could find anything.

In another department of their investigation, the detectives had hit upon the mystery of two new trunks. These trunks had been bought in St. Paul by a rather mysterious person on the day after the robbery. They had been traced to a certain house, but there they disappeared. Connell and Summers had long reached the conclusion that they were used to carry off the stolen stamps and naturally they hoped to find them in the Kedzie avenue house.

They were disappointed. They not only could not find the trunks, but they couldn't find a single stamp. They searched the place from cellar to roof, but the hunt was futile. Leonard calmly looked on while his wife occasionally said a few sarcastic things in reproof of what she called the "intrusion" of the officers.

The detectives were on the point of giving up in despair. It takes considerably more than suspicion to warrant the prosecution of a man in the United States courts, and as yet that was about all they had—suspicion, too, based upon the slenderest chain of circumstances which might be explained away.

Now, there happened to be a third person in the Leonard home who had watched every movement of the officers with no small wonder and excitement. This was a bright-eyed little girl. She seemed to have taken an immediate fancy to Connell. Children always have a faculty for finding out almost instinctively those who are fond of children and the secret service man is one of that kind. He had "jollied" her along in a way he has and when, finally, he seemed to have done all the work he could, he began talking to her.

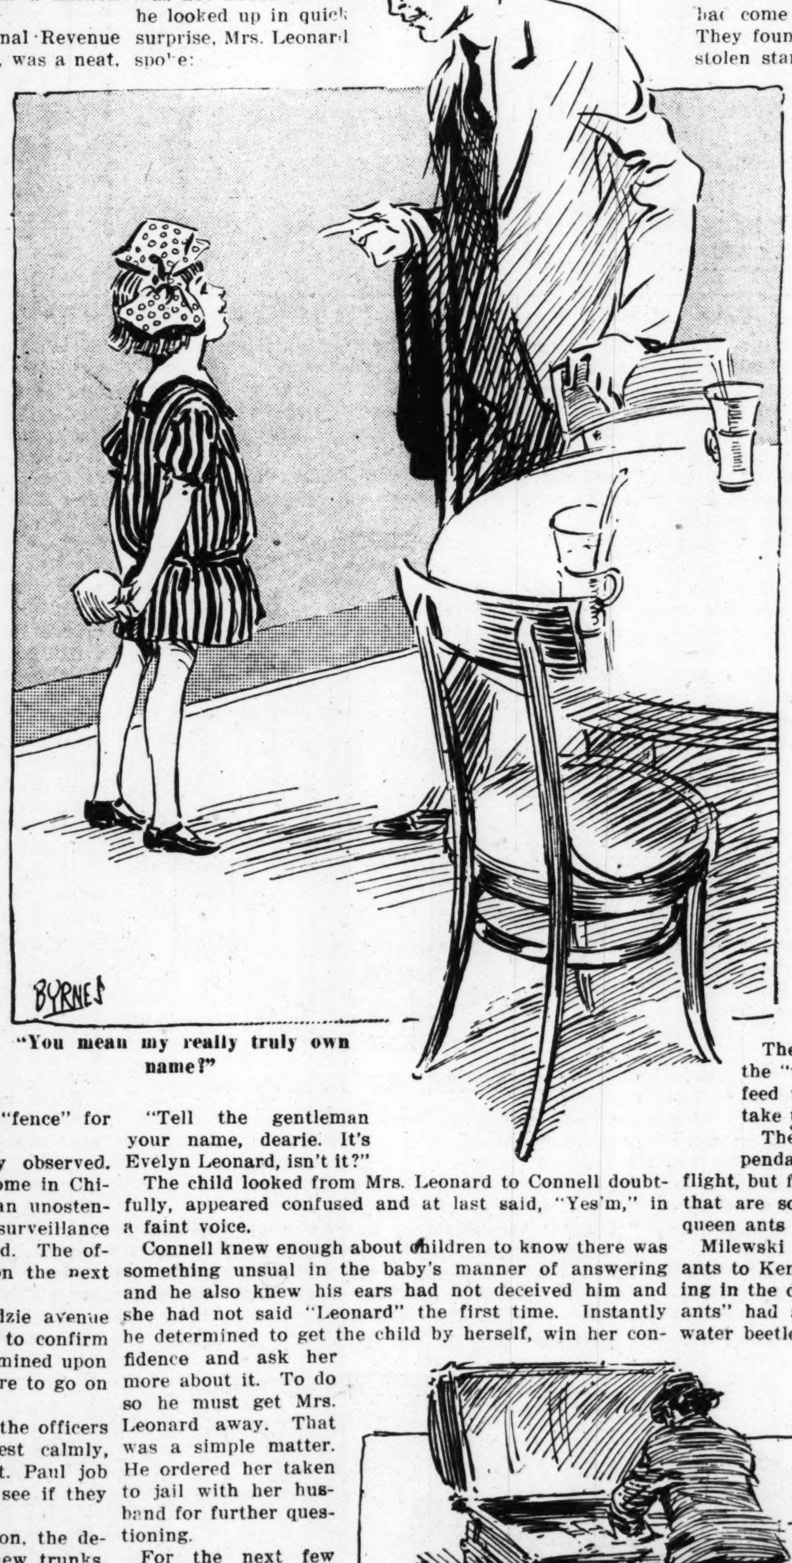
"What's your name, little Bright-Eyes?" he asked her playfully.

"My name's Ev'lyn," she answered.

"My, what a pretty name! But that isn't all of it. What's the rest of it?"

"Ev'lyn ———."

The detective could not make out the pronunciation of the last name, but it certainly was not Leonard. As he looked up in quick surprise, Mrs. Leonard spoke:



"You mean my really truly own name?"

"Tell the gentleman your name, dearie. It's Evelyn Leonard, isn't it?"

The child looked from Mrs. Leonard to Connell doubtfully, appeared confused and at last said, "Yes'm," in a faint voice.

Connell knew enough about children to know there was something unsual in the baby's manner of answering and he also knew his ears had not deceived him and she had not said "Leonard" the first time. Instantly he determined to get the child by herself, win her confidence and ask her more about it. To do so he must get Mrs. Leonard away. That was a simple matter. He ordered her taken to jail with her husband for further questioning.

For the next few hours he devoted himself to Evelyn. Never had a little girl found such a delightful cavalier. First, there was candy and then there was ice cream soda and then there was a picture show and then there was an automobile ride. Evelyn was enchanted. When she least expected it, the detective asked:

"Evelyn, what is your last name?"

"My really and truly own?"

"Yes; the one your papa and mamma call you by."

"It's Zeck. Evelyn Zeck. My daddy's a street car conductor."

"Why, I thought Mrs. Leonard was your mother?"

"Oh, no. She's just my aunt. I been staying to her house for ever so long. More'n a week."

"Well, where does your papa live?"

"He lives over on Lincoln street."

"Do you know what number?"

But Evelyn didn't know the number. She thought she could recognize the house, though, so the automobile drove to Lincoln street and drove up and down that thoroughfare. Finally Evelyn pointed out a house. She said she wasn't sure, because her parents had been living there only a short time, but she thought it was the right one.

Connell and Sommers took the little girl and went to the front door. A woman answered the bell.

"Hello, mamma!" cried Evelyn. "I come back in an aut-mobile!"

Without ceremony the detectives pushed their way into the house. They told Mrs. Zeck briefly what they had come for. Here they did not have to search long. They found the two new trunks. In them were all the stolen stamps, except about $3000 worth, which, it was learned afterwards, had been sold in small quantities.

Mr. and Mrs. Zeck and another man and his wife were arrested and have been held with the Leonards for the Federal grand jury.

Little Evelyn, happily, is still unconscious of the part she played in the affair. She still remembers the big, good-natured fellow who took her auto riding and to the picture show and bought her such good ice cream soda and candy.

Water-Building Ants

ANTS notoriously shun the water. Recently, however, according to "La Nature," A. Milewski, the famous ant investigator, has found a species of ants which not only seek swampy habitats, but actually build in water.

In Lyngbysee, Denmark, he first observed them, and upon transplanting them to other localities acertained their predilection for water "hills."

His attention was first attacted by what appeared to be a white scum in a pond. Upon examination he ascertained that the white agglomerations were in reality ant hills swarming with colorless' ants, which, when disturbed in their lair rapidly spread out over the water in schools and seek shelter in neighboring "hills."

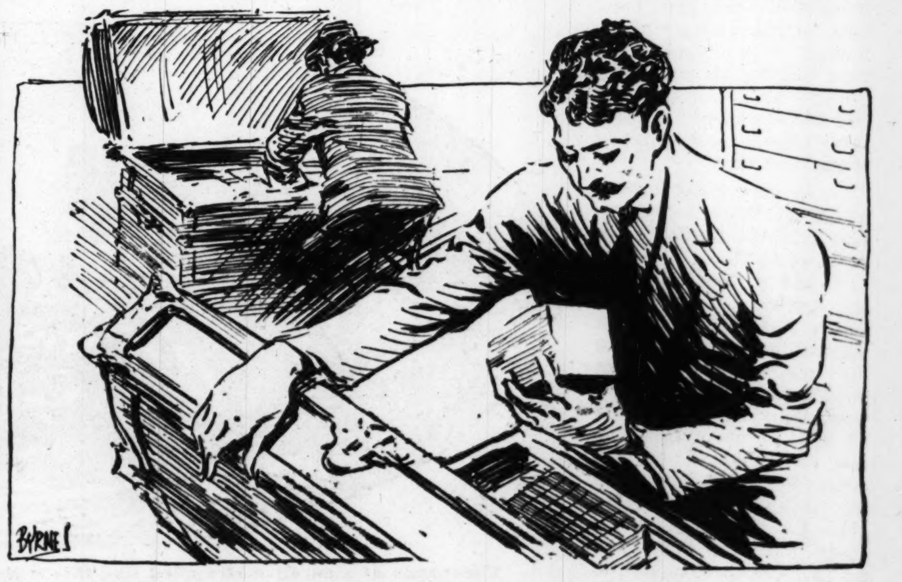
The nests are constructed on leaves and roots floating in the water. Over the leaves a thin, silk-like tissue is deposited, on which spider-web-like apartments are constructed, all the structure being colorless.

They are saccharivorous, and their sense of sugar is remarkable. A cupful of sugar placed 50 yards away from the pond was carried to the water hills in less than a day, though it took the ants two hours to make the round trip.

The care of their young devolves entirely upon the "workers," who turn them out of the nest and feed them, carry them to a sunny spot and later take them back into the nests.

These white ants are fitted with wing-like appendages, which do not seem to serve them for flight, but for swimming. And it is not only the neuters that are so fitted out but even the workers and the queen ants retain these fins all the year around.

Milewski has transplanted a colony of these singular ants to Kensington Gardens, where they now are thriving in the central basin. In the beginning the "warrior ants" had an "anxious time," owing to the numerous water beetles, but bettles and even fish avoid the ants.

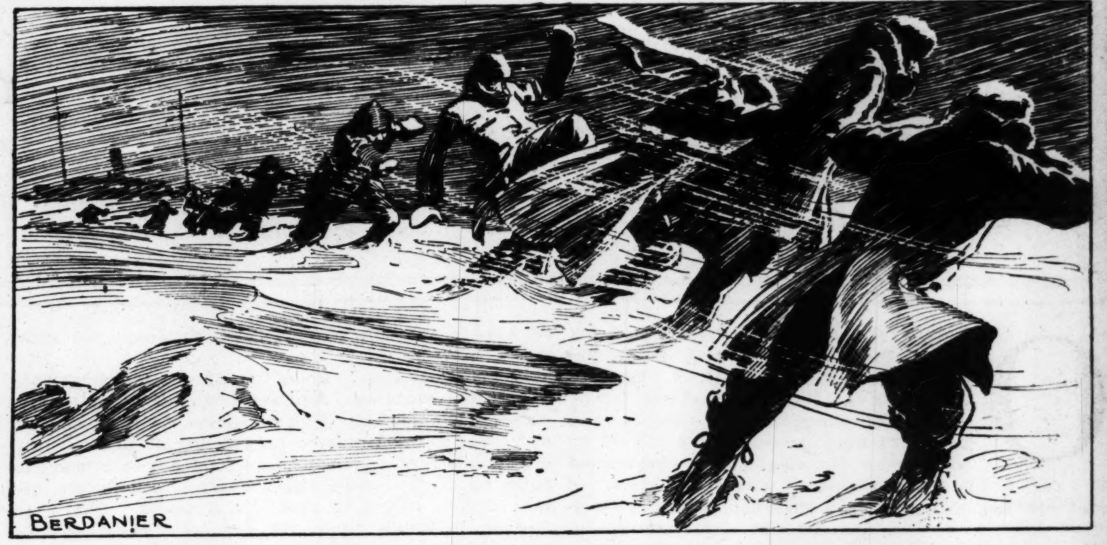


There were the two new trunks and in them were the stolen stamps.

Two Stirring Tragedies of the Sea

Madness and Death in Frozen North ☘ Striken Fever Ship in Southern Doldrums

The steamer Suffolk was caught in the ice of the White Sea and only three of her 28 men survived, the captain having killed himself—The schooner Tifton was held in torrid calms with all her crew ill and only captain, cook and cabin boy able to work the ship when a squall came



"A terrific blizzard swooped down upon them. For hours they groped through blinding snow."

THE news-reading world has become so accustomed to the tragedies of war in the last two years that it requires some extraordinary tale of human suffering to arouse much popular emotion. Curiously enough, two such tales became known within a day or two of each other recently and neither had any direct bearing upon the war.

The British steamer Suffolk, chugged along through the White Sea late last autumn with a cargo of supplies for the Russian port of Archangel. Her crew of 27 was satisfied with the progress she was making, feeling sure it would be the last voyage to the Far North for the year, as the ice comes early in those waters. Some of the old hands even predicted a long winter in idleness at Archangel.

The vessel's commander was plainly worried. He drove her ahead at full speed, believing he could make port before the freeze, but at the same time he recognized there was no small element of danger in the situation.

Already at night thin coats of ice had been forming on the surface of the water, but the Suffolk, sturdy old hooker as she was, plowed through it. Each day, however, the coat was getting thicker and thicker and the ship's progress became slower and slower. At last she could advance no farther. She came to a dead stop.

Within a week the cold became deadly. Blizzards swept across the icy wastes, driving a fine, gritty snow into every chink and cranny. The Suffolk was ill prepared for such a siege. She had little more than enough fuel to take her to Archangel and, in a short while, this became almost exhausted. Then food ran out.

Weeks of horror followed in the ice-locked ship. By his charts, the captain knew they were only 80 miles from land, but they might as well be 8000. Even if they could reach the barren coast it was difficult to see wherein they would be much better off than where they were.

Then came despair and death. Starvation and exposure brought disease. One by one the men began dropping off, until there were only 11, including the captain. The strain was beginning to tell on the captain and at times he was delirious. In his sick imagination he fancied that he was to blame for the whole disaster and that the dead and dying were reproaching him. One day he sat long in his cabin; the cook has just told him the last of the food was giving out. He closed and locked the door.

A few seconds later the men heard a shot. When they broke into the cabin they found the captain dying, a revolver clutched in his hand.

The survivors talked over the situation. As they looked at the stiffening form of their late commander, the thought probably came to all of them that, unless something happened, they would soon be as he.

One of the boldest proposed that they strike out across the ice and try to reach land. Another told them it was madness to try to cross 80 miles of ice, without food and sleds, in the depth of an arctic winter, but he was silenced when the first man retorted that for his part he had rather die trying to do something than to wait for death in the accursed ship.

Gathering what few supplies they could find and working out a crude plan to keep together, the 10 began their terrible journey. At the very first test, their whole plan went awry. A terrific blizzard swooped down upon them. For hours they groped through blinding snow or sought caches in the ice where they might be shielded a little from the storm's fury. Inevitably they became scattered. Seven of them have never been heard of since.

Three managed to stick together. Through endless hours of suffering they floundered on, sometimes despairing, yet struggling instinctively. They lost all reckoning of where they were going. And one day they heard an English hail.

A supply crew from another British vessel had caught sight of them. It was pure chance, of course, but it was the only time fortune had smiled on any member of the devoted band.

Of the three, a Russian Finn was in the best condition and was able to tell something of their experiences. The other two were sent to a hospital, where their recovery was considered doubtful.

And now for the other story:

One day late in April a four-masted schooner approached New York harbor. Nautical eyes could tell that she was American built, but there was something about her that was not American. She looked dirty and there was no Yankee smartness in the way she was handled. To the amazement of observers, when she finally came to anchorage outside Quarantine and her sails let fall, they were not properly stowed away by the crew, but were permitted to lie where they had fallen.

It did not take long to ascertain the trouble. Quarantine surgeons found practically all of its personnel of nine suffering from beri-beri and black water fever. The mate collapsed when undergoing examination. The captain said that one side of his body was insensible to feeling. The cook alone seemed to be in anything like fair health. The rest of the crew, most of them Germans, were too feeble to lift a hand. The wheel had been lashed because there was no steersman strong enough to take a continuous trick.

The vessel was the schooner Tifton, Capt. Emil Carston, and she had come from Monrovia, Africa, with a cargo of produce and ivory. She had been just 83 days on the voyage. She had been delayed by calms and blown off her course by storms.

"If we had been out another week," the skipper said, "the whole bunch would have gone to hell."

"But then," he added, after he had swallowed a milk punch, which was the first thing he demanded of civilization, "that was where most of the crew belonged."

The part of the crew he referred to were Germans. The Germans were the first to get sick and they had got on the captain's nerves. Besides, he is passionately pro-ally in sympathy.

In the opinion of others on board, the men would not have gone to the nether regions within another week, for the simple reason, as they expressed it, they were already there.

The Tifton reached Monrovia in October and leisurely picked up its cargo for the return passage. It became necessary to recruit a crew and Capt. Carston found several German refugee seamen, chief of whom was Carl Schneider, who had been a supercargo for a German line before the war. The Germans were anxious to get out of Africa and hoped the leisurely American ship would drift along unsuspected by British warships. They were right in both surmises. No warship hailed her and, as for leisurely drifting—nearly three months of it!

Capt. Carston had hoped to take on plenty of green stuff in Liberia, but found he was unable to do so. The country was parched by drouth and all he could get was some potato tops. He got fresh water from the Cess River, but he was suspicious of that, for there was considerable black water fever about and Schneider had been dosing his companions liberally with quinine as a preventive.

The Tifton started her return voyage with its captain worried. He called to the cook, Fred Bredin, and told him to do the best he could to make the salt pork, the peas, the flour into palatable dishes. Bredin, a Scandinavian who had had much experience on Yankee ships and who was destined to prove the hero of the voyage, replied naively that he would do his "level damndest."

It so happened that Bredin was the first to become ill. This was fortunate, because he was also the first to become convalescent. Indeed, it was not in Bredin's breed to take to his bed as long as he could "navigate," as they term it. If he had been of weaker stuff, it is probable that neither the Tifton nor any of her crew would ever have come to port again.

His illness was a strange one. His limbs began to swell and he complained of general numbness. Carston diagnosed it as scurvy and dosed him with lime water until he howled that his hold was flooded and he wouldn't take any more. Schneider diagnosed it as fever and dosed him with quinine until his head roared and he muttered dire threats against the next Teutonic swab who mentioned quinine to him.

One by one, members of the crew were seized with the same malady. They took to their hammocks and were useless for the rest of the voyage. To make matters worse, the ship entered the doldrums and, as in the tale of the Ancient Mariner:

> Down dropt the breeze, the sail dropt down—
>   'Twas sad as sad could be;
> And we didn't speak only to break
>   The silence of the sea.
> All in a hot and copper sky
>   The bloody sun, at noon,
> Right above the mast did stand,
>   No bigger than the moon.
> Day after day, day after day,
>   We stuck—nor breath nor motion;
> As idle as a painted ship
>   Upon a painted ocean.

As a crowning calamity the captain himself was stricken with the strange malady. His arms and feet began to swell. He lost a sense of feeling on one side, or, as he quaintly put it, "the port side of my head was dead and I got no comfort from scratching it, but I could scratch the starboard side."

Then at last a breeze sprang up, but there was nobody to navigate the vessel. The only thing to be done was to set a course, lash the helm and trust to Providence. In this way the vessel drifted along until it was opposite Cape Hatteras, and here a squall struck it.

"It came up quick and unexpected," Capt. Carston relates the incident. "We had too much sail on and there was nobody but the cook and me to take it in. It hit us so suddenly that it whipped the mainsail from the bolt ropes and carried the flying jib down to leeward like a little Zeppelin. Then the cook and me and the cabin boy, who is a handy landlubber, got her up in the wind and lashed the wheel and took in as much sail as we could. Down in the forecastle the remainder of the crew seemed dead or dopy. We were driven back southeast'ard about 200 miles."

The captain's illness compelled him to return to his cabin, but he left Bredin on deck with instruction to call him whenever he saw a light or the wind changed.

"I was pretty nearly all in," says the captain, "and they called me about every five minutes, but I must say that cook was a handy man. Talk about having able seamen under the new shipping law! I'd rather have a handful of cooks like him in a good blow than all the seamen I ever saw."

The Tifton's crew were too sick to cheer when they finally came in sight of harbor. A tug picked her up off the Scotland Light vessel, but the canny captain was too wise to let the tug crew know his actual condition for fear of an exorbitant demand for towage.

The doctors told Capt. Carston that the strange disease which had laid up his sailors was beri-beri, which is caused by deficiency of nutrition.

Sixth of a series of short stories by the modern master of brief fiction ❧ Complete in this issue

ONE day Tripp came in and leaned on my table. Tripp was something in the mechanical department—I think he had something to do with the pictures, for he smelled of photographers' supplies, and his hands were always stained and cut up with acids. He was about 25 and looked 40. Half of his face was covered with short, curly, red whiskers that looked like a doormat with the "welcome" left off. He was pale and unhealthy and miserable and fawning, and an assiduous borrower of sums ranging from 25 cents to a dollar. One dollar was his limit. He knew the extent of his credit as well as the Chemical National Bank knows the amount of H2O that collateral will show on analysis. When he sat on my table he held one hand with the other to keep both from shaking. Whisky. He had a spurious air of lightness and bravado about him that deceived no one, but was useful in his borrowing because it was so pitifully and perceptibly assumed.

This day I had coaxed from the cashier five shining silver dollars as a grumbling advance on a story that the Sunday editor had reluctantly accepted. So if I was not feeling at peace with the world, at least an armistice had been declared; and I was beginning with ardor to write a description of the Brooklyn bridge by moonlight.

"Well, Tripp," said I, looking up at him rather impatiently, "how goes it?" He was looking today more miserable, more cringing and haggard and downtrodden than I had ever seen him. He was at that stage of misery where he drew your pity so fully that you longed to kick him.

"Have you got a dollar?" asked Tripp, with his most fawning look and his dog like eyes that blinked in the narrow space between his high-growing matted beard and low-growing matted hair.

"I have," said I; and again I said: "I have," more loudly and inhospitably, "and four besides. And I had hard work corkscrewing them out of old Atkinson, I can tell you. And I drew them," I continued, "to meet a want—a hiatus—a demand—a need—an exigency—a requirement of exactly $5."

I was driven to emphasis by the premonition that I was to lose one of the dollars on the spot.

"I don't want to borrow any," said Tripp, and I breathed again. "I thought you'd like to get put onto a good story," he went on. "I've got a rattling fine one for you. You ought to make it run a column at least. It'll make a dandy if you work it up right. It'll probably cost you a dollar or two to get the stuff. I don't want anything out of it myself."

I became placated. The proposition showed that Tripp appreciated past favors, although he did not return them. If he had been wise enough to strike me for a quarter then he would have got it.

"What is the story?" I asked, poising my pencil with a finely calculated editorial air.

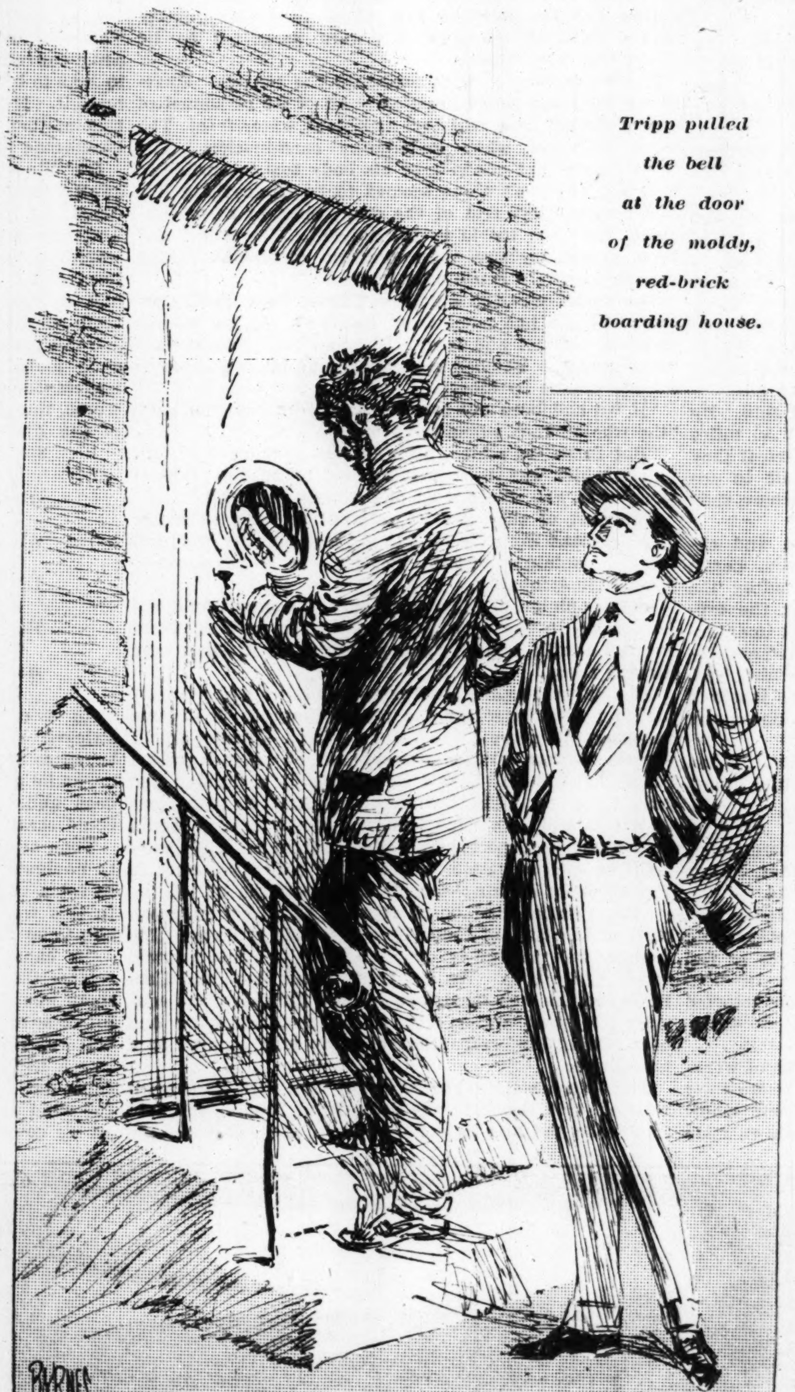
"I'll tell you," said Tripp. "It's a girl. A beauty. One of the howlingest Amsden's Junes you ever saw. Rosebuds covered with dew—violets in their mossy bed—and truck like that. She's lived on Long Island 20 years and never saw New York City before. I ran against her on Thirty-fourth street. She's just got in on the East River ferry. I tell you, she's a beauty that would take the hydrogen out of all the peroxides in the world. She stopped me on the street and asked me where she could find George Brown. Asked me where she could find George Brown in New York City! What do you think of that?

"I talked to her, and found that she was going to marry a young farmer named Dodd—Hiram Dodd—next week. But it seems that George Brown still holds the championship in her youthful fancy. George had greased his cowhide boots some years ago and came to the city to make his fortune. But he forgot to remember to show up again at Greenburg, and Hiram got in as second-best choice. But when it comes to the scratch, Ada—her name's Ada Lowery—saddles a nag and rides eight miles to the railroad station and catches the 6:45 a. m. train for the city. Looking for George, you know—you understand about women—George wasn't there, so she wanted him.

"Well, you know, I couldn't leave her loose in Wolftown-on-the-Hudson. I suppose she thought the first person she inquired of would say: 'George Brown? Why, yes—lemme see—he's a short man with light blue eyes, ain't he? Oh, yes—you'll find George on One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, right next to the grocery. He's bill clerk in a saddle and harness store." That's about how innocent and beautiful she is. You know those little Long Island water-front villages like Greenburg—a couple of duck farms for sport, and clams and about nine summer visitors for industries. That's the kind of a place she comes from. But say—you ought to see her!

"What could I do? I don't know what money looks like in the morning. And she'd paid her last cent of pocket money for her railroad ticket except a quarter, which she had squandered on gumdrops. She was eating them out of a paper bag. I took her to a boarding house on Thirty-second street where I used to live, and hocked her. She's in soak for a dollar. That's old Mother McGinnis' price per day. I'll show you the house."

"What words are these, Tripp?" said I. "I thought you said you had a story. Every ferryboat that crosses East River brings or takes away girls from Long Island."



Tripp pulled the bell at the door of the moldy, red-brick boarding house.

The premature lines on Tripp's face grew deeper. He frowned seriously from his tangle of hair. He separated his hands and emphasized his answer with one shaking forefinger.

"Can't you see," he said, "what a rattling fine story it would make? You could do it fine. All about the romance, you know, and describe the girl, and put a lot of stuff in about true love, and sling in a few stickfuls of funny business—joshing the Long Islanders about being green, and, well—you know how to do it. You ought to get $15 out of it, anyhow. And it'll cost you only about $4. You'll make a clear profit of $11."

"How will it cost me $4?" I asked suspiciously.

"One dollar to Mrs. McGinnis," Tripp answered, promptly, "and $2 to pay the girl's fare back home."

"And the fourth dimension?" I inquired, making a rapid mental calculation.

"One dollar to me," said Tripp. "For whisky. Are you on?"

I smiled enigmatically and spread my elbows as if to begin writing again. But this grim, abject, specious, subservient, burr-like wreck of a man would not be shaken off. His forehead suddenly became shiningly moist.

"Don't you see," he said, with a sort of desperate calmness, "that this girl has got to be sent home today—not tonight nor tomorrow, but today? I can't do anything for her. You know, I'm the janitor and corresponding secretary of the Down-and-Out Club. I thought you could make a newspaper story out of it and win out a piece of money on general results. But, anyhow, don't you see that she's got to get back home before night?"

And then I began to feel that dull, leaden, soul-depressing sensation known as the sense of duty. Why should that sense fall upon one as a weight and a burden? I knew that I was doomed that day to give up the bulk of my store of hard-wrung coin to the relief of this Ada Lowery. But I swore to myself that Tripp's whisky dollar would not be forthcoming. He might play knight-errant at my expense, but he would indulge in no wassail afterward, commemorating my weakness and gullibility. In a kind of chilly anger I put on my coat and hat.

Tripp, submissive, cringing, vainly endeavoring to please, conducted me via the street cars to the human pawnshop of Mother McGinnis. I paid the fares. It seemed that the collodion-scented Don Quixote and the smallest minted coin were strangers.

Tripp pulled the bell at the door of the moldy red-brick boarding house. At its faint tinkle he paled and crouched as a rabbit makes ready to spring away at the sound of a hunting dog. I guessed what a life he had led, terror haunted by the coming footsteps of landladies.

"Give me one of the dollars—quick!" he said.

The door opened six inches. Mother McGinnis stood there with white eyes—they were white, I say—and a yellow face, holding together at her throat with one hand a dingy pink flannel dressing sack. Tripp thrust the dollar through the space without a word, and it brought us entry.

"She's in the parlor," said the McGinnis, turning the back of her sack upon us.

In the dim parlor a girl sat at the cracked marble drops. She was a flawless beauty. Crying had only made her brilliant eyes brighter. When she crunched a gumdrop you thought only of the poetry of motion and envied the senseless confection. Eve at the age of five minutes must have been a ringer for Miss Ada Lowery at 19 or 20. I was introduced and a gumdrop suffered neglect while she conveyed to me a naive interest, such as a puppy dog (a prize winner) might bestow upon a crawling beetle or a frog.

Tripp took his stand by the table with the fingers of one hand spread upon it, as an attorney or a master of ceremonies might have stood. But he looked the master of nothing. His faded coat was buttoned high, as if it sought to be charitable to deficiencies of tie and linen. I thought of a Scotch terrier at the sight of his shifty eyes in the glade between his tangled hair and beard. For one ignoble moment I felt ashamed of having been introduced as his friend in the presence of so much beauty in distress. But evidently Tripp meant to conduct the ceremonies, whatever they might be. I thought I detected in his actions and pose an intention of foisting the situation upon me as material for a newspaper story, in a lingering hope of extracting from me his whisky dollar.

"My friend" (I shuddered), Mr. Chalmers," said Tripp, "will tell you, Miss Lowery, the same that I did. He's a reporter, and he can hand out the talk better than I can. That's why I brought him with me." (Tripp, wasn't it the silver-tongued orator you wanted?) "He's wise to a lot of things, and he'll tell you now what's best to do."

I stood on one foot, as it were, as I sat in my rickety chair.

"Why—er—Miss Lowery," I began, secretly enraged at Tripp's awkward opening, "I am at your service, of course, but—er—as I haven't been apprised of the circumstances of the case, I—er"——

"Oh," said Miss Lowery, beaming for a moment, "it ain't as bad as that—there ain't any circumstances. It's the first time I've ever been in New York except once when I was 5 years old, and I had no idea it was such a big town. And I met Mr.—Mr. Snip on the street and asked him about a friend of mine, and he brought me here and asked me to wait."

"I advise you, Miss Lowery," said Tripp, "to tell Mr. Chalmers all. He's a friend of mine" (I was getting used to it by this time) "and he'll give you the right tip."

"Why, certainly," said Miss Ada, chewing a gumdrop toward me. "There ain't anything to tell except that—well, everything's fixed for me to marry Hiram Dodd next Thursday evening. Hi has got 200 acres of land with a lot of shore front, and one of the best truck farms on the island. But this morning I had my horse saddled up—he's a white horse named Dancer—and I rode

How an Actress Who Would Sooner Die Than Be Fat Lost One Hundred Pounds in Less Than a Year

Amelia Summerville accomplished it by a dietary which she evolved herself; by fencing exercises to reduce the waistline; by walking up and down stairs to reduce the hips; by dancing, and by taking a "don't-worry" attitude about life—Believes in cosmetics

NOBODY loves a fat man or a fat woman, either, reasoned Amelia Summerville, the actress, when she looked in her glass one day and realized that she could delude herself no longer—that she was growing stouter day by day. She felt that she would sooner die than be fat, and besides she knew that a fat actress could never aspire to the parts she wanted to play. So she evolved a system of weight reduction of her own, which she applied with such success that she began to get results within six weeks' time and in less than a year had lost just 100 pounds. "From a fat Mountain Maid" she says, "I emerged a thin Trilby."

What she did, Miss Summerville declares, anyone else can do, and that without impairing one's health. The sole requirements are patience and perseverence and adherence to a few simple rules of physical and mental conduct. She passes on her secrets for the benefit of those who may be in distress, as she was, at the prospect of becoming objectionably obese.

The first symptoms of overfatness, Miss Summerville declares, are drowsiness, heaviness and a desire to sleep. Then, in a little brochure entitled "Why Be Fat?" recently issued by the Frederick A. Stokes company, she goes on to say that among other things she followed five rules of health, which she enumerates as follows:

Be careful of what you eat and how much you eat. Don't overfeed; eat less than you crave rather than more, and never eat until you are distressed. The first effect of loss of weight through dieting, she says, is one of mental exhilaration.

Do not sleep too much; it is not good for the brain. Too little sleep is better than too much.

Take exercise regularly. Walking is possible for everyone, and it is one of the best exercises in the world; after that, swimming; both of these exercises bring every muscle of the body into play and make an keep a figure slender.

Bathe in tepid water—not hot unless so ordered by a physician. Never leave the tub too warm; leave it cold, if possible. Rub briskly with a rough towel to cause circulation.

Clothe yourself comfortably and sensibly. Do not wear tight shoes or tight corsets or tight clothes of any kind. Especially do not tighten the neck in any way, for it impedes circulation.

One of the first essentials to weight reduction is a proper dietary and here is the one which Miss Summerville says she found most efficacious in her case and that of many others who have followed her system. In her book it is placed under the caption, "What You May Eat:"

Fruits: All fresh fruits except bananas, figs and dates. All stewed fruits, not too sweet.

Cereals: Rice, taken as a vegetable, with very little butter; never with cream or sugar.

Eggs: Eggs are nutritious and are not fattening. They may be boiled, scrambled, poached or made into a plain or fruit omelette.

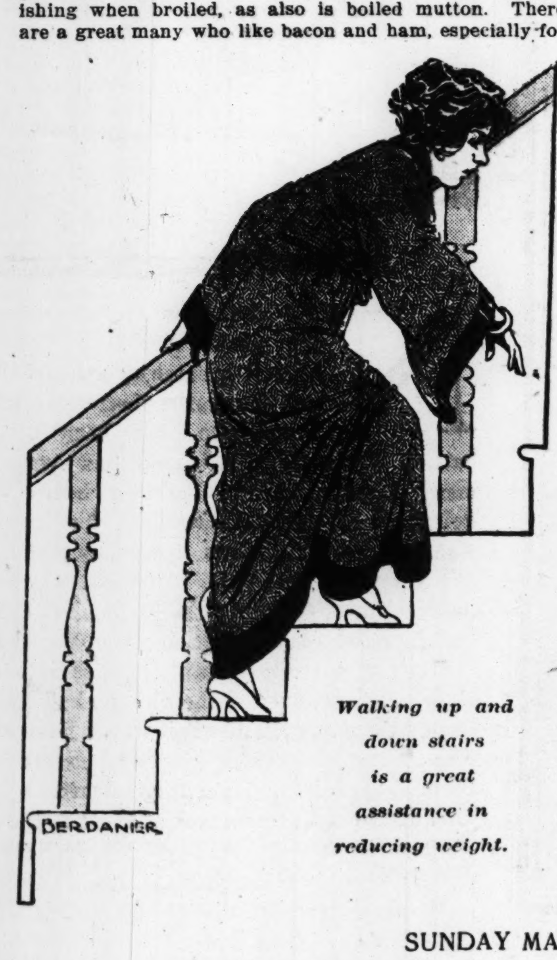
Fish: All fish broiled or boiled—never fried—except salmon and bluefish.

Fowl: All fowl broiled, boiled or roasted, except goose.

Soups: All thin soups, such as bouillon, vegetable, clam broth and consomme; no thick soups.

Entrees: Fruit omelettes, which are most nutritious and palatable. All other entrees should be avoided.

Meats: All meats, broiled, boiled or roasted, except pork and veal. Steaks and chops are particularly nourishing when broiled, as also is boiled mutton. There are a great many who like bacon and ham, especially for breakfast. These may be used, if the excess of fat is removed by broiling.



Walking up and down stairs is a great assistance in reducing weight.

Vegetables: Celery, which is most healthful, either cooked or raw; spinach cooked plain; onion in any style except with cream sauce or fried; string beans, asparagus, kale, cabbage, cauliflower, artichokes, endive, romaine, lettuce.

Avoid peas, lentils, Lima beans, succotash, green corn, squash, beets, carrots, turnips, parsnips, egg plant—in fact, all starchy food of any kind, including macaroni, hominy, etc. No olives.

Salads: All salads with French dressing, very little oil; no mayonnaise.

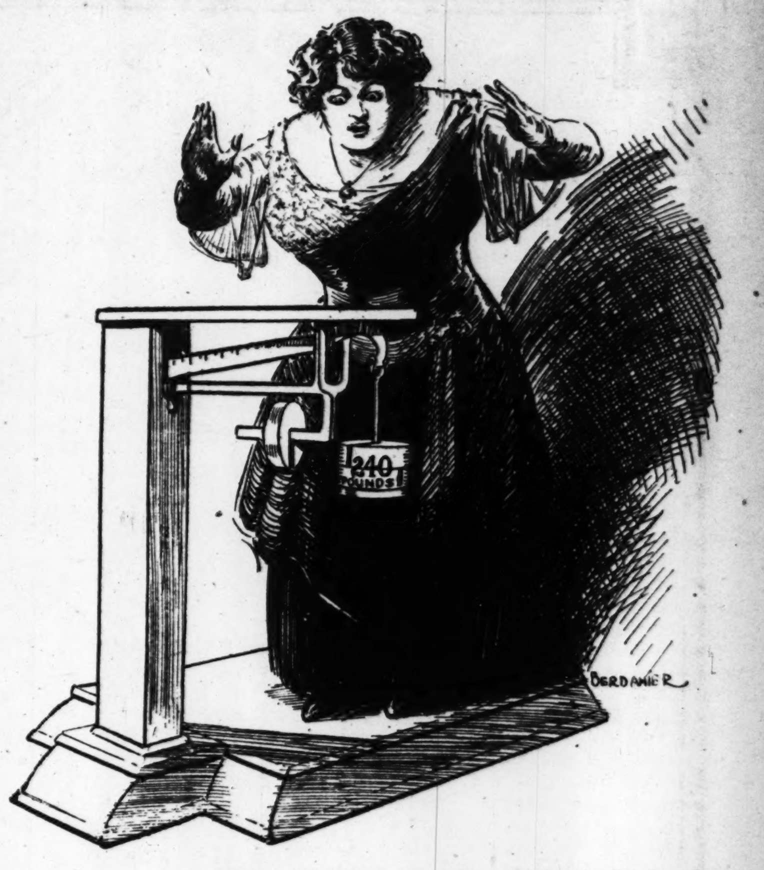
Pastry: All kinds of pastry should be avoided. Substitute an omelette, either fruit or plain, or a fruit salad.

Drinks: Coffee and tea, without sugar or cream. A good naturally sparkling mineral water; cider; lemonade; dry white wines; Rhine wines in moderation.

Chocolate and cocoa should be avoided.

Cheese, nuts and raisins should be avoided.

Women inclined to stoutness are desirous of having a small waist, and this, Miss Summerville says, can best be accomplished by fencing exercises. She says that she went to a fencing master and took a few lessons, afterward practicing daily at home with a walking stick, with the result that in three months, instead of wearing a 29-inch corset she was wearing a 22. Fencing also is good, she says, for expanding the chest and decreasing the size of the hips.



Miss Amelia Summerville after taking off 100 pounds of superfluous weight.

The best method of hip reduction, however, she found, is the simple procedure of walking up and down stairs, especially up. In three months she had reduced her hips six inches by doing this as often and whenever she could. Rolling exercises, she believes, break down the tissues and cause much illness. She cites the case of a woman who recently died suddenly and whose death, autopsy physicians found, was caused by rolling to reduce her weight.

Another great aid to weight reduction is dancing, even the modern ballroom dances being of great assistance, she says, but it is especially true of the nature dancing exemplified by Isadora Duncan, Pavlowa and others of that school.

Then she passes on to the mental phase of her system. Keep your thoughts young and of a high quality, she advises. "Try to be tolerant. Never allow fear, envy, bigotry, selfishness, to enter your thoughts These are the greatest foes of youth, health and beauty." She also declares that one should cultivate enthusiasm for something—golf, football, rowing, amusements—anything that is clean and healthful. In her list of "dont's" are "Don't worry, especially about the petty things of life; don't take yourself too seriously and don't pay too much attention to your ailments."

Miss Summerville believes that the daily use of cosmetics, pure powders, creams, skin foods and skin tonics, by women, is not only not objectionable, but a woman's duty to herself, provided she is interested in appearing at her best and in concealing any facial defects she may have. For the woman with a dry skin she recommends any good skin food, rubbed in thoroughly every night before retiring and says that a good cold cream should be substituted for soap—applied to the washrag the same as soap. The woman with an oily skin, she says, should rub her face well two or thre times daily with a soft, linen cloth and use freely any good hygienic face powder. The best cosmetic for the eyelashes and eyebrows, she says, is ordinary vaseline, applied nightly.

The attainment of a clear complexion, according to Miss Summerville, depends largely upon the diet. Too much meat should not be eaten and pork and veal not at all. Too many cereals also is harmful, but barley and rice are good. Green vegetables, especially spinach, salads and fruits, such as apples, prunes and figs, she declares to be excellent. Eggs should be used sparingly and no hot breads should be eaten, but good custards, rice puddings, nutritious soups and plenty of vegetables will be found to be beneficial, as will also stewed celery, boiled onions and carrots—especially carrots. To conclude, she says that an occasional Turkish bath is a great aid in acquiring a good complexion.

Above all things, the author declares, a proper mental attitude is necessary. Confronted often with the argument that "I belong to a family of fat people; I was born fat; it is hereditary," she replied, "Get rid of that thought quickly. It is dwelling on that wrong thought that gives it importance."

"And remember," she declares in a concluding chapter of the book, "no one can lose flesh in a day; it takes heroic measures. Patience and perseverance are necessary, but your heroism will show results. Weigh yourself every week—not every day—and when you have gained the desired weight try to lose a few pounds more, then eat naturally and moderately. If you discover that you are gaining flesh, return to your dieting system. Above and beyond all things DON'T WORRY. In connection with proper dieting practice hopefulness, alertness, cheerfulness and activity. Seek the society of the young; try to take their point of view; get their mental attitude toward life and just don't grow old."

For the person with a flat chest, Miss Summerville recommends simple breathing exercises. "Go to the window on arising in the morning," she says, "open it at the bottom, throw the shoulders well back and inhale through the mouth, breathing deeply and expanding. Then exhale through the nose. Do this with about ten breaths. These inhalations of air need not be confined to the morning; they may be practised any time whenever there is pure, fresh air. Dancing and waving the arms about over the head and throwing them back, touching the hands behind you, is a splendid exercise."

Dress, Miss Summerville declares, has a great deal to do with one's health. She tells of the case of a woman who had one hip much larger than the other and laced herself so tightly to conceal this defect that she was soon under a doctor's care. She changed to a different kind of corset and a loose-fitting dress, with the result that she was more pleasing to look upon, enjoyed greater comfort and was happy in knowing that her defect was concealed.

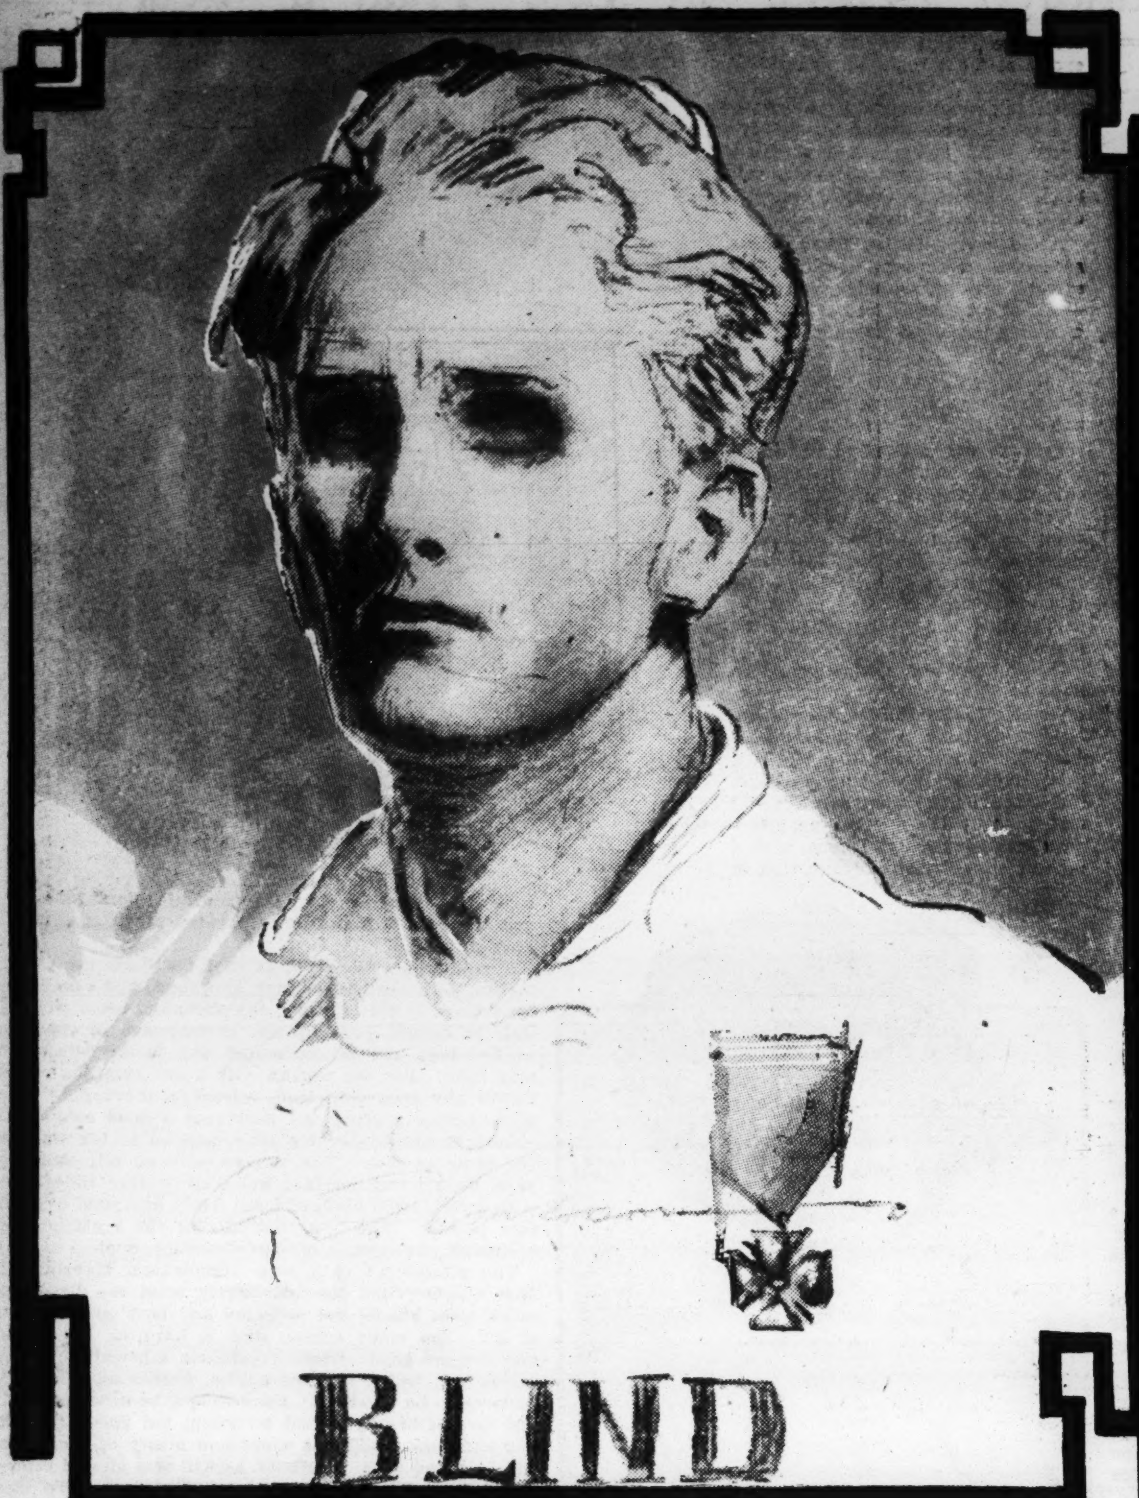
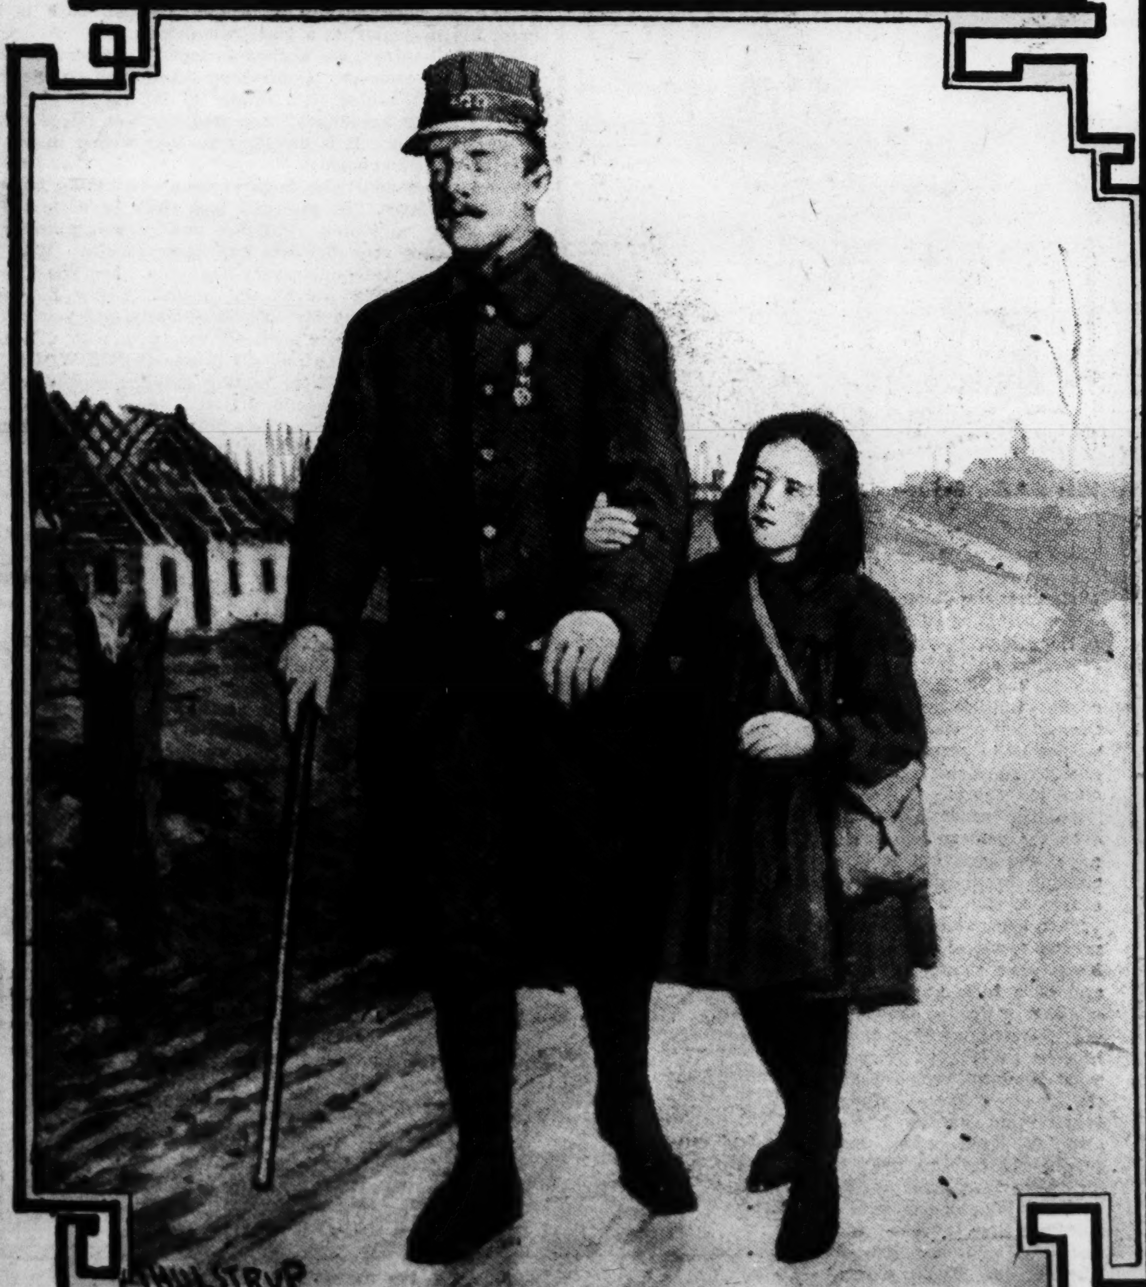
New York City. Five noted artists, Charles Dana Gibson, Emil Fuchs, F. C. Yohn, Thure de Thalstrup and H. A. Ogden have contributed drawings which are on exhibition at the headquarters. Their pictures are reproduced photographically on this page.

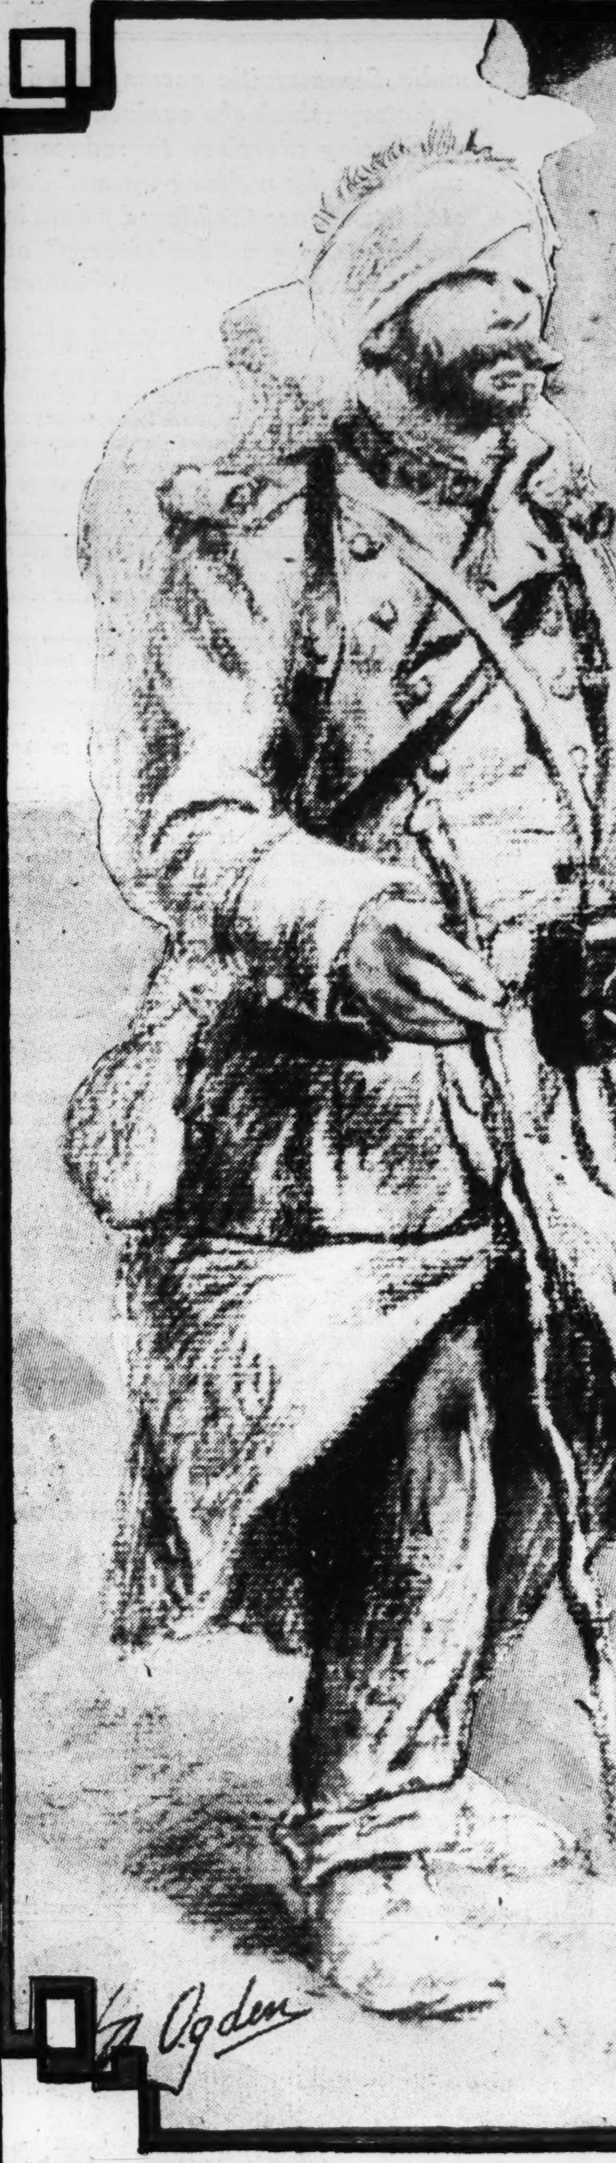
Each of the artists in his own way has caught the pathos of his subject. Gibson's appealing picture of a sightless youth in khaki, Yohn's dramatic sketch of a man stricken sightless on the battlefield, and the other drawings showing the dependent helplessness of the wounded all tell the same story. The cry for help to assist these unfortunates to a better chance in the world after the war is meeting a generous response.

No less touching are some of the stories brought from the front, as that of the priest, blinded while administering the last sacrament to a dying soldier, who thanked God that his life was spared and prayed that his country might be protected as he had been and who wore pinned to his habit three decorations for heroism.

Five Famed Artists Depict the Pathos







NONE of the individual tragedies of the great European war have stirred greater sympathy throughout the world than those in which brave men have been blinded in battle. Yet no war, it is said, has ever made so many blind. Bullets, bursting bombs, gravel, debris of all sorts thrown into the face, shock, flames from explosions are among the causes. Many bullets strike the forehead, traverse the head without touching the brain, but cut or affect by subsequent infection the optic nerve.

Many of these men have families at home and their pensions, even if the nations had the money to pay them now, in all cases would be inadequate. Philanthropic persons in all countries have formed organizations looking toward their relief. One of the most important of these is the British-French-Belgian Permanent Blind Relief War Fund for soldiers and sailors.

Headquarters for the receipt of donations in America have been opened at 590 Fifth avenue, ARE you trying to anticipate Detective Juve in the solution of this baffling mystery? Among other things he has these points to remember. Etienne Rambert chose a slow train from Paris in preference to an express train leaving five minutes earlier on the next track. Charles Rambert knew the Marquise de Langrune the night of her death had lottery tickets in her desk. Did anyone else know it? A trace of blood was found in Charles Rambert's room, and between the chateau and the railroad a fragment torn from a large map of the district. The door of the Marquise's bedroom was not forced, showing she opened it to someone she knew and did not fear. Someone jumped from a window in the chateau during the night. Yet all the occupants of it are accounted for.

Criminal Investigation Department.

Synopsis of Preceding Two Installments of "FANTOMAS."

AT the chateau of Beaulieu, distant some hours' railway journey from Paris, the Marquise de Langrune, an elderly lady of fortune has been brutally and mysteriously murdered during the night after a dinner party. Her guests were: President Bonnet, a retired magistrate; Abbe Sicot, the local priest; the Baronne Vibray, a wealthy young widow; Mlle. Therese Auvernois, the Marquise's granddaughter; and Charles Rambert, aged eighteen, son of M. Etienne Rambert. The last-named, a prosperous merchant of sixty, just returned from abroad, had been invited to Beaulieu as an old friend of the Marquise de Langrune, and arrived there the morning after the tragedy.

Inspector Juve, the famous Paris detective, has taken up the case, in co-operation with M. de Presles, the examining magistrate. Such clues as the murderer left are vague and baffling in the extreme. The Marquise had no known enemies and there were no signs of robbery. The steward Dollon has an alibi, and the two old women servants are exempt from suspicion.

The elder Rambert, in a dramatic scene immediately on his arrival at the chateau, reveals an insanity taint in the mother of his son Charles, whom he privately accuses of the crime, notwithstanding the young man's passionate protest of innocence. Then, for a moment, suspicion strangely veers toward Mlle. Therese.

"FANTOMAS!" is the dread name that now arises in every one's thoughts, as inspector Juve is suddenly called back to Paris to investigate the disappearance of Lord Beltham. Juve's first discovery is a ghastly one—that of a corpse packed in a trunk about to be shipped from the apartments of a certain elusive "Monsieur Gurn."

THE corpse, about which there was nothing especially grewsome or repellent, was the body of a man of about 50 years of age, with a brick-red complexion and a lofty brow, its height increased by baldness. Long, fair mustaches drooped from the upper lip almost to the top of the chest. The unfortunate creature was doubled up in the trunk, with knees bent and head forced down by the weight of the lid. The body, dressed with a certain fastidiousness, was obviously that of a man of fashion and distinction; there was no wound to be seen. The face suggested a victim taken by surprise in the full vigor of life and killed suddenly, not subjected to the anguish of a fight for life or to any slow agony.

Juve half turned to the concierge.

"When did you see M. Gurn last? Exactly, please; it is important."

Mme. Doulenques made an effort to collect her scattered wits.

"Three weeks ago, sir. No one has been here since, I will swear."

Juve made a sign to the gendarme, who understood, and felt the body carefully.

"Quite stiff and hard, sir," he said; "yet there is no odor. Perhaps the cold"——

Juve showed his subordinate a small yellowish stain just at the opening of the collar, close to the Adam's apple.

Juve took the corpse under the armpits and raised it carefully to examine it, but anxious not to alter its position. On the nape of the neck was a large stain of blood like a black wen and as big as a five-shilling piece, just above the last vertebra of the spinal column.

"That's the explanation," the detective murmured, and with quick hands searched the coat pockets and found the watch in its proper place. Another pocket was full of small change, with a few louis. But Juve looked in vain for the pocketbook containing some means of identification.

The inspector got up and questioned the concierge.

"Did M. Gurn have a motor car?"

"No, sir. Why do you ask?"

"For no particular reason," said the Inspector. He was contemplating a large nickel pump that lay on a whatnot, like those chauffeurs use. His next question was addressed to the gendarme, who was still on his knees by the trunk.

"We have found one yellow stain on the neck. Have a look at the wrists and the calves of the legs and the stomach. But do it so as not to disturb the body." While the gendarme began to obey his chief's order Juve looked at the concierge again.

"Who did the work of this flat?"

"I did, sir."

Juve pointed to the velvet curtain that screened the door between the little anteroom and the room in which they were.

"How did you come to leave that curtain unhooked at the top without putting it to rights?"

Mme. Doulenques looked at it.

"It's the first time I've seen it so," she said apologetically. "Anyhow, it hasn't been like that long. M. Gurn was so seldom here I didn't do the place out thoroughly very often."

"When did you do it out last?"

"Quite a month ago."

"So M. Gurn went away a week after you last cleaned the place?"

"Yes, sir."

Juve pointed to the corpse.

"Tell me, madam, did you know that person?"

"I have never seen him before."

"And so, when he came up here you did not notice him?" said the Inspector gently.

"No," she declared. "And I wonder I didn't. People very seldom inquired for M. Gurn; of course when the lady was with him he was not at home to anybody. This—this man must have come straight up himself."

Juve was about to continue his questioning when the bell rang.

"Open the door," he said, and followed the concierge, partly fearing to find some intruder, partly hoping to see some unexpected person whose arrival might throw a little light upon the situation.

He saw a young man of about 25, with clear eyes and close-cropped hair. With an accent that made his British origin unmistakable, the visitor introduced himself as Mr. Woodland, manager of the Paris branch of the South Steamship Co.

"I am much obliged to you," said Juve. "Allow me to introduce myself: M. Juve, an inspector from the Criminal Investigation Department. Please come in."

Mr. Woodland entered; a side glance suddenly showed him the open trunk and the dead body, but not a muscle of his face moved. Mr. Woodland came of a good stock. He looked at the Inspector, waiting for him to begin.

"Kindly let me know the instructions your firm had with regard to forwarding the baggage you sent for this morning?"

"Four days ago, Inspector," said the young man, "on Dec. 14, the London mail brought us a letter in which Lord Beltham, a client of ours for several years, instructed us to collect on Dec. 17, that is, today, four articles marked H. W. K., 1, 2, 3 and 4, from M. Gurn's apartments, No. 147 Rue Levert. He informed us that the concierge had orders to allow us to take them away."

"To what address were you to dispatch them?"

"By the first steamer to Johannesburg, where our client would send for them; two invoices with the goods as usual; the third invoice to London, Box No. 63, Charing Cross Postoffice."

"Addressed to what name or initials?"

"Simply Beltham."

"Good. There are no other documents?"

"I have nothing else," said Mr. Woodland.

The young fellow relapsed into impassive silence. Juve watched him for a minute or two and then said:

"You must have heard rumors three weeks ago, sir, about Lord Beltham. He was a very well known personage. Suddenly he disappeared; his wife left nothing undone to give the matter the widest publicity. Were you not rather surprised when you received a letter from Lord Beltham four days ago?"

Mr. Woodland was not disconcerted by the embarrassing question.

"Of course I had heard of Lord Beltham's disappearance, but I am a business man, sir, not a detective. Lord Beltham might have disappeared voluntarily or the reverse; I was not asked to say which. When I got his letter I simply carried out his orders. I should do the same again."

"Are you satisfied that the order was sent by Lord Beltham?"

"Lord Beltham had been a client of ours for several years; we have had many similar dealings with him. This last order appeared entirely above suspicion." He took a letter out of his pocketbook and handed it to Juve. "Here is the order, sir; you can compare it with similar documents filed in our office. Is there any further occasion for me to remain here?"

Mr. Woodland was on the point of withdrawing when the detective stayed him. "Did you know Lord Beltham?"

"No, he always sent his orders by letter; once or twice he spoke over the telephone, but never came to our office."

"Thank you very much," said Juve, and Mr. Woodland withdrew.

With meticulous care Juve replaced every article he had moved. He shut the lid of the trunk, leisurely buttoned his overcoat and spoke to the gendarme.

"Stay here until I send a man." At the door he called the concierge. "Kindly go down before me, madame? Return to your lodge, and please do not say a word about what has happened to anyone whatever."

"You can trust me, sir." Juve walked away with head bowed in thought. There could be no doubt; the body in the trunk was that of Lord Beltham! Juve knew the Englishman quite well. Who was the mur-derer? "Everything points to Gurn," he thought, "and yet—about this murder, committed in the middle of Paris, in a crowded house where nobody heard or suspected anything, there is an audacity, a certainty of impunity, and a multiplicity of precautions, that are typical of Fantomas!" He clenched his fists as he repeated the name of that mysterious criminal. "Did Fantomas really commit this murder? And if he did, shall I ever succeed in learning the secret of that tragic room?"

CHAPTER VIII.

A Dreadful Confession.

WHILE Juve was devoting his skill and daring to the new case in Paris, at Beaulieu the whole machinery of the law was in motion for the discovery and arrest of Charles Rambert.

* * * * * * * *

With a mighty clatter and racket Bouzille came down the slope and stopped before old mother Chiquard's cottage. He was mounted upon a tricycle of prehistoric design, picked up for a song at some local market, unless some charitable person gave it to him. This tricycle was by no means the whole of his equipage. Attached by a stout rope was a wicker perambulator on four wheels, his "sleeping car." Stored away in it was his very primitive bedding, under which he often slept in the open air. Behind the sleeping-car was the restaurant car, an old soap box mounted on four solid wooden wheels. In this he kept his provisions, mixed up in agreeable confusion. Bouzille made quite long journeys in this train of his, and was well known throughout the southwest of France.

Old mother Chiquard had recognized the cause of the racket. The healthy life of the country had kept the old woman strong and active in spite of her 83 years, and she came to her door and hailed the tramp in threatening tones.

"So it's you, is it, you thief, you robber of the poor! What, do you want now, pray?"

Slowly and sheepishly Bouzille approached, looking out for a whack with the broom the old lady held.

"Don't be cross," he pleaded; "I want to come to an arrangement with you."

"That's all according," said the old woman. "Rascals like you always manage to do honest folk."

Mother Chiquard turned back into her cottage. Bouzille, without ceremony walked up to the hearth, where a scanty wood fire was burning, and put down his pack so as to be able to rub his hands more freely.

"Miserable weather, mother Chiquard!"

The obstinate old lady stuck to her one idea.

"If it isn't miserable to steal my rabbit, this is the finest weather that ever I saw!"

"You make a lot of fuss about a trifle," the tramp protested. "Your rabbit would have fetched a couple of shillings; I've brought two fowls worth 18-pence each. If you will give me some dinner I will put in a good morning's work for you."

It was 8 o'clock. The proposal represented four hours' work, but before striking the bargain she insisted on seeing the fowls. Extracted from the pack—tied together by the feet, and half suffocated, the unfortunate creatures were not much to look at, but they would be cheap.

"It's a go," she said. "Chop me some wood first, and then go down to the river for the rushes I put in to soak."

Bouzille, pleased at the prospect of a good dinner, opened the cottage door and arranged a few logs within range of the ax; mother Chiquard began to throw down some grain to the skinny and famished fowls that fluttered around her.

"I thought you were in prison, Bouzille," she said, "over stealing my rabbit, and that affair at the chateau of Beaulieu."

"Those are two quite different stories," Bouzille replied. "You mustn't mix them up together on any account. As for the chateau job, every tramp in the district has been run in: I was copped by M'sieu Morand the morning after the murder."

Mother Chiquard's former idea still dominated her mind.

"So they didn't punish you for stealing my rabbit?"

"Well, they did and they didn't," said Bouzille, scratching his head. "M'sieu Morand, an old friend of mine, took me to the lockup at Saint-Jaury, and that same night Sergt. Doucet shoved another man into the clink with me, a raving lunatic who started smashing everything up, and tried to tear my eyes out. The infernal row we made brought in the Sergeant, and he took me to one side and told me to hook it and not let him see me again."

While he was chattering Bouzille had finished his job. He gave a meaning wink and licked his tongue.

"I'll make the fire up, mother Chiquard; I'm getting jolly hungry."

"So you ought to be, at half past 11," the old woman replied. "We'll have dinner, and you can get the rushes out afterwards."

Mother Chiquard was the freeholder of a little cottage separated from the bank of the Dordogne by the high road between the Martel and Montvalent. She earned a little money by making baskets; but she was crippled with rheumatism, and was miserable every time she had to go down to the river to pull out the bundles of rushes that she put there to soak. Whoever wanted to make a friend of the old woman only had to volunteer to get the rushes out for her.

As he ate, Bouzille told mother Chiquard of his plans for the coming spring.

"Yes," he said, "since I'm not doing any time this winter I'm going to undertake a long journey." He stopped munching for a second and paused for greater effect. "I am going to Paris, mother Chiquard!"

"How long will it take you to get there?" inquired the old woman, immensely impressed.

"That depends. If I got run in on the way I couldn't say how long it would take."

The meal over, the old woman was washing up her dishes when Bouzille, who had gone down to the river to fetch the rushes, suddenly called shrilly.

"Mother Chiquard! Mother Chiquard! Come and look! I've earned 25 francs!"

The summons was so urgent, the news so amazing, that the old lady hurried to the river bank. She saw the tramp up to his waist in the water, trying, with a long stick, to drag out of the current a large object which was not identifiable at first glance. A few minutes later he emerged dripping from the water, towing a large bundle to the safety of the bank. Mother Chiquard drew nearer, greatly interested, and then recoiled.

Bouzille had fished out a corpse!

It was a ghastly sight: The body of a very young man, almost a boy, with long, slender limbs; the face was so swollen and torn as to be shapeless. One leg was almost entirely torn from the trunk. On the shoulders and back of the neck were bruises and stains of blood. Bouzille observed that there were large splinters of wood sticking in some of the wounds.

"I see what it is," he said, "he must have got caught in a mill wheel: That's what cut him up."

Mother Chiquard shook her head.

"Suppose it was a murder!"

"It's no good my looking at him any more," said Bouzille. "I don't recognize him; he's not from the country."

"That's sure," the old woman agreed. He's dressed like a gentleman."

The two looked at each other in silence. Bouzille was not nearly so complacent as he had been a few minutes before. The reward of 25 francs prompted him to go at once to inform the police; the idea of a crime disturbed him greatly. Another murder in the neighborhood would vex the authorities and put the police in a bad temper. He reached a sudden decision.

"I'll put him back into the water?"

But mother Chiquard stayed him.

"You mustn't; suppose somebody has seen us already? It would land us in no end of trouble!"

Half an hour later, convinced that it was his melancholy duty, Bouzille got astride his tricycle and slowly pedalled off towards Saint-Juary.

* * * * * * * *

New Year's day is melancholy and tedious for everybody whose public or private relations do not make it interesting. The alteration in the date, for one thing, is provocative of thought.

Juve, comfortably installed in his own private study, was realizing this just as evening was falling on this first of January. He was a confirmed bachelor, and lived in a little flat on the fifth floor of an old house in the Rue Bonaparte. He had not gone out today, but he was not idle. For a whole month he had been engrossed in the two cases on which he was engaged, the Beltham case and the Langrune case. The two were very similar, yet his instinct persuaded him they emanated from one hand. Convinced that he was dealing with a mysterious and dangerous individual he strove to give form and substance to the adversary. Fantomas! If Fantomas had a real existence, as the detective firmly believed, how was he spending New Year's day?

A bell startled him from his chair. He went himself to the door and took from a messenger a telegram:

"Have found in the Dordogne drowned body of young man, face unrecognizable, from description possibly Charles Rambert. Please consider situation and wire course you will take."

The telegram had been handed in at Brives by M. de Presles.

"Something fresh at last," the detective muttered. "I wonder if it really is Charles Rambert?"

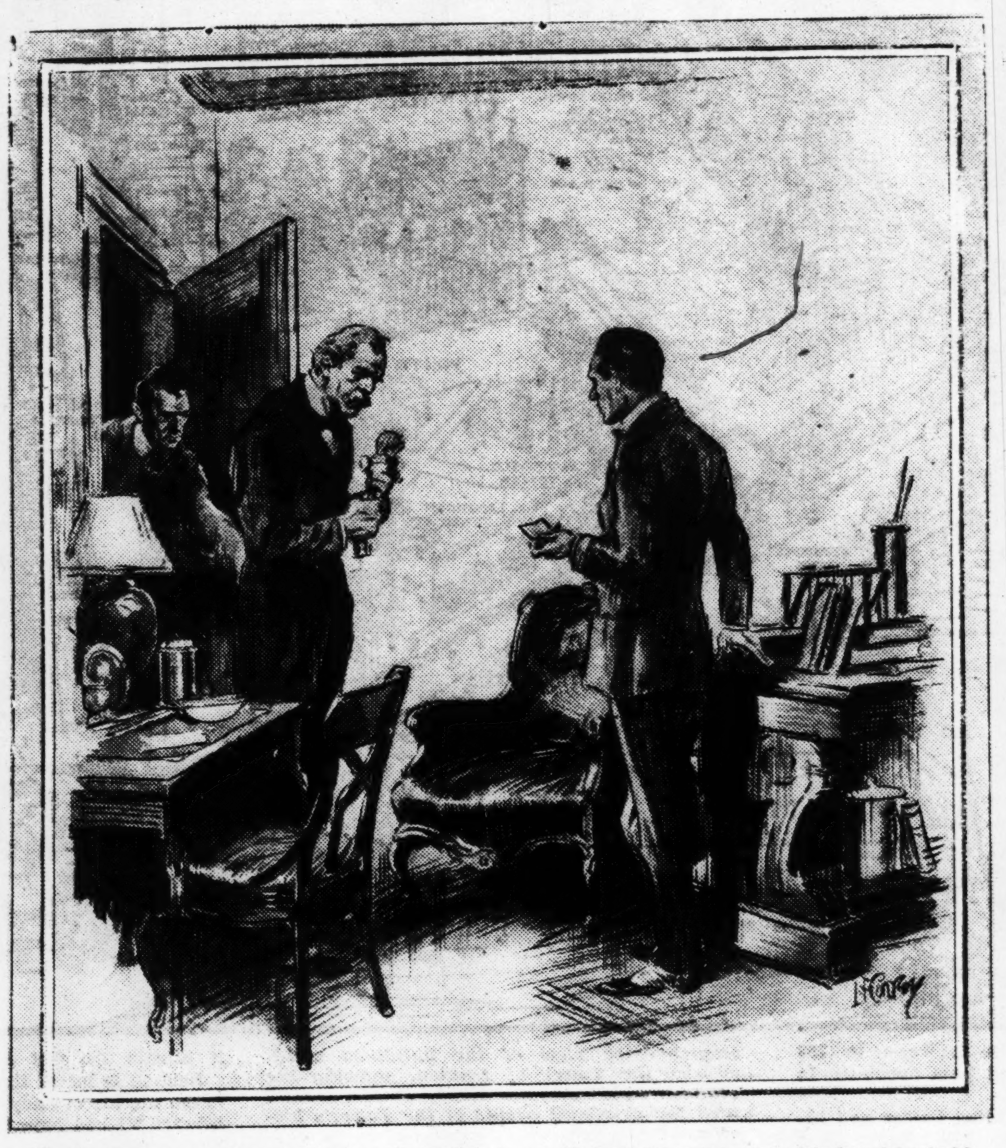
Since M. Etienne Rambert and his son had disappeared the detective had arrived at no conclusion which satisfied his judgment. This was a fresh development, and he was about to draft a reply when once more the bell rang sharply.

This time Juve listened while his man spoke to the visitor. It was an absolute rule of Juve's never to receive visitors at his flat. To all the entreaties of the caller, Juve's servant stolidly replied that his master would see no one; yet the visitor's insistence was so great that at last the servant brought in his card. Juve when he read the name, said:

"Bring him in at once!"

In a couple of seconds M Etienne Rambert was in the room!

The old gentleman who had fled mysteriously a few days before, taking with him the son over whom so dread a charge was hanging, bowed to the detective, with the pitiful mien of one who is crushed beneath the burden of misfortune. His features were drawn, his face bore the stamp of deepest grief, and in his hand he held an evening paper, which he had crumpled into a ball.



His features were drawn, his face bore the stamp of deepest grief and in his hand he held an evening paper, crumpled into a ball . . . "Why do you come to me?" said Juve. "To find out if that drowned corpse is—is my poor Charles!"

"Tell me, sir, if it is true,' he said. "I have just read that."

Juve took the paper and smoothing it out, read, below a large headline, "Is this a sequel to the Beaulieu Crime?" a story similar to that he had just gathered from M. de Presles' telegram.

Juve contemplated M. Etienne Rambert in silence for a few minutes, and then, without replying directly to his visitor, asked him a question in a voice the tonelessness of which concealed the least clew to his thoughts.

'Why do you come to me?"

"To find out," the old man answered.

"To find out what?"

"If that drowned corpse is—is my poor Charles!"

"It is rather you who can tell me," said Juve, impassive as ever.

There was a pause. Despite his emotion, M. Rambert seemed to be thinking deeply. Suddenly raising his eyes he spoke very slowly:

"Have pity, sir, on a broken-hearted father. I have a dreadful confession to make!"

Juve drew his chair close.

"I am listening," he said gently, and M. Etienne Rambert began his "dreadful confession."

CHAPTER IX.

All for Honor.

SOCIETY had mustered in force at the Cahors Law Courts, where the Assizes were about to be held. "The trial" was causing immense excitement. The principal figure in it, well known as a friend of one of the oldest families in those parts, was not merely a witness, but actually the defendant, although he had been admitted to bail in the interval by order of the court.

This courtroom at Cahors was small, but it was filled by a considerable and most select crowd. There was an air of melancholy about every person present, and it was obvious they were drawn by no mere curiosity, but by legitimate interest in the development of drama.

One of the leading heroines was pointed out with particular sympathy.

'That's Therese Auvernois in the first row! The President of the court gave her that seat; the officer who took the card of admission over to Querreles told me so."

"That's where Mme. de Vibray lives, isn't it?"

"Yes: She is sitting next to Therese now: That pretty woman in gray. Since Mme. de Langrune's death she has kept the child with her. President Bonnet, temporary guardian of Therese, is that tall, thin man talking to the steward, Dollon."

President Bonnet had been exchanging bows with every one in the courtroom whom he considered it flattering to himself to know; now he displayed his special knowledge by pointing out to Therese where the clerk sat, and the public prosecutor, and the jury, all much to the interest of the people near him; with one exception: A man dressed in black, his head buried in the huge collar of a traveling ulster, and dark glasses over his eyes, appeared to be vastly bored. Juve—it was he—knew too much about legal procedure to require explanations.

Suddenly a thrill ran through the room. M. Etienne Rambert had just walked in front of the witness box and close to a kind of rostrum in which Maitre Dareuil,

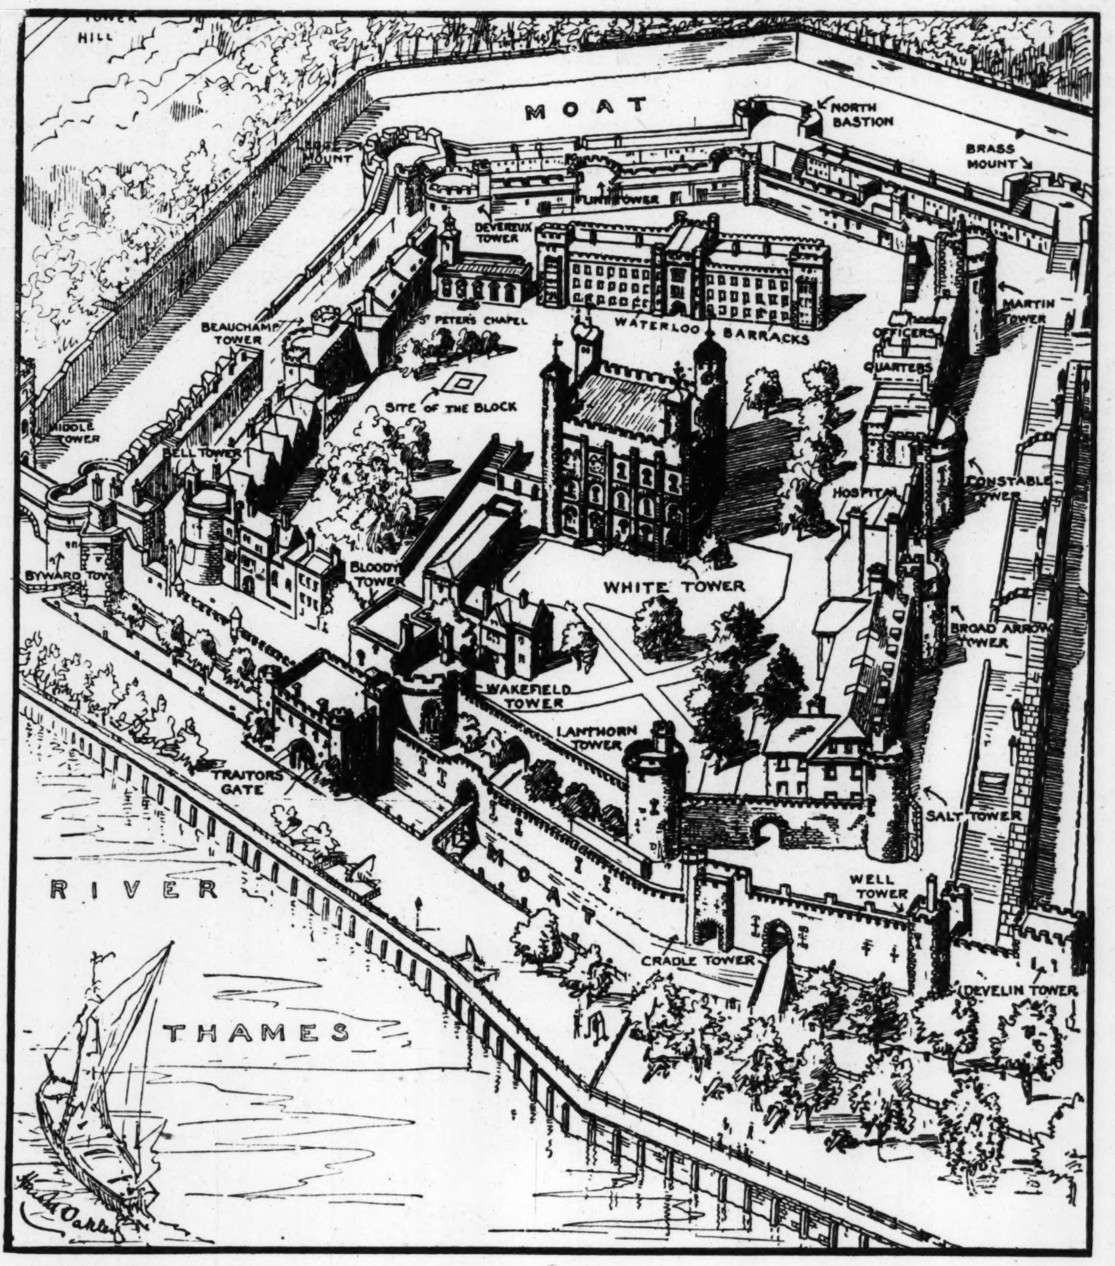
Ghosts of the Tower of London Watching New ☐ Arrivals Pass Under "Traitors' Gate" ☐

After 96 years, the grim old prison of the British metropolis has been reopened to admit political prisoners—A place where hundreds of persons of high and low degree, including three Queens of England, have met death on the axman's block, at the end of a noose, or at the stake—Sir Roger Casement's request to be hanged with a silken rope said to have been granted to a nobleman executed there centuries ago

LEGENDARY lore of England says that ghosts of the countless men and women whose lives have suddenly ended within the confines of the 2000-year-old Tower of London have walked about the cells, rooms and corridors of its buildings since it first began to be used as a political prison and place of execution back in the early centuries of England's history. If they still inhabit the old pile, their number bids fair to be increased, for the Tower again has been re-opened as a place of detention and punishment by death as a result of the war. Carl Hans Lody, the German spy, was executed there not many months ago, and recently its portals opened to receive Sir Roger Casement, the nobleman captured when trying to land arms in Ireland, who is the first person charged with high treason incarcerated there in nearly 100 years. Small wonder that the Tower attendants see these apparitions peering from the windows and over the walls, welcoming the newcomers to their midst.



Comprehensive view of the buildings which comprise the Tower of London, showing the "Traitors' Gate" and the Bloody Tower, around which the grimmest events of the Tower's history center. Note also the site of the executioner's block. The White Tower was the one used from time to time as a royal residence.

Many persons accused of treason have been incarcerated within those grim walls since they were erected centuries ago, and few of them ever left alive. Sir Roger anticipated that he, too, might pay the death penalty, as was indicated shortly after his imprisonment, when he grandiosely requested that he be hanged with a silken rope out of respect to his rank. There is a tradition that this boon was granted to the eccentric Lord Ferrers when he was hanged in the Tower in 1760 for the murder of a man who had been appointed to administer his estate.

Built, according to legend, by Julius Caesar and his Roman legionaries, further shaped by the Normans, and then partly torn down and rebuilt by succeeding generations of royal houses, the Tower has been used at various times as Royal Palace, fortress and prison. Its long history has been mainly a grisly one, for on a spot now marked by a stone three Queens of England and many other illustrious men and women have either laid their heads on the axman's block or dangled into eternity at the end of a rope. Three attempts have been made to blow it up and once it was in danger of being destroyed by fire, but it still stands, although for the last 96 years it has held no prisoners and has vied with Westminster Abbey as a mecca for tourists and sightseers.

What is known as the Tower of London really is a collection of buildings surrounded by walls, moats and battlements and fronting the River Thames. The buildings are in the form of two irregular squares, one within the other, the outer and inner squares respectively being termed the Outer and Inner Wards. The chief features of the entire plan are the famous White Tower, which rises commandingly above its fellows, and the Bloody Tower, whose associations are the grimmest of all of these ancient buildings.

The Bloody Tower is supposed to have derived its name from the murder of the two boy Princes, Edward V and his brother, the Duke of York, at the instigation of their infamous uncle, Richard III, the story of which has been immortalized by Shakspeare. The most authentic historical researches have it that three hired murderers crept into the boys' room while they lay in bed and smothered one of them to death and dispatched the other with a dagger; and that then they hid the bodies under a staircase, where the bones were discovered many years later and interred in Westminister Abbey.

One of the most tragic stories which had for its setting the Tower of London, is that surrounding the imprisonment, trial and death of Anne Boleyn, for whom Henry VIII cast aside the popular Katherine of Aragon. In time the King made a series of charges against the new Queen, naming, among others, four men, one of whom, on a promise of immunity, and after he had been barbarously tortured in the Tower—the rack being the most popular form of punishment in those times— made a confession upon which she was convicted. She wrote a letter to the King, protesting her innocence, but it is believed he never received it. Her last days were unutterably pathetic, although she kept up her spirits by constantly hoping for a pardon.

May 18, 1536, was the day fixed for the execution. The night of the seventeenth she spent in preparation. At 2 o'clock on the morning of the eighteenth, it is recorded she arose at 2 a. m., spent three hours in prayer and heard three masses, after which she received the last rites. Then, after conferences with her relatives and women retainers, she patiently awaited the end, remarking, says a writer of that time: "I have heard say the executioner is very good—I have a little neck."

But Anne's resignation was put to a still further test, for it was not until the morning of the nineteenth that she was warned her last moments were at hand. She was given a purse of 20 pounds, to be used in carrying out a strange custom of the early history of the Tower—that of the condemned persons distributing fees to the headsman or the hangman and his assistants. Finally, the Constable of the Tower knocked on her door and announced that the scaffold was ready.

Photograph of the ancient executioner's block and ax, still preserved in the Tower.

How her calm must have been shaken at the sight of the executioner! He was dressed, according to the fashion, in a tight-fitting suit of black, with a half mask covering the upper half of his face and a high, horn-shaped hat of black on his head. Two thousand persons lined the road from the White Tower to the scaffold, but the former King's favorite walked with a firm step and mounted the platform, on which was assembled a group of noblemen. She took a final leave of her women and made a short speech, declaring herself to be innocent of the charges on which she was condemned.

One of her women removed her ermine cape, the Queen herself removed her headdress. She was given a white cap with which to cover her hair and her eyes were blindfolded. Without much more ado, Anne knelt on the block. The executioner drew his sword and severed her head with a single blow. In accordance with one of the duties of the headsman, that official raised the head so that the crowd might view it; a cry of horror arose and several women fainted, for this was the first time that a Queen of England had met death in so cruel a form.

Another of Henry's consorts, Katherine Howard, was destined to meet the same fate. On Feb. 10, 1542, she was arrested and taken to the Tower on charges similar to those made against Anne Boleyn. Little is known of her last days, though it is said she met death calmly.

Next in order of the executions of the three Queens is the tragedy of Lady Jane Grey, whom the dying King Edward VI had been induced to name as his successor. She reigned but nine days, for through political machinations she found herself at the end of that time a prisoner in the Tower on a charge of treason. Imprisoned with her was her husband, Lord Guildford Dudley, who was the first of the two, after their conviction, to be led forth to execution. He had requested a final interview with his wife and it had been granted, but she declined to see him because "it would unnerve them both, and, moreover, they soon would be together again through Eternity." It is said she met a cart containing her husband's body, covered with a sheet, as she was marching to the scaffold.

Lady Jane's executioner, a historian says, was a gigantic fellow, seven feet tall, and in addition to his black garments was further disfigured by a headpiece ornamented with black horns. She burst into a fit of hysterical weeping at sight of him, but soon recovered her composure. After being blindfolded she groped about for the block, timidly asking, "Where is it?" A stander by guided her to it, whereupon she laid her head upon it, muttered "Lord, into Thy hands I commend my spirit," and an instant later the ax descended. A further atrocious feature of this execution was the fact that although her kin had influence at court her body was allowed to lie on the scaffold for several hours before being removed to a grave.

To this day guardsmen who patrol the gloomy pile tell visitors that the ghosts of these slain Queens still stalk about the corridors in the watches of the night.

To attempt to give a list of all the illustrious personages who have entered Traitors' Gate (the entrance to the Bloody Tower), never to return, the charges on which they were condemned and the manner of their deaths, would be impossible, for each is a story in itself. Sometimes hanging and decapitation as a means of punishment would be varied with burning at the stake—even women have met death in this form. Often the victims of the Tower would be drawn and quartered, and this is even known to have been done while the unhappy person was yet alive. Heads of traitors were placed on spikes on London bridge, as a warning, there to remain sometimes for months.

On the walls of some of the cells, where prisoners were kept in almost total and sometimes in total darkness, with insufficient clothing to protect them from the cold and dampness, barely enough food to keep them alive, and where they were harassed by rats, are to be seen today inscriptions which they carved into the stone. Generally these consist of well-known quotations, which tell plainly that the writers were awaiting the block or the noose. Some of them are names and dates, and much of the history of the Tower has been gleaned from these mute symbols of past incarcerations.

"Auntie Nastya," the New Catherine of Russia

She is the Grand Duchess Anastasia, wife of the Grand Duke Nicholas, who conquers Turks; sister of Italy's Queen and daughter of Montenegro's King—But she has a will of her own and it is the strongest in Petrograd

By GEORGE LENNART.

RUSSIA'S great war leader is a woman. The Grand Duchess Anastasia, wife of Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch, conqueror of the Turks in Asia, is the backbone of the Government, the driving power of the army, the idol of the people, the soul of the Russian body.

"Auntie Nastya," as the Russians call her, exercises a greater power than did Czarina Catherine II.

GRAND DUCHESS ANASTASIA arrived in Petrograd from the frosty Caucasus in January. As she drove from the Nicholaieff Railroad Station in a tempest of snow to the Winter Palace her sledge swerved and flung her with such force against a passing student that he fell senseless. Crowds, in passive Russian wise, gathered round and sheepishly looked on.

"Why don't you help?" rang out the Grand Duchess' sharp voice. And she took the coachman's whip and lashed the loungers. They helped.

This imperial way of bossing is nothing new to Petrograders. When the Grand Duchess' palace in Michael Place was burning down, no man had the courage to run in and rescue Nicholas Nicholaievitch's seals. Grand Duchess Anastasia ran in herself, and came out covered with soot, with the seals in her hand.

Grand Duchess Anastasia is the will behind the Czar's armies. She is also the brain; but that matters little—Russia has brains enough, but wills are rare. She concentrates in one firm hand all the powers which uninitiated romancers declare are monopolized by "Grand Ducal cliques," by spiritualists, by shady priests, like Grigor Rasputin.

Sister of Italy's Queen and daughter of Montenegro's King, Anastasia from the first resolved that the family connections should fight on Russia's side. Today "Auntie Nastya" appoints and dismisses Ministers, runs a munitions campaign, organizes volunteers, fights obstreperous peace fanatics and keeps the Slav idea alive.

Anastasia is a middle-aged lady, with the spirit and muscles of a 20-year-old girl. She was born in 1867, on a day when stout Prince Nicholas, her father, was out slaying Turks. There is a Slav proverb, rod na voinie pravit (who is born in wartime rules) and Grand Duchess Anastasia proves its truth.

Married in her teens to the Duke of Leuchtenberg, cousin of the Czar, a dull and dissipated man, she spent 17 years in sorrow, and then resolved to divorce him and marry Grand Duke Nicholas. The Holy Synod refused the divorce, all the more because Grand Duke Nicholas long before had secretly married Mme. Bourenine. Anastasia got the Under-Procuror of the Synod removed, and his successor arranged the divorce. Within four months Anastasia married Grand Duke Nicholas. Nicholas is rough, overbearing, he hates women, and he has the strongest will (among men) in Russia. Anastasia's will is just one degree stronger than that of Nicholas. On this queer basis deep love and respect are founded. There is no more devoted pair than Nicholas and Anastasia.

GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS NICHOLAIEVITCH, who has the strongest will in Russia—next to that of his wife.

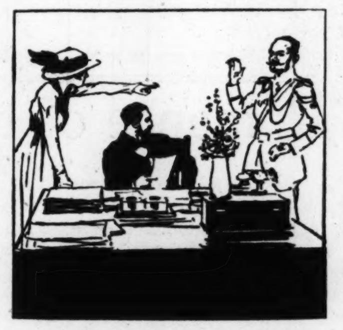
Grand Duchess Anastasia is the prophetess of the Slav cause. To her is due Nicholas' zeal; his resolution to stand by Servia in the Austro-Servian quarrel of 1914, his promises to Poland, his will to fight to the last.

Grand Duchess Anastasia's hatred of Austria is old. During a visit to her home at Cettigne, Anastasia drove to the modest building which serves as Ministry for Foreign Affairs. As she talked to the Minister, in came a lackey from the Austrian Legation, and bawled, "His Excellency the Austrian Minister wants you at once." That was then diplomatic etiquette at Cettigne. Furious, Anastasia declared that if her native land stood such humiliations she would leave it, and never return; and she so worked on the Minister of Foreign Affairs that he put the lackey out and sent to Austria's diplomat a message which made an earthquake at Vienna. Anastasia's dislike of Austria remains, and to this day she would forget all scores with Kaiser Wilhelm of she were only in a position to bid Austria's Foreign Minister "come along at once."

Since then Anastasia has been the backbone of the Moscow Pan-Slav organizations; it was she who sent 150 Russian officers to fight for Bulgaria in 1912; and it was she who more than anyone nerved Czar Nicholas to intervene in fateful July, 1914.

Grand Duchess Anastasia is Russia's one unswerving war-will. Other Russians agree that the war must be prosecuted, but Anastasia sees that it is prosecuted. To her is due the ammunition scandal. When Russia fell short of ammunition last spring, Minister of War Sukhomlinoff kept the fact to himself. He had told the Duma in January, 1915, that there were shells enough. The battle of Gorlice-Harnow proved the contrary. In vain Anastasia wrote to the Czar. Nothing was done. Anastasia flew to Petrograd, took a room in the Hotel Europe, and organized publicity. She summoned Duma members Alexeyenko, Petroff and others who might be counted on to make trouble; and gave them all the facts. The Duma members were to raise a big shell agitation and defy the censor. No bureaucrat would dare to touch them. An ultimatum was sent to Sukhomlinoff that the famine in shells must be divulged to the newspapers, or the Duma would divulge it itself. The facts were divulged and Sukhomlinoff was thrown out.

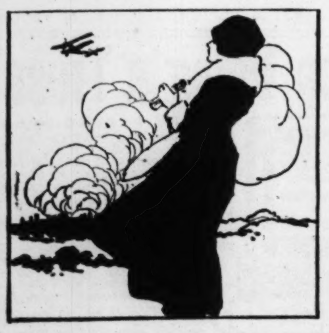
Anastasia heard that former Chief of Staff and Assistant War Minister Polivanoff two years before the war broke out had printed a pamphlet predicting that shells would be needed by the million. Sukhomlinoff had used his influence to prevent the pamphlet's publication. Grand Duchess Anastasia resolved that Polivanoff was the right man for War Minister. No copies of the pamphlet existed, but from a tattered manuscript Anastasia had new prints made and copies were sent to Czar Nicholas, to all Ministers, and to the Czar's influential courtiers Orloff, Denisoff and Voyeikoff. Nicholas II was made by her to see that Polivanoff alone had foreseen during peace the needs of a war; so he appointed Polivanoff.



"'Put that lackey out!' demanded Anastasia."

In shells and other items of equipment Russia's army is today well off. But Polivanoff could not work without Anastasia; the skilled workmen took no interest in shell making and could not be had. Anastasia arranged for workmen delegates to sit on the War Industrial Commissions and themselves exercise control. The flattered workmen volunteered by the thousand; and now every competent man in the Empire is busy making shells.

To diplomatic circles Grand Duchess Anastasia is the voice of Russia. Her coup with Polivanoff and the shells made her irresistible. Every Ambassador and Minister knows that through her things can be done which cannot be done through anyone else.



"Watches with composure a Turkish airman scattering bombs."

She is the first to hear when Russian offenses are needed by the allies in order to help the situation eleswhere; and she arranges the quid pro quo which Russia has to give in exchange for money and credit. In return Anastasia exacts agreements from the Western allies to keep in the field fixed numbers of men. In London, Paris and Rome Anastasia's hand is felt.

Grand Duchess Anastasia played a role in the supersession of her husband, Nicholas, as Commander-in-Chief. Astute Anastasia saw that the war would pass through another stage unfavorable for Russia; she expected Riga to fall, and she did not see why her husband should be made responsible for other's blunders. Nicholas himself wanted the change. The army had lost confidence in his Chief of Staff, Yanushkevitch, and Yanushkevitch could not be got rid of unless the Commander left with him.

Greater even than Anastasia's devotion to Russia and the Slav is her devotion to the husband who rescued her from the unsympathetic Leuchtenberg. The army loved and loves Nicholas. Three days before he departed the Grand Duchess arrived, put on a cavalryman's uniform and breeches, and rode with him along the front. The cheers killed the gun roar. "You will come back!" shouted the warriors to their commander. "He will!" shouted Anastasia. And many declare that in saving Russia Anastasia has big dynastic ambitions. Tough and rough Grand Duke Nicholas is the man to rule Muscovy in the coming time of storm, they say. Just now Grand Duchess Anastasia is fighting the Peace Party. Some people say that Anastasia herself raised the Peace Party for her own tactical aims. But the Peace Party had begun to grow. Thanks to Grand Duchess Anastasia, this party is now entirely squashed.

Grand Duchess Anastasia got in again with her friends the Liberals. She flatters the Radical Party of Prof. Miliukoff, promising a real constitution after victory. The peace men, she says, are all reactionaries; and they want peace today merely because they could then destroy what little constitution there is.

"Aunt Nastya," who so runs Russia, and so influences Russia's allies, is a middle-sized, dark-haired and yellow-faced woman, whose abilities and attractions are all inside. She is good-humored and fussy; and if she had not been born royal would have made a good manager for a summer hotel. She has all the accomplishments which the other daughters of King Nicholas of Montenegro possessed separately. She can ride as well as Queen Elena, who is the best horsewoman in Italy; and she can fence better than her sister Militsa, who 15 years ago bested all Petrograd's women fencers. She can play on six instruments; win at chess; and shoot with a revolver. She can walk 30 miles a day. She speaks Servian, Russian, English, French, Italian, German and modern Greek; and when the Albanian kingdom was established she set to learning Albanian "for amusement." She fears nothing on earth. Since Grand Duke Nicholas has commanded in the Caucasus, she has ridden around the Russian positions; twice got under fire; and once watched with composure a Turkish airman scattering bombs.

Sometimes Grand Duchess Anastasia blunders. She meddled disastriously in the quarrel which cost the able Gen. Ruzski his post as commander on the Petrograd front. She is fallible. But if Russia can produce 20 other individuals with her nerve, brain and ruthlessness, Russia will win. If Russia loses it will not be "Auntie Nastya's" fault.

IMPROVING NEGATIVES FOR PRINTING.

NEGATIVES which, from faulty development or other causes, are more or less imperfect in some parts may be considerably improved in many ways. For instance, suppose that the subject is one in which a heavy mass of foliage occurs in the foreground, together with a well-lit distance. Now in order to represent the distance correctly in the negative the foreground in many cases is almost entirely devoid of detail, and is shown in the print as a heavy black mass. In such a case, if the negative is coated (on the glass side) with matt varnish, containing a small amount of iodine dissolved in it (the quantity depending upon the circumstances of the case), heavy shadows in negative can be made to print much lighter and the result improved to a great extent. The varnish, after it is applied, will dry in a few minutes, and then over the parts not required to be lightened it is removed with a penknife or a piece of rag, moistened with a little methylated spirit or benzole. The same may be applied in the case of portraits and groups, only greater care is required in scraping away the varnish from the parts where it is not needed in order to prevent any marks from showing.

an old member of the Cahors bar, immediately took his place. M. Rambert was very pale, but by no means overwhelmed by the fatality overhanging him. He was a fine figure as he took his seat and passed his hand through his long white curls, raising his head in defiance of the inquisitive crowd.

Almost immediately after he had taken his seat a door was thrown open, the jury filed in, and a black-gowned usher shrilly called for silence.

"Stand up! Hats off, please! The Court!"

The Judges proceeded to their seats, the President formally declared the court open, and the clerk rose to read the indictment.

The clerk was a most excellent man, but modesty was his characteristic. He had few occasions to read an indictment as tragic as this present one, with the result that he lacked confidence. He read in a voice so soft that nobody in the body of the court could hear a word, and even the jury were obliged to make trumpets of their hands.

Etienne Rambert was only a few feet away; he did not miss a word, and it was evident that some passages in the indictment hit him very hard indeed. When the clerk finished he sat still, his forehead resting in his hands. The sharp, thin voice of the President snapped the chain of his thoughts

"Stand up, sir!"

Pale as death, Etienne Rambert rose and answered the preliminary questions. His name was Havre Paul Etienne Rambert; age, 59; occupation, merchant, owning and working rubber plantations in South America. Had he heard and understood the indictment which had just been read?

"I followed it all, sir," he replied. "I protest against some of the allegations, and the suggestion that I have failed in my duty as a man of honor and a father!"

The President of the court checked him irritably.

"Excuse me, I do not intend to permit you to extend the pleadings indefinitely." The unfeeling rudeness provoked no comment from the defendant, and the President proceeded. "You have heard the indictment. It charges you first with having aided and abetted the escape of your son, whom an inquiry had implicated in the murder of the Marquise de Langrune; and it charges you secondly with having killed your son, whose body has been recovered from the Dordogne, in order that you might escape the penalty of public obloquy."

At this brutal statement Etienne Rambert made a proud gesture of indignation.

"Sir," he exclaimed, "there are different ways of putting things. I do not deny the purport of the indictment, but I object to the summary that you present. No one has ever dared to contend that I killed my son in order to escape public obloquy. What the indictment is intended to allege, is that I wrought justice upon a criminal who ought to have filled me with horror but whom, nevertheless, I ought to have handed over to the public executioner."

This time it was the Judge's turn to be astonished.

"We will discuss your right to take the law into your own hands presently," he said, "but that is not the question now. Explain to the jury why you obstinately declined to speak to the examining magistrate?"

"I had no answer to make to the examining magistrate," Etienne Rambert answered, "because in my opinion he had no questions to put to me! The indictment charges me with having killed my son because I believed him to be guilty of the murder of Mme. de Langrune and would not hand him over to the gallows. I have never confessed to that murder, sir, and nothing will ever make me do so. I would not reply to the examining magistrate because, since the dreadful tragedy in my private life was exposed to public opinion, I desired that I should be judged by public opinion, which is not represented by you who are a professional Judge, but by the jury here who will shortly say whether I am really a criminal wretch; by the jury, many of whom are fathers themselves and, when they think of their own sons, will wonder what appalling visions must have passed through my mind when I was forced to believe that my own son had committed a cowardly murder! What sort of tragedy will they think that must have been for a man like me, with 60 years of honor and of honorable life behind him?"

The outburst ended on a sob, and the whole court was moved with sympathy, even the jury striving to conceal the emotion that stirred them.

The Judge addressed the defendant again.

"So that is why you stood mute during the inquiry, was it? I admire the interpretation you place upon your duty. It is—quaint!"

"I am quite sure, sir," Etiennt Rambert interrupted, "that there are plenty of people here who will understand and indorse what I did."

The declaration was so pointedly personal that the Judge took it up.

"And I am sure that people of principle will understand me when I have shown them your conduct as it really was. You have a predilection for heroics; it will not be without interest to bring things to the point. The moment you believed your son was the murderer, the moment you discovered the blood-stained towel which furnished circumstantial evidence of his guilt, you—the man of honor—never thought of handing over the culprit to the police, but only of securing his escape, and helping him to get away! You accompanied him in his flight, and so became in a sense his accomplice. I suppose you do not deny that?"

Etienne Rambert answered in ringing tones.

"If that was complicity on my part I will not deny it. You forget, sir, that when I first believed my son was the culprit—I was not his accomplice then, I suppose?—there was a bond between him and me that I could not possibly break. The duty of a father can never entail his giving up his son!"

A fresh murmur of sympathy through the court annoyed the Judge, who shrugged his shoulders.

"Let us leave empty rhetoric alone," he said. "It will be more advantageous to clear up the facts a little. Will you please tell me whether your son confessed to having murdered Mme. de Langrune, either during that night when you persuaded him to run away, or afterwards? Yes or no, please."

"I can't answer, sir. My son was mad! There was absolutely no motive to prompt him to the deed, and his mother is in an asylum! If he committed murder it was in a fit of temporary insanity! He is dead; I refuse to cover his memory with the stain of infamy!"

"In other words, Charles Rambert did confess, but you don't want to say so."

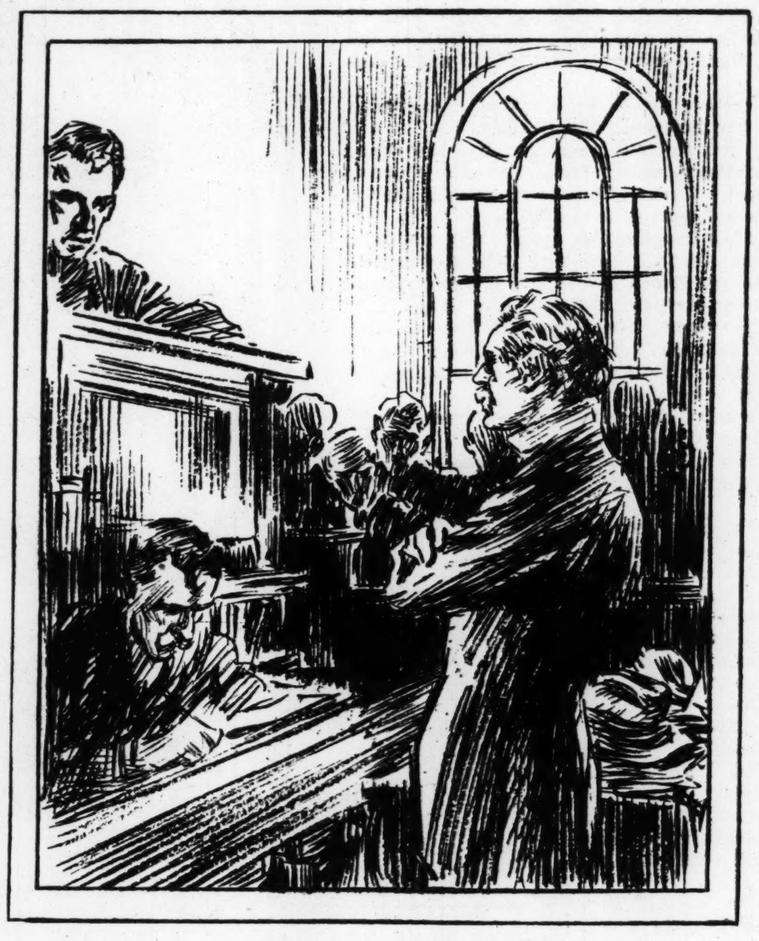
"I do not say he did confess."

"You leave it to be inferred."

Etienne Rambert made no reply, and the Judge passed on to another point.

"What exactly did you do after you left the chateau?"

"What anyone does when he runs away. We wandered miserably about through fields and woods, I accusing him and he defending himself. We avoided the villages and walked quickly, wishing to get as far away as possible. We spent the most frightful time it is possible to conceive."



Pale as death, Etienne Rambert rose and answered the preliminary questions.

"How long was all this?"

"I was with my son for four days."

"So it was on the fourth day that you killed him?"

"Have pity! I did not kill my son. It was a murderer that I had with me, a murderer for whom the police were hunting and for whom the guillotine was waiting!"

"A murderer, if you prefer it so," said the Judge, "but you had no right to assume the functions of executioner. Come, you admit you did kill him?"

"I do not admit it."

"Do you deny that you killed him?"

"I did what my duty told me to do!"

"Still the same story!" said the Judge, angrily drumming his fingers on the desk. "You refuse to answer. But even in your own interests you must have the courage to adopt some definite theory. Well, would you have been glad if your son had taken his own life?"

"May I entreat you to remember that my son is dead!" Etienne Rambert said once more. "I can't say that I desired his death. I don't even know now if he was guilty. I can only remember now that Charles was not in his right mind, and that he was the son of my loins!"

Again a tremor of emotion passed through the court, and again the Judge made an angry gesture ordering silence.

"So you decline to answer any of the principal points of the indictment? Well, can you let us know any of the advice you gave your son? If you had no intention of killing him, what did you want?"

"Oblivion," said Etienne Rambert, more calmly this time. "I implored him to think of the life that was before him, and I urged him to disappear forever."

"Ah, you did recommend him to commit suicide?"

The President feigned to be occupied with his notes, purposely giving time for the importance of the last admission to sink into the minds of the jury. Then he asked abruptly:

"You were surprised to hear of his death?"

"No," said Rambert dully.

"How did you part from each other?"

"The last night we slept out of doors under a stack; it was by the bank of the Dordogne. When I woke I was alone. He—my son—had disappeared. I know no more."

The Judge sprang a question, like a trap, to catch him lying.

"If you knew no more, how was it that a few days later you called on Inspector Juve and asked him at once what was known about the dead body of your son? The body had only been recovered within the previous hour or two, and the newspapers only suggested the identity, with the utmost reserve. But you knew that the corpse was that of your son! How?"

The defendant turned to the jury.

"Gentlemen," he cried, "this is torture! You know quite enough to form your judgment of me! Form it now! I can answer no more questions!"

There was, however, one more thrill of interest for the public. The Judge had explained that he deemed it unnecessary to call the detective Juve, inasmuch as all the information he had to give was already detailed in the long indictment, but as Mme. de Langrune's granddaughter was present in court, he would exercise his discretion and request her to answer one or two questions. And, much taken aback by this unexpected publicity, Therese Auvernois followed the usher to the witness box.

"Mlle. Therese Auvernois, you recognize M. Rambert? Do you identify him as the person whose conversation with young Charles Rambert you overheard on that fatal night at the chateau of Beaulieu?"

"Yes, sir, that is M. Etienne Rambert."

"Will you please tell us anything you know that has any bearing upon the charge brought against the defendant of having killed his son?"

"I can only say one thing, sir: That M. Rambert was talking to his son in tones of such terrible distress that I knew his heart was broken."

"That is enough, mademoiselle. Thank you," and while Therese was going to her seat the Judge announced that there was no other witnesses to be heard, and called upon the Public Prosecutor.

That personage's harangue introduced no new features. He relied upon his law rather than his facts.

To him succeeded counsel for the defendant, whose speech was brevity itself. He simply asked the jury whether the defendant had not acted as any high-principled father would act when he discovered that his son had committed a crime during a fit of insanity.

The Judges withdrew, the jury retired, and Etienne Rambert was removed between two warders.

President Bonnet opined that Etienne Rambert had blundered in refusing to put up any defense. Dollon was of another opinion. According to him Etienne Rambert was a sport of fate, deserving pity rather than severity. The only point on which all were unanimous was their sympathy with the defendant.

A bell rang sharply; grave and impassive, the jury returned, the Judges filed into their seats, Etienne Rambert was led back by the warders. The foreman of the jury spoke:

"In the presence of God and of man, and upon my honor and my conscience I declare that the answer of the jury is 'no' to all the questions put, and that is the answer of them all."

It was acquittal!

The Romance of the Demountable Auto Rim

mitted, "The patent is alleged to cover all forms of automobile rims using wedges between the rim and felly, holding the rim in its operative position on the wheel. If this is true, the patent would cover practically all forms of demountable rims."

It WAS true. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals upheld Perlman and declared that the Standard Welding Co. was infringing on his patent. They were making 12,000 demountable rims a day. An injunction stopped that. They appealed—and lost. This was on Feb. 15 last.

Perlman had come into his own in 1916; the patent was filed in 1906, a whole decade before!

The rest is soon told. With clear sailing ahead Perlman had no difficulty in getting down to business. On March 16 his company was incorporated, after he had refused $750,000 a year for the use of his patent and a cash bonus of more than $1,000,000, with the remark: "I never was a wall flower and don't intend being one now." J. S. Bache & Co., financed the deal, and W. C. Durant, the genius of the big-meloned General Motors Co., went in. The rest was easy. The $3,000,000 was paid in by J. S. Bache & Co., and two plants were bought, ready to work, one at Jackson, Mich., and the other at Utica, N. Y.

Perlman is by no means the first man whom a single idea at the basis of the vast automobile manufacturing industry has raised to affluence. Only the other day the New Jersey courts awarded $1,000,000 to a man who devised a great improvement in a standard and well-known magneto, that instrument which supplies the current used to form the ignition spark.

Then there is the case of Louis Enricht, whose "green gasoline" made a sensation all over the country recently. It will be remembered that he mixed a small quantity of a green substance, costing a cent and a half, with a gallon of water, put the mixture in the tank of an automobile, and with this fuel, according to witnesses, did the work of a gallon of gasoline in driving the car.

The ingredients of the mixture were kept a secret, and this secret was bought a few days ago by a representative of the Maxim Munitions Co. for a sum estimated to be $1,000,000 in cash and 100,000 shares of stock.

over to the station. I told 'em at home I was going to spend the day with Susie Adams. It was a story, I guess, but I don't care. And I came to New York on the train, and I met Mr. —Mr. Flip on the street and asked him if he knew where I could find G—G"——

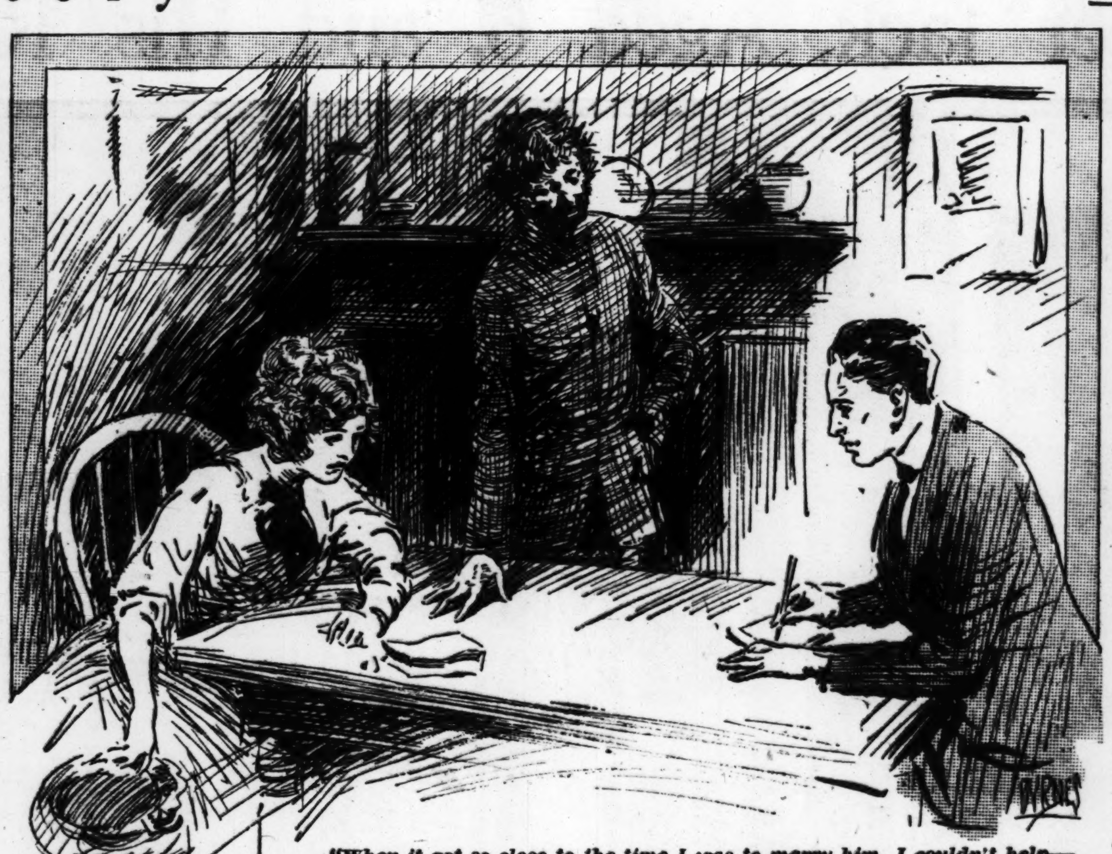
"Now, Miss Lowery," broke in Tripp, loudly and with much bad taste, I thought, as she hesitated with her word, "you like this young man, Hiram Dodd, don't you? He's all right and good to you, ain't he?"

"Of course I like him," said Miss Lowery, emphatically. "He's all right, And, of course, he's good to me. So is everybody."

I could have sworn it myself. Throughout Miss Lowrey's life all men would be good to her. They would strive, contrive, struggle and compete to hold umbrellas over her hat, check her trunk, pick up her handkerchief and buy for her soda at the fountain.

"But," went on Miss Lowery, "last night I got to thinking about G—George, and I"——

Down went the bright gold head upon her dimpled, clasped hands on the table. Such a beautiful April storm! Unrestrainedly she sobbed. I wished I could have comforted her. But I was not George. And I was glad I was not Hiram—and yet I was sorry, too.



"When it got so close to the time I was to marry him, I couldn't help—thinking about George."

By-and-by the shower passed. She straightened up, brave and half-way smiling. She would have made a splendid wife, for crying only made here eyes more bright and tender. She took a gumdrop and began her story.

"I guess I'm a terrible hayseed," she said between her little gulps and sighs, "but I can't help it. G—George Brown and I were sweethearts since he was 8 and I was 5. When he was 19—that was four years ago—he left Greenburg and went to the city. He said he was going to be a policeman or a railroad president or something. And then he was coming back for me. But I never heard from him any more. And I—I—liked him."

Another flow of tears seemed imminent, but Tripp hurled himself into the crevasse and dammed it. Confound him, I could see his game. He was trying to make a story of it for his sordid ends and profit.

"Go on, Mr. Chalmers," said he, "and tell the lady what's the proper caper. That's what I told her—you'd hand it to her straight. Spiel up."

I coughed, and tried to feel less wrathful toward Tripp. I saw my duty. Cunningly I had been inveigled, but I was securely trapped. Tripp's first dictum to me had been just and correct. The young lady must be sent back to Greenburg that day. She must be argued with, convinced, assured, instructed, ticketed and returned without delay. I hated Hiram and despised George; but duty must be done.

Noblesse oblige and only five silver dollars are not strictly romantic compatibles, but sometimes they can be made to jibe. It was mine to be Sir Oracle, and then pay the freight. So I assumed an air that mingled Solomon's with that of the general passenger agent of the Long Island Railroad.

"Miss Lowery," said I, as impressively as I could, "life is rather a queer proposition, after all." There was a familiar sound to these words after I had spoken them, and I hoped Miss Lowrey had never heard of Mr. Cohan's song. "Those whom we first love we seldom wed. Our earlier romances, tinged with the magic radiance youth, often fail to materialize." The last three words sounded somewhat trite when they struck the air. "But those fondly cherished dreams," I went on, "may cast a pleasant afterglow on our future lives, however impracticable and vague they may have been. But life is full of realities as well as visions and dreams. One cannot live on memories. May I ask, Miss Lowrey, if you think you could pass a happy—that is, a contented and harmonious life with Mr.—er—Dodd—if in other ways than romantic recollections he seems to—er—fill the bill, as I might say?"

"Oh, Hi's all right," answered Miss Lowery. "Yes, I could get along with him fine. He's promised me an automobile and a motor boat. But somehow, when it got so close to the time I was to marry him, I couldn't help wishing—well, just thinking about George. Something must have happened to him or he'd have written. On the day he left, he and me got a hammer and chisel and cut a dime in two pieces. I took one piece and he took the other, and we promised to be true to each other and always keep the pieces till we saw each other again. I've got mine at home now in a ring box in the top drawer of my dresser. I guess I was silly to come up here looking for him. I never realized what a big place it is."

And then Tripp joined in with a little grating laugh that he had, still trying to drag in a little story or drama to earn the miserable dollar that he craved.

"Oh, the boys from the country forget a lot when they come to the city and learn something. I guess George, maybe, is on the bum, or got roped in by some other girl, or maybe gone to the dogs on account of whisky or the races. You listen to Mr. Chalmers and go back home, and you'll be all right."

Unrestrainedly, she sobbed. I wished I could have comforted her.

But now the time was come for action, for the hands of the clock were moving close to noon. Frowning upon Tripp, I argued gently and philosophically with Miss Lowery, delicately convincing her of the importance of returning home at once. And I impressed upon her the truth that it would not be absolutely necessary to her future happiness that she mention to Hi the wonders or the fact of her visit to the city that had swallowed up the unlucky George.

She said she had left her horse (unfortunate Rosinante) tied to a tree near the railroad station. Tripp and I gave her instructions to mount the patient steed as soon as she arrived and ride home as fast as possible. There she was to recount the exciting adventure of a day spent with Susie Adams. She could "fix" Susie—I was sure of that—and all would be well.

And then, being susceptible to the barbed arrows of beauty, I warmed to the adventure. The three of us hurried to the ferry, and there I found the price of a ticket to Greenburg to be but a dollar and eighty cents. I bought one, and a red, red rose with the 20 cents for Miss Lowery. We saw her aboard her ferryboat and stood watching her wave her handkerchief at us until it was the tiniest white patch imaginable. And then Tripp and I faced each other, brought back to earth, left dry and desolate in the shade of the somber verities of life.

The spell wrought by beauty and romance was dwindling. I looked at Tripp and almost sneered. He looked more careworn, contemptible and disreputable than ever. I fingered the two silver dollars remaining in my pocket and looked at him with the half-closed eyelids of contempt. He mustered up an imitation of resistance.

"Can't you get a story out of it?" he asked huskily. "Some sort of a story, even if you have to fake part of it?"

"Not a line," said I. "I can fancy the look on Grimes' face if I tried to put over any slush like this. But we've helped the little lady out, and that'll have to be our onl reward."

"I'm sorry," said Tripp almost inaudibly. "I'm sorr you're out your money. Now, it seemed to me like find of a big story, you know—that is, a sort of thin that would write up pretty well."

"Let's try to forget it," said I, with a praiseworth attempt at gayety, "and take the next ca 'cross town."

I steeled myself against his unexpressed but palpable desire. He should not coax, cajole or wring from me the dollar he craved. I had had enough of that wild-goose chase.

Tripp feebly unbuttoned his coat of the faded pattern and glossy seams to reach for something that had once been a handkerchief deep down in some obscure and cavernous pocket. As he did so I caught the shine of a cheap silver-plated watch chain across his vest, and something dangling from it caused me to stretch forth my hand and seize it curiously. It was the half of a silver dime that had been cut in halves with a chisel.

"What!" I said, looking at him keenly.

"Oh, yes," he responded dully. "George Brown, alias Tripp. What's the use?"

Barring the W. C. T. U. I'd like to know if anybody disapproves of my having produced promptly from my pocket Tripp's whisky dollar and unhesitatingly laying it in his hand?

THE END.

Ghosts of the Tower of London

It was in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, whose appellation of "Good Queen Bess" seems in some ways to have been ironically bestowed, that the Tower reached the height of its usefulness in disposing of enemies of both herself and the State. The Queen herself knew something of its horrors, for she had been placed there by her sister Mary Tudor, the previous Queen, because she was about to contract a marriage to which Mary objected. Among other persons of high and low degree, the Tower, throughout Elizabeth's reign, was kept filled with priests and prelates who refused to take the oath of supremacy. Few of them ever emerged.

But probably the most important of the prisoners which the prison contained while Elizabeth was on the throne was Sir Walter Raleigh, who aroused her anger by marrying one of her maids-of-honor. This was not only a crime in itself, in the Queen's eyes, but it is declared that the Queen herself had a considerable personal weakness for the bridegroom. He obtained his release through the art of flattery and by indicting the following letter to her. Note the language and then consider that Elizabeth was then 60 years old and described as bony and angular, her hair false, her face liberally wrinkled and smothered with grease paint:

"I was wont to behold her riding like Alexander, hunting like Diana, walking like Venus, the gentle wind blowing her fair hair about her pure face like a nymph, sometimes sitting in the shade like a goddess, sometimes singing like an angel, sometimes playing like Orpheus."

Sir Walter was to return to the Tower, however, in the time of James I, Elizabeth's successor. After many years' incarceration he was beheaded for participation in a conspiracy against the throne.

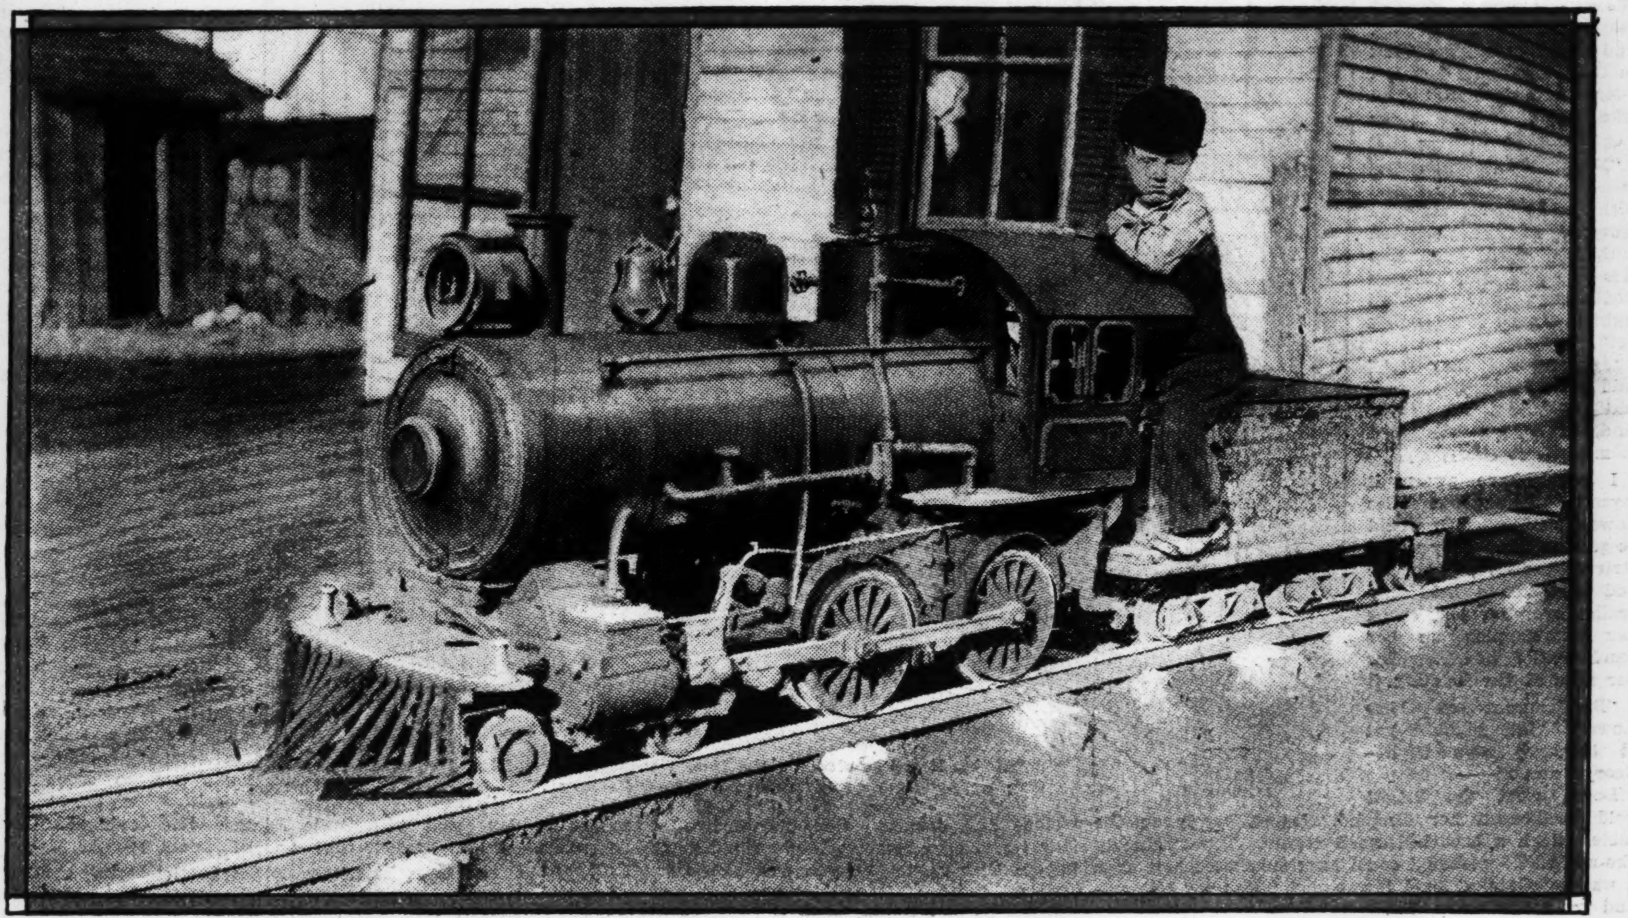
Putting aside the number of Elizabeth's victims, it must be remembered that they were not, as in Mary's time, justly accused rebels and usurpers, but almost in the majority of cases priests and laymen whose worst crime was in worshipping in the way they thought best, or honest gentlefolk who had dared to marry for love instead of at the will of their imperious Queen for reasons of State. History records that two years before Elizabeth's death, Hentzer, the German traveler, counted no fewer than 300 heads set up on London bridge, and many more spiked about the Tower.

In Oliver Cromwell's time, too, the Tower was seldom empty, due to the many plots against the life of this "uncrowned king," which made his incumbency a veritable reign of terror. One of the best instances afforded of the atrocious things done within the Tower was the treatment of the body of Syndercombe, who tried twice to kill Cromwell and was finally betrayed. On the night before he was to be hanged and quartered Syndercombe obtained poison from his sister and asked his five attendants to leave the room, so that he might say his prayers alone. They considerately left, whereupon he cheated the hangman's noose by several hours.

Then, wrote a chronicler of the time, Syndercombe's disfigured corpse was dragged at a horse's tail from the Tower to the Place of the Scaffold on Tower Hill and "a hole being digged, he was turned in, stark naked, and a stake spiked with iron was driven through him into the earth; that part of the stake which remains above ground being all plated with iron, which may stand as an example of terror to all traitors for the time to come."

The history of the Tower is but a repetition of the instances given down to 1820, but even these, at that late day, were wanting none of the revolting features of their predecessors. Five men, Thistlewood, Davidson, a negro; Tidd, Ings and Brunt were hanged May 1 of that year upon conviction of high treason growing out of the famous "Cato Street Conspiracy." They all made a show of vulgar heroism on the scaffold, Tidd dancing a jig and Thistlewood exclaiming theatrically, "We shall soon know the great secret." The executions took place at 8 o'clock in the morning and the bodies were left hanging for an hour. They were then cut down by a man wearing a crepe mask and placed in coffins, with the heads hanging over the edge on to a high wooden block. The executioner's assistant then cut off the heads and handed them one by one to his chief, who held up each to the crowd, calling out in accordance with custom, "This is the head of a traitor." The heads were then placed in the coffins with the bodies and buried in a common burial ground for felons.

Engineer Jack, Aged 6, and His Railroad



JACK CRANEY, six years old, of St. Joseph, Mo., enjoys the distinction, it is believed, of being about the youngest locomotive engineer in the world. Jack operates a miniature steam engine that is an exact counterpart of big ones that pull long strings of cars on the railroads, and it pulls cars, too. His train is made up of open cars and transportation is limited to children under 12 years old, for the young engineer does not believe in overloading. He is engineer, fireman, brakeman and conductor, and the price of a ride is 5 pins.

Jack's train is not operated upon a regular schedule. It does what is generally termed an "excursion business," making trips only as occasion demands. The railroad upon which it operates is built of steel rails and the line extends the full length of the lot upon which the lad's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Craney, have their home, a distance of 120 feet.

The boy has been running the locomotive ever since he was four years old. He was taught by his father, who is a retired railroad engineer. The engine is four feet high, and is 10 feet long, including the tender. The gauge is only 18 inches.

There are 14 cars in the road's equipment, but the young magnate seldom presses more than two of them into service. The engine, cars and track were for years part of a concession at Lake Contray Park, four miles from St. Joseph, and when the amusement company went out of business, the elder Craney bought the outfit for his little boy, because, as he said, the youngster always had had a hankering after engines.

Jack's railroad does not operate during the winter season. He reopened the line for the summer season just the other day. He proceeded to fire up the locomotive, using anthracite, and soon the steam began to sizzle.

"I'll be ready to go soon as I work the injector," he exclaimed.

"What's the injector?" inquired a visitor.

"Why, that's what lets the water into the boiler," was the prompt reply. "It's fixed now."

Then Jack clanged the bell, loosened the brakes, tooted the whistle, called "'Board!" and the tiny train was off to the front yard "depot," a large goods box with one side out. As the train rolled up to the station half a dozen youngsters of the neighborhood jumped out of the box and boarded the trailers for the return trip, first forking over five pins each to the one-boy crew.

Jack is popular with all the little boys and girls in the summer season. The road's earnings last summer were sufficient to provide his family with pins to do for 10 years.
